Miss Robinson Smith was the prime mover behind the establishment of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival in 1934, and the organization's only president. The Berkshire organization first hired the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky as conductor, to give concerts here in 1936 at Holmwood, now the Foxhollow School, after operating the Festival for two years in an open horse show ring at the Dan Hanna Farm in Interlaken, now the Stockbridge School.

Built $100,000 Shed

The following year, when the Festival moved to Tanglewood, the Berkshire Symphonic Festival launched a drive for $100,000 to build the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Berkshire County residents gave a total of $57,724, of which $34,460 came from the summer residents of Lee, Lenox, Great Barrington, Pittsfield, Stockbridge and Williamstown. Festival trustees alone donated $36,110 of the total amount raised. Eighty-one per cent of the money collected came from donors within 50 miles of Stockbridge.

After the first Shed concerts in the summer of 1938, the Festival showed a profit which was divided between the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival, marking the first time the BSO had received any sum over and above the regular fee.

Split $51,886 Profit

Before the outbreak of World War II, the Festival season in 1941 set a new attendance record at Tanglewood up to that time, and the net income of $51,886.83 was split between the Festival and BSO.

In 1945 the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. ended its joint operation with the BSO at Tanglewood and gave to the Boston Symphony trustees the Music Shed. Since that time the Berkshire organization had been inactive, except for sponsoring the publication of a book, giving the history of the Festival, titled "Music Under the Moon," by John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of The Eagle.

Last month the trustees of the Festival voted to dissolve before Dec. 31, 1956, and wrote into the final record their "expression of appreciation and gratitude to Gertrude Robinson Smith, the president, for her imagination and foresight in organizing and establishing this great Festival, and for leading the Berkshire community to a richer cultural and economic life."

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

AUG 4 1956

Bernstein Conducts In Berkshires Tonight

Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The Berkshire Festival concert is in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. As one of the most illustrious pupils of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony, Mr. Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist. Regularly he heads the department of orchestra and conducting at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, and, this summer, is on leave of absence.

[222]

B. Eagle. Aug. 4

Bernstein To Conduct

Memorial to Koussevitzky At Festival Shed Tonight

TANGLEWOOD—Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium of the Music Shed tonight in his only appearance of the season with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tonight's concert will be in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who for 25 years was conductor of the BSO. Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the late conductor, Dr. Koussevitzky, has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940—as composer, conductor and pianist. This summer he has been on leave as head of the department of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

Mozart's Mass

Mr. Bernstein has scheduled for tonight two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: The Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor, with the Festival chorus of the Music Center students, who have been trained by Hugh Ross, assisted by Lorna Cooke de Varon. Soloists will be Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

In his 25 years as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra the late Serge Koussevitzky often conducted performances of Mozart's music and it was he who conceived the idea of the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians which now traditionally precede the four weeks of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony was given its premiere American performances under Dr. Koussevitzky's direction in November, 1945. By coincidence, when the score of the symphony arrived in this country, it turned out to be written on music manuscript paper which had been sent to Russia during the war by Dr. Koussevitzky when it became known that there was a shortage in Russia of such paper.

The three vocal soloists in the portion of Mozart's Mass which will be sung are all former students at the Berkshire Music Center who have since gone on to distinguished careers in the concert and operatic fields. Miss Curtin was a student at Tanglewood in 1946, 1948 and 1951; Miss Alberts studied there in 1941, 1946, 1947, 1950 and 1951, and Mr. McCollum was a student in the opera department in 1952 and 1953.

During the past season Mr. Bernstein has added to his many and varied activities that of television personality. His several appearances during the year on the "Omnibus" program were hailed enthusiastically by both press and public. He currently is completing work on two musicals which will be produced on Broadway in the fall. One is an opera, with libretto by Lillian Hellman, based upon Voltaire's "Candide." The other is called "East Side Story."

Tanglewood Premiere

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Munch returns to the podium in a concert which will bring the eminent violinist Zino Francescatti to the stage of the Shed as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto. Dr. Munch will begin the concert with the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with the Symphony No. 2 in C Major by Schumann, performed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death, July 29, 1856.

Mr. Francescatti, who lives in near-by Monterey, can trace a direct line of violin tradition from the legendary Paganini—his first teacher was his father who had studied violin with Sivori, who in turn had been the only direct pupil of Paganini. At five Francescatti made his first public appearance. At ten he created a profound impression in the Beethoven Concerto. At twenty he made his formal debut with an orchestra in Paris. Before coming to the United States in 1939, he was already famous throughout Europe and South America. His violin is the famous "Hart" Stradivarius, dated 1727, which is one of the finest examples of the great violin maker's art.

TOMORROW'S SOLOIST at the Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Dr. Charles Munch conducting, will be Zino Francescatti, who will play Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto. Mr. Francescatti, a summer resident of Monterey, is donating his services to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund Wednesday evening in a chamber music recital in the Theater Concert Hall, Tanglewood.

Petrovec

STROLLING about the Tanglewood grounds following rehearsals this morning are Leonard Bernstein, former pupil of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who will conduct the BSO at tonight's concert in memory of the late musical director of the orchestra, and Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky, widow of the famed conductor and founder of the Berkshire Music Center.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 4 1956

DE CARVALHO BRILLIANT AT TANGLEWOOD

Presents Exciting Concert; Wife Makes Her North American Debut

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 3—There have been, during this season, some very fine concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, but tonight we heard the most exciting concert to date. The conductor was the Brazilian genius Eleazar De Carvalho, who has not been here since five years ago when he was a student here. The soloist was his wife, Jocey De Oliverira, pianist, who was making her North American debut.

Colorful Performance

Listening to the playing tonight, we got the impression that just for a little while, Mr. Carvalho had gotten the members of the Boston Symphony to almost believing they were South Americans. For sheer color, rhythmic excitement and magnificent rhythms, they turned in performances which caught the audience as few others have this season.

The program opened with a stunning performance of "La Kermesse" from the ballet of the same name by Henry Barraud. He is a Frenchman, born in Bordeaux. The work is of the kind which rolls along at relentless pace, taking in all the resources of the orchestra on the way.

When someone like Carvalho undertakes to bring to the North American audiences dances from "The Three Cornored Hat" by De Falla, the result can be a triumph for both orchestra and conductor. So it was tonight. From the first suave, insinuating dance, to the last note of the brilliant, rhythmically exciting finale, Mr. Carvalho made his orchestra sing, speak, and shout to the intense enthusiasm of the audience.

Miss Oliverira, handsomely gowned in scarlet, chose to make her North American debut in the Ravel piano concerto. This work gave her ample opportunity to reveal her technical abilities, which are very considerable, and her interpretive gifts, equally considerable. She has a flexible technique, no great forcefulness, but her intelligent approach makes up for such deficiency. In the lengthy solo in the second movement, she revealed an ability to color phrases expressively and her tone, always pure, stood out against orchestral accompaniment. In the final presto, she lacked the power to make the sheer brilliance of the piano stand out, but it was playing so clean, so finely in vein, that, together with the orchestra, the movement came off with real brilliance. Her impact on the audience was instantaneous, even before her husband kissed her hand, and she was recalled a number of times so that she may feel she made a success.

Complete "Petrouchka"

The final work on the program was the complete "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky. One hears mostly an abbreviated version of the suite and it can be said that such an abbreviation would not have been out of place tonight. Stravinsky, in the days of "Petrouchka," had considerable to say, and said it at some length, but like many of his works, repeated hearings do not always excite the listener. Mr. Carvalho labored mightily over the four scenes and succeeded in adjusting them to a tremendously dramatic whole.

Tomorrow night Leonard Bernstein makes his only appearance with the orchestra, conducting the annual memorial concert in honor of Serge Koussevitzky. The program will open with the Kyrie and Gloria from the "Mass in C Minor" by Mozart and "Symphony No. 5" by Prokofieff, which Koussevitzky premiered in this country. Soloists for the mass will include Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCullum, tenor. The festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross will also be heard.

Sunday afternoon Zino Francescatti will be heard in the Tschaikowsky violin concerto under the direction of Charles Munch. Continuing the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann, his "Symphony No. 2 in C Major" will be played. The program will open with a "Symphonic Ode" by Aaron Copland, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Bernstein Conducts In Berkshires Tonight

Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The Berkshire Festival concert is in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. As one of the most illustrious pupils of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony, Mr. Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist. Regularly he heads the department of orchestra and conducting at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, and, this summer, is on leave of absence.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

AUG 4 1956

Berkshires Tonight

Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, in a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

As one of the most illustrious pupils of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony, Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist. Regularly he heads the department of orchestra and conducting at the orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

Bernstein has scheduled two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), with the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon assisting. Soloists are Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

[223]

B. Eagle. Aug. 4

Bernstein To Conduct

Memorial to Koussevitzky At Festival Shed Tonight

TANGLEWOOD—Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium of the Music Shed tonight in his only appearance of the season with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tonight's concert will be in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who for 25 years was conductor of the BSO. Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the late conductor, Dr. Koussevitzky, has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940—as composer, conductor and pianist. This summer he has been on leave as head of the department of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

Mozart's Mass

Mr. Bernstein has scheduled for tonight two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: The Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor, with the Festival chorus of the Music Center students, who have been trained by Hugh Ross, assisted by Lorna Cooke de Varon. Soloists will be Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

In his 25 years as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra the late Serge Koussevitzky often conducted performances of Mozart's music and it was he who conceived the idea of the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians which now traditionally precede the four weeks of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony was given its premiere American performances under Dr. Koussevitzky's direction in November, 1945. By coincidence, when the score of the symphony arrived in this country, it turned out to be written on music manuscript paper which had been sent to Russia during the war by Dr. Koussevitzky when it became known that there was a shortage in Russia of such paper.

The three vocal soloists in the portion of Mozart's Mass which will be sung are all former students at the Berkshire Music Center who have since gone on to distinguished careers in the concert and operatic fields. Miss Curtin was a student at Tanglewood in 1946, 1948 and 1951; Miss Alberts studied there in 1941, 1946, 1947, 1950 and 1951, and Mr. McCollum was a student in the opera department in 1952 and 1953.

During the past season Mr. Bernstein has added to his many and varied activities that of television personality. His several appearances during the year on the "Omnibus" program were hailed enthusiastically by both press and public. He currently is completing work on two musicals which will be produced on Broadway in the fall. One is an opera, with libretto by Lillian Hellman, based upon Voltaire's "Candide." The other is called "East Side Story."

TOMORROW'S SOLOIST at the Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Dr. Charles Munch conducting, will be Zino Francescatti, who will play Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto. Mr. Francescatti, a summer resident of Monterey, is donating his services to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund Wednesday evening in a chamber music recital in the Theater Concert Hall, Tanglewood.

Tanglewood Premiere

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Munch returns to the podium in a concert which will bring the eminent violinist Zino Francescatti to the stage of the Shed as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto. Dr. Munch will begin the concert with the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with the Symphony No. 2 in C Major by Schumann, performed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death, July 29, 1856.

Mr. Francescatti, who lives in near-by Monterey, can trace a direct line of violin tradition from the legendary Paganini—his first teacher was his father who had studied violin with Sivori, who in turn had been the only direct pupil of Paganini. At five Francescatti made his first public appearance. At ten he created a profound impression in the Beethoven Concerto. At twenty he made his formal debut with an orchestra in Paris. Before coming to the United States in 1939, he was already famous throughout Europe and South America. His violin is the famous "Hart" Stradivarius, dated 1727, which is one of the finest examples of the great violin maker's art.

Petrovec

STROLLING about the Tanglewood grounds following rehearsals this morning are Leonard Bernstein, former pupil of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who will conduct the BSO at tonight's concert in memory of the late musical director of the orchestra, and Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky, widow of the famed conductor and founder of the Berkshire Music Center.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 4 1956

DE CARVALHO BRILLIANT AT TANGLEWOOD

Presents Exciting Concert; Wife Makes Her North American Debut

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 3 There have been, during this season, some very fine concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, but tonight we heard the most exciting concert to date. The conductor was the Brazilian genius Eleazar De Carvalho, who has not been here since five years ago when he was a student here. The soloist was his wife, Jocey De Oliverira, pianist, who was making her North American debut.

Colorful Performance

Listening to the playing tonight, we got the impression that just for a little while, Mr. Carvalho had gotten the members of the Boston Symphony to almost believing they were South Americans. For sheer color, rhythmic excitement and magnificent rhythms, they turned in performances which caught the audience as few others have this season.

The program opened with a stunning performance of "La Kermesse" from the ballet of the same name by Henry Barraud. He is a Frenchman, born in Bordeaux. The work is of the kind which rolls along at relentless pace, taking in all the resources of the orchestra on the way.

When someone like Carvalho undertakes to bring to the North American audiences dances from "The Three Cornered Hat" by De Falla, the result can be a triumph for both orchestra and conductor. So it was tonight. From the first suave, insinuating dance, to the last note of the brilliant, rhythmically exciting finale, Mr. Carvalho made his orchestra sing, speak, and shout to the intense enthusiasm of the audience.

Miss Oliverira, handsomely gowned in scarlet, chose to make her North American debut in the Ravel piano concerto. This work gave her ample opportunity to reveal her technical abilities, which are very considerable, and her interpretive gifts, equally considerable. She has a flexible technique, no great forcefulness, but her intelligent approach makes up for such deficiency. In the lengthy solo in the second movement, she revealed an ability to color phrases expressively and her tone, always pure, stood out against orchestral accompaniment. In the final presto, she lacked the power to make the sheer brilliance of the piano stand out, but it was playing so clean, so finely in vein, that, together with the orchestra, the movement came off with real brilliance. Her impact on the audience was instantaneous, even before her husband kissed her hand, and she was recalled a number of times so that she may feel she made a success.

Complete "Petrouchka"

The final work on the program was the complete "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky. One hears mostly an abbreviated version of the suite and it can be said that such an abbreviation would not have been out of place tonight. Stravinsky, in the days of "Petrouchka," had considerable to say, and said it at some length, but like many of his works, repeated hearings do not always excite the listener. Mr. Carvalho labored mightily over the four scenes and succeeded in adjusting them to a tremendously dramatic whole.

Tomorrow night Leonard Bernstein makes his only appearance with the orchestra, conducting the annual memorial concert in honor of Serge Koussevitzky. The program will open with the Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor by Mozart and Symphony No. 2 by Prokofieff with Koussevitzky premiered in this country. Soloists for the Mozart will be Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The Festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross will also be heard.

Soloist accompanying Zino Francescatti will be heard in the Bach-Mozart concerto on a Chamber Music program in the Theater Concert Hall.

100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann, his "Symphony No. 2 in C Major" will be played. The program will open with a "Symphonic Ode" by Aaron Copland, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Bernstein Conducts In Berkshires Tonight

Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox. The Berkshire Festival concert is in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. As one of the most illustrious pupils of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony, Mr. Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist. Regularly he heads the department of orchestra and conducting at the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center, and, this summer, is on leave of absence.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

AUG 4 1956

Berkshires Tonight

Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, in a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

As one of the most illustrious pupils of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony, Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist. Regularly he heads the department of orchestra and conducting at the orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center.

Bernstein has scheduled two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427), with the festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon assisting. Soloists are Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

[22]

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

AUG 4 1956

Carvalho Leads Orchestra In Major Festival Concert

Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, was the guest conductor last night as the Boston Symphony orchestra performed in the music shed at Tanglewood. The concert opened the semi-final weekend of the Berkshire Music festival.

Wife Is Soloist

Mr. de Carvalho had as soloist on the program his wife, pianist Jocy de Oliveira. She made her North American debut in a performance of the Piano concerto in G-major by Ravel.

Also heard was a suite from the ballet, "La Kermesse," by Henri Barraud, being given its first Tanglewood performance; three dances from the ballet, "The Three Cornered Hat," by Manuel de Falla, and the complete score for Stravinsky's ballet, "Petrouchka."

Koussevitzky Memorial

The Festival continues this evening with Leonard Bernstein making his only appearance with the orchestra in the annual memorial concert for Serge Koussevitzky. The program will include the Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C minor by Mozart and Symphony No. 5 by Prokofieff, which Koussevitzky gave its premiere in this country. Soloists in the mass will include Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The festival chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, will also be heard.

Tomorrow afternoon Zino Francescatti will be heard in the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto, under the direction of Charles Munch. The celebration of the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann will be marked by a performance of his Symphony No. 2 in C Major. The program will open with a Symphonic Ode by Aaron Copland, who wrote the piece for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony.

Petrovec

PRINCIPAL SOLOISTS in tonight's performance of the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, who will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting are, left to right, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

In Brief . . .

Former Representative Daniel Casey's bid for a retroactive retirement pension covering the past two years would be considered a poor precedent and an unjustified exception to the state's retirement laws if it were not in a field consisting mainly of poor precedents and unjustified exceptions . . . Since he is probably the only man in the city with first-hand experience with an all-shuttle service, airport manager John A. Heaton's misgivings about the operation are worth attention . . . Last night's adequate crowd and the first real break in the weather look as if they will bear out the prediction for the biggest Tanglewood weekend this season . . .

It is reassuring to hear that the second polio shots are scheduled for mid-August, even though Pittsfield has mercifully escaped outbreaks like the one in Chicago and the one here just a year ago . . . Williams College Professor Fred H. Stocking's lively report on the college students' European junket was confirmation of the sometimes-suspect notion that pleasure and learning can go together . . . A locomotive for Pittsfield's Babe Ruth Leaguers, past the opening game and playing this afternoon in the semifinal round of the New England tournament . . .

People living within their income aren't doing their duty to the boom.—Pleasant Hill (Mo.) Times.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

AUG 4 1956

Brazilian Pianist Heard In Debut at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—Last night's Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Eleazar De Carvalho, marked the American debut of the Brizilian pianist, Jocy De Oliveira.

Ravel's piano concerto was the vehicle chosen by Miss De Oliviera for this auspicious occasion. Incidentally, she is the wife of last night's conductor. Some 6000 persons responded most favorably to the balance of the program as follows Barraud's "La Kermesse," three dances from De Falla's "Three-Cornered Hat," and four scenes from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

It will never be said of Miss De Oliveira that "she plays like a man." Of course, the Ravel score isn't exactly a 'rip - snorter,' but it does have pretty expansive possibilities in sonority, especially in the first and third movements.

Tone Sounds Miniature

The pianist gave it a rather cautious performance. No question was raised in her interpretation that she was not cognizant of its most minute details. But coupled with the great resources of the Boston Symphony, her tone sounded miniature, and much of the time, suffocated.

Her best work appeared in the second movement, for the most part unaccompanied. Her tone, here, was sympathetic and controlled, and her approach more flexible and commanding.

Elsewhere, technique was satisfactory, at times forceful—but by and large, it was timed, placid, and unproductive pianism. She received considerable applause for her efforts.

Conductor at Peak

Carvalho and the orchestra were at peak performance. He is one of the younger set's most attractive conductors. Even in the most turbulent moments in the Falla and Stravinsky scores, he didn't strip gears. His directives were intelligent and undemonstrative.

The Barraud "Kermesse" (festival dance) is a dazzling piece of music. It's joyful, tangy, and moves at a fast clip. Last night, full vent was given to its ponderous fanfares, and it spent most of its time teeming with excitement. The percussion section was in fine fettle, with cymbals, xylophone and bells acting up to powerful rhythmic strokes in the balance of the orchestra.

Fullest Excitement

The orchestra played so well that the few blemishes that appeared in brass in the Falla music were something of a shock, slight as they were. Carvalho was at his level best in this music. It was all there—brusk, but sensitive rhythms, crystal pure solos in woodwinds (especially flutes) repeated melodies that held their interest and harsh pulses. The stentorean tones and almost violent rhythms of the "Final Dance" were thrilling to hear.

No less impressive was the Carvalho-orchestra treatment of the Stravinsky socre. It was anything but loosely contrived—even its ruggedness and brash harmonies were made pleasant—and the fullest excitement was engineered with brilliance.

Tonight, Leonard Bernstein will conduct the orchestra in Prokofieff's fifth Symphony, also the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor. Soloist will be Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contrato; and John McCollum, tenor.

[224]

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

AUG 4 1956

Carvalho Leads Orchestra In Major Festival Concert

Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, was the guest conductor last night as the Boston Symphony orchestra performed in the music shed at Tanglewood. The concert opened the semi-final weekend of the Berkshire Music festival.

Wife Is Soloist

Mr. de Carvalho had as soloist on the program his wife, pianist Jocy de Oliveira. She made her North American debut in a performance of the Piano concerto in G-major by Ravel.

Also heard was a suite from the ballet, "La Kermesse," by Henri Barraud, being given its first Tanglewood performance; three dances from the ballet, "The Three Cornered Hat," by Manuel de Falla, and the complete score for Stravinsky's ballet, "Petrouchka."

Koussevitzky Memorial

The Festival continues this evening with Leonard Bernstein making his only appearance with the orchestra in the annual memorial concert for Serge Koussevitzky. The program will include the Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C minor by Mozart and Symphony No. 5 by Prokofieff, which Koussevitzky gave its premiere in this country. Soloists in the mass will include Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The festival chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, will also be heard.

Tomorrow afternoon Zino Francescatti will be heard in the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto, under the direction of Charles Munch. The celebration of the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann will be marked by a performance of his Symphony No. 2 in C Major. The program will open with a Symphonic Ode by Aaron Copland, who wrote the piece for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony.

Petrovec

PRINCIPAL SOLOISTS in tonight's performance of the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, who will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting are, left to right, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

AUG 4 1956

Brazilian Pianist Heard In Debut at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—Last night's Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Eleazar De Carvalho, marked the American debut of the Brizilian pianist, Jocy De Oliveira.

Ravel's piano concerto was the vehicle chosen by Miss De Oliviera for this auspicious occasion. Incidentally, she is the wife of last night's conductor. Some 6000 persons responded most favorably to the balance of the program as follows Barraud's "La Kermesse," three dances from De Falla's "Three-Cornered Hat," and four scenes from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

It will never be said of Miss De Oliveira that "she plays like a man." Of course, the Ravel score isn't exactly a 'rip - snorter,' but it does have pretty expansive possibilities in sonority, especially in the first and third movements.

Tone Sounds Miniature

The pianist gave it a rather cautious performance. No question was raised in her interpretation that she was not cognizant of its most minute details. But coupled with the great resources of the Boston Symphony, her tone sounded miniature, and much of the time, suffocated.

Her best work appeared in the second movement, for the most part unaccompanied. Her tone, here, was sympathetic and controlled, and her approach more flexible and commanding.

Elsewhere, technique was satisfactory, at times forceful—but by and large, it was timed, placid, and unproductive pianism. She received considerable applause for her efforts.

Conductor at Peak

Carvalho and the orchestra were at peak performance. He is one of the younger set's most attractive conductors—even in the most turbulent moments in the Falla and Stravinsky scores, he didn't strip gears. His directives were intelligent and undemonstrative.

The Barraud "Kermesse" (festival dance) is a dazzling piece of music. It's joyful, tangy, and moves at a fast clip. Last night, full vent was given to its ponderous fanfares, and it spent most of its time teeming with excitement. The percussion section was in fine fettle, with cymbals, xylophone and bells acting up to powerful rhythmic strokes in the balance of the orchestra.

Fullest Excitement

The orchestra played so well that the few blemishes that appeared in brass in the Falla music were something of a shock, slight as they were. Carvalho was at his level best in this music. It was all there—brusk but sensitive rhythms, crystal pure solos in woodwinds (especially flutes) repeated melodies that held their interest and harsh pulses. The stentorean tones and almost violent rhythms of the "Final Dance" were thrilling to hear.

No less impressive was the Carvalho-orchestra treatment of the Stravinsky socre. It was anything but loosely contrived—even its ruggedness and brash harmonies were made pleasant—and the fullest excitement was engineered with brilliance.

Tonight, Leonard Bernstein will conduct the orchestra in Prokofieff's fifth Symphony, also the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor. Soloist will be Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contrato; and John McCollum, tenor.

In Brief . . .

Former Representative Daniel Casey's bid for a retroactive retirement pension covering the past two years would be considered a poor precedent, and an unjustified exception to the state's retirement laws if it were not in a field consisting mainly of poor precedents and unjustified exceptions . . . Since he is probably the only man in the city with first-hand experience with an air shuttle service, airport manager John A. Heaton's misgivings about the operation are worth attention . . . Last night's adequate crowd and the first real break in the weather look as if they will bear out the prediction for the biggest Tanglewood weekend this season . . .

It is reassuring to hear that the second polio shots are scheduled for mid-August, even though Pittsfield has mercifully escaped outbreaks like the one in Chicago and the one here just a year ago . . . Williams College Professor Fred H. Stocking's lively report on the college students' European junket was confirmation of the sometimes-suspect notion that pleasure and learning can go together . . . A locomotive for Pittsfield's Babe Ruth Leaguers, past the opening game and playing this afternoon in the semifinal rouhd of the New England tournament . . .

People living within their income aren't doing their duty to the boom.—Pleasant Hill (Mo.) Times.

[204]

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

AUG 4 1956

De Carvalho Dispels Chill At Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass.— Uncommonly cool temperatures, which induced many to don topcoats last night at Tanglewood, were no deterrent to audience enthusiasm or the fervent ovation accorded Eleazar De Carvalho on his return as Festival conductor.

This Brazilian maestro is no stranger to Tanglewood but there is always excitement in the air when he makes music with the Bostonians. His temperament is dynamic and it is superimposed on everything he programs. With Barraud, Falla, Ravel, and Stravinsky on the musical agenda last night he could do no wrong.

Henri Barraud's "La Kermesse" is no stranger to Hartfordites, for it was Mahler and our orchestra who were responsible for its American premiere. In a second hearing with a superior orchestra its intrinsic values were more recognizable and its materials were more impressive, although it still seems unduly thick-textured.

* * *

MORE FAMILIAR and more palatable to the audience were Manuel de Falla's "Three-cornered Hat" Dances with their authentic, inimitable Spanish flavor. Carvalho inspired a superbly rhythmic performance from the orchestra and a unanimity of articulation not often enough heard at these Summer concerts.

Joey De Oliveira (Mrs. Carvalho in private life), the piano soloist in the Ravel Concerto, is a South American beauty with the pianistic skill and interpretative feeling to arouse a chivalrous review from the most hardened critic. In the impressionistic, sometimes jazzy, creation of the popular French composer she was assured, light-fingered, completely in her element.

FOR THE balletomanes and the Stravinsky fans the complete score of "Petrouchka" is something to treasure and this feeling was evidently shared by many in the Shed. Yet for those who could not visualize the stage action, there must have been some anti-climax in this experiment by Carvalho. without the dancers, scenery, and costumes one can too easily concentrate on the cliches which have been eliminated from the orchestral suite.

One thing was irrefutable-a person could hunt in vain for a ballet orchestra to give this score the stunning performance that it received last night.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 181,704

AUG 5 1956

Events to Mark Final Week Of Berkshire Festival

A TRADITIONAL event marking the final week of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival will be the "Tanglewood on Parade" program Thursday night in the Music Shed.

With Eleazar de Carvalho conducting, the first half of the program will be by the full orchestra. The Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler conducting, will take over the second half which will feature Jesus Maria Sanroma in the festival premiere of Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F. During the afternoon simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center, the school run in connection with the festival concerts.

Another highlight of the week will be the stage premiere of Lukas Foss' three-act opera "Griffelkin" tomorrow and Tuesday nights in the Theater-Concert Hall, the composer conducting. Boris Goldovsky has staged the work as the season's major portion of the opera department.

This afternoon's concert by the full orchestra in the Shed will be in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann, with Charles Munch conducting the composer's Second Symphony. Zino Francescatti will be soloist in Tschaikovsky's Violin Concerto. The program will also include the festival premiere of Copland's Symphonic Ode, written for the orchestra's 75th anniversary.

Another anniversary commission, Piston's Symphony No. 6, will feature the first of the final weekend concerts in the Shed Friday night, conducted by Munch. Pierre Monteux will conduct Saturday night and Munch will return Sunday afternoon for the last concert of the season, an all-Wagner one.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 253,804

AUG 5 1956

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

AUG 4 1956

Music Warms Large Audience At Tanglewood

France, Spain, Russia and South America were given an evening at Tanglewood last night, when Eleazar de Carvalho of Brazil conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of more or less contemporary works.

A total of 9,006 people in the audience, slightly chilled by a brisk breeze, were warmed by the fiery flamenco rhythms of deFalla in three dances from "The Three Corner Hat."

Mr. de Carvalho's wife, Joey de Oliveira, warmed them still further with her entrance in a strawberry red dress and her pianistic technique in Ravel's Piano Concerto. This, too, had verve, a touch of the jazz idiom in rhythm and use of instruments. The pianist did not measure up to the color of her dress in much except technical efficiency, but the work itself is at best lacking in serious content. The second movement had some restful pastoral moments and subsided into a waltz tempo for solo piano then strings and woodwinds.

Stravinsky's "Burlesque" in Four Scenes," "Petrouchka" followed the intermission. Purely program and ballet music as it is, the music is full of effects, hurdy gurdys playing, merry-go-rounds grinding monotonously on, the sound of the crowds at the fair—from the fresh beginnings at the start of the day to the run down, worn out feeling that is the culmination of the life of a carnival's one day stand. Stravinsky is a master of these effects and makes every scene stand out vividly. Bernard Zighera was the piano soloist for this work.

Mr. de Carvalho is a rather quiet, unobstrusive sort of conductor, except for the fiery passages in the music of his own country or Spain. Then he is an inspiration and a dynamic body of rhythmic pulsations. Tonight's program will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein and will feature the Mass in C minor of Mozart.—F. M. R.

- NOVOYE RUSSKOYE SLOVO

ВОСКРЕСЕНЬЕ, 5 АВГУСТА, 1956 ГОДА

Вокруг театра

БОСТОНСКИЙ ОРКЕСТР В МОСКВЕ И В ЛЕНИНГРАДЕ

Бостонский симфонический оркестр предпринимает турнэ по тринадцати странам, включая СССР. В поездке, которая продлится пять с половиной недель, примут участие 106 музыкантов оркестра под управлением известного французского дирижера Шарля Мюнша.

Турнэ начнется немедленно по окончании 12 концертов Беркширского фестиваля в Тэнгльвуде, 12 августа.

В Западной Европе оркестр выступит в Вене, Штуттгарте, Мюнхене, Эдинбурге. Берне, Париже, Лондоне, Дублине, Лидсе и др. городах. В Шартре оркестр будет играть в знаменитом соборе.

Первое выступление сотоится в Корке, в Ирландии, 24 августа, последнее — в Лондоне 25 сентября.

Из двадцати семи концертов, десятью приглашен дирижировать Пьер Монте.

По приглашению советского министерства культуры оркестр даст по два концерта в Ленинграде и Москве. В СССР он пробудет от 5 до 10 сентября. Расходы по этой части поездки принимает на себя советское правительство. Советские самолеты доставят оркестр из Хелсинки в Ленинград и затем обратно из Москвы в Прагу.

КЛАВДИЯ ТАРАНОВА В ТЭНГЛЬВУДЕ

На Беркширском фестивале в Тэнгльвуде 31 июля состоялся оперный вечер. Поставлены были сцены из опер «Аида», «Фальстаф», «Дон Карлос» и др. В дуэте из второго акта «Аиды» в роли Амнерис выступила наша соотечественница Клавдия Таранова. Печать восторженно отозвалась об этом номере.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

AUG 5 1956

CONDUCTOR Pierre Monteux, who will lead some of the Boston Symphony concerts during its European tour is shown here at Tanglewood receiving his tickets from T. K. Hebert, district passenger manager of the Holland-America Line with Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston orchestra. Members of the symphony will sail Aug. 14 on the SS Nieuw Amsterdam and will give a concert on board.

NOTED ORCHESTRA CONDUCTOR, Pierre Monteux, who will conduct some of the concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra duting its European tour, is shown at Tanglewood receiving his tickets from T. K. Hebert, district passenger manager of the Holland-America Line, with Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Members of the orchestra sailing on the S.S. Nieuw Amsterdam Aug. 14 from Boston will give a concert on board during the voyage.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

AUG 4 1956

De Carvalho Dispels Chill At Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass.— Uncommonly cool temperatures, which induced many to don topcoats last night at Tanglewood, were no deterrent to audience enthusiasm or the fervent ovation accorded Eleazar De Carvalho on his return as Festival conductor.

This Brazilian maestro is no stranger to Tanglewood but there is always excitement in the air when he makes music with the Bostonians. His temperament is dynamic and it is superimposed on everything he programs. With Barraud, Falla, Ravel, and Stravinsky on the musical agenda last night he could do no wrong.

Henri Barraud's "La Kermesse" is no stranger to Hartfordites, for it was Mahler and our orchestra who were responsible for its American premiere. In a second hearing with a superior orchestra its instrinsic values were more recognizable and its materials were more impressive, although it still seems unduly thick-textured.

* * *

MORE FAMILIAR and more palatable to the audience were Manuel de Falla's "Three-cornered Hat" Dances with their authentic, inimitable Spanish flavor. Carvalho inspired a superbly rhythmic performance from the orchestra and a unanimity of articulation not often enough heard at these Summer concerts.

Joey De Oliveira (Mrs. Carvalho in private life), the piano soloist in the Ravel Concerto, is a South American beauty with the pianistic skill and interpretative feeling to arouse a chivalrous review from the most hardened critic. In the impressionistic, sometimes jazzy, creation of the popular French composer she was assured, light-fingered, completely in her element.

FOR THE balletomanes and the Stravinsky fans the complete score of "Petrouchka" is something to treasure and this feeling was evidently shared by many in the Shed. Yet for those who could not visualize the stage action, there must have been some anti-climax in this experiment by Carvalho. without the dancers, scenery, and costumes one can too easily concentrate on the cliches which have been eliminated from the orchestral suite.

One thing was irrefutable-a person could hunt in vain for a ballet orchestra to give this scare the stunning performance that it received last night.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 181,704

AUG 5 1956

Events to Mark Final Week Of Berkshire Festival

A TRADITIONAL event marking the final week of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival will be the "Tanglewood on Parade" program Thursday night in the Music Shed.

With Eleazar de Carvalho conducting, the first half of the program will be by the full orchestra. The Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler conducting, will take over the second half which will feature Jesus Maria Sanroma in the festival premiere of Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F. During the afternoon simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center, the school run in connection with the festival concerts.

Another highlight of the week will be the stage premiere of Lukas Foss' three-act opera "Griffelkin" tomorrow and Tuesday nights in the Theater-Concert Hall, the composer conducting. Boris Goldovsky has staged the work as the season's major portion of the opera department.

This afternoon's concert by the full orchestra in the Shed will be in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann, with Charles Munch conducting the composer's Second Symphony. Zino Francescatti will be soloist in Tschaikovsky's Violin Concerto. The program will also include the festival premiere of Copland's Symphonic Ode, written for the orchestra's 75th anniversary.

Another anniversary commission, Piston's Symphony No. 6, will feature the first of the final weekend concerts in the Shed Friday night, conducted by Munch. Pierre Monteux will conduct Saturday night and Munch will return Sunday afternoon for the last concert of the season, an all-Wagner-one.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 253,604

AUG 5 1956

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

AUG 4 1956

Music Warms Large Audience At Tanglewood

France, Spain, Russia and South America were given an evening at Tanglewood last night, when Eleazar de Carvalho of Brazil conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of more or less contemporary works.

A total of 9,006 people in the audience, slightly chilled by a brisk breeze, were warmed by the fiery flamenco rhythms of deFalla in three dances from "The Three Corner Hat."

Mr. de Carvalho's wife, Joey de Oliveira, warmed them still further with her entrance in a strawberry red dress and her pianistic technique in Ravel's Piano Concerto. This, too, had verve, a touch of the jazz idiom in rhythm and use of instruments. The pianist did not measure up to the color of her dress in much except technical efficiency, but the work itself is at best lacking in serious content. The second movement had some restful pastoral moments and subsided into a waltz tempo for solo piano then strings and woodwinds.

Stravinsky's "Burlesque" in Four Scenes," "Petrouchka" followed the intermission. Purely program and ballet music as it is, the music is full of effects, hurdy gurdys playing, merry-go-rounds grinding monotonously on, the sound of the crowds at the fair—from the fresh beginnings at the start of the day to the run down, worn out feeling that is the culmination of the life of a carnival's one day stand. Stravinsky is a master of these effects and makes every scene stand out vividly. Bernard Zighera was the piano soloist for this work.

Mr. de Carvalho is a rather quiet, unobstrusive sort of conductor, except for the fiery passages in the music of his own country or Spain. Then he is an inspiration and a dynamic body of rhythmic pulsations. Tonight's program will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein and will feature the Mass in C minor of Mozart.—F. M. R.

- NOVOYE RUSSKOYE SLOVO

ВОСКРЕСЕНЬЕ, 5 АВГУСТА, 1956 ГОДА

Вокруг театра

БОСТОНСКИЙ ОРКЕСТР В МОСКВЕ И В ЛЕНИНГРАДЕ

Бостонский симфонический оркестр предпринимает турнэ по тринадцати странам, включая СССР. В поездке, которая продлится пять с половиной недель, примут участие 106 музыкантов оркестра под управлением известного французского дирижера Шарля Мюнша.

Турнэ начнется немедленно по окончании 12 концертов Беркширского фестиваля в Тэнгльвуде, 12 августа.

В Западной Европе оркестр выступит в Вене, Штуттгарте, Мюнхене, Эдинбурге. Берне, Париже, Лондоне, Дублине, Лидсе и др. городах. В Шартре оркестр будет играть в знаменитом соборе.

Первое выступление сотоится в Корке, в Ирландии, 24 августа, последнее — в Лондоне 25 сентября.

Из двадцати семи концертов, десятью приглашен дирижировать Пьер Монте.

По приглашению советского министерства культуры оркестр даст по два концерта в Ленинграде и Москве. В СССР он пробудет от 5 до 10 сентября. Расходы по этой части поездки принимает на себя советское правительство. Советские самолеты доставят оркестр из Хелсинки в Ленинград и затем обратно из Москвы в Прагу.

⁂

КЛАВДИЯ ТАРАНОВА В ТЭНГЛЬВУДЕ

На Беркширском фестивале в Тэнгльвуде 31 июля состоялся оперный вечер. Поставлены были сцены из опер «Аида», «Фальстаф», «Дон Карлос» и др. В дуэте из второго акта «Аиды» в роли Амнерис выступила наша соотечественница Клавдия Таранова. Печать восторженно отозвалась об этом номере.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

AUG 5 1956

CONDUCTOR Pierre Monteux, who will lead some of the Boston Symphony concerts during its European tour is shown here at Tanglewood receiving his tickets from T. K. Hebert, district passenger manager of the Holland-America Line with Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston orchestra. Members of the symphony will sail Aug. 14 on the SS Nieuw Amsterdam and will give a concert on board.

NOTED ORCHESTRA CONDUCTOR, Pierre Monteux, who will conduct some of the concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during its European tour, is shown at Tanglewood receiving his tickets from T. K. Hebert, district passenger manager of the Holland-America Line, with Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Members of the orchestra sailing on the S.S. Nieuw Amsterdam Aug. 14 from Boston will give a concert on board during the voyage.

[22]

Wausau Daily Record-Herald (Wisconsin)

Richard Hillert At Music School

Local friends and pupils of Richard W. Hillert, this city, will be interested in the honor recently accorded him when the accompanying picture appeared in the July 16 issue of Newsweek magazine.

The music section of the magazine also carried an interview with his instructor, Goffredo Petrassi, "one of Italy's most distinguished composers. Hillert himself has composed some 200 works, climaxed with a symphony, played in part last May at a composers' symposium at the University of Illinois.

Studies in East

The organist at Trinity Lutheran Church and upper grades teacher at the church school next Monday will begin his fifth week of study under Petrassi at Tanglewood, located near Lenox, Mass. His symphony was written as his thesis for his master's degree from Northwestern University and several of his works have been used by that university to represent its school of music.

Petrassi, the current European composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center, is president of the International Society of Contemporary Composers and has been named composer-in-residence at the American Academy in Rome, according to the Newsweek article.

Four of his major works, including "Morte dell' Aria," an opera which the University of Illinois produced last winter, are being performed at Tanglewood this summer. It is interesting to note that a composition by Hillert also was presented at that university.

The Italian musician favors small combinations of instruments over large symphonic ensembles and Hillert has composed the former type as well, as noted in an interview published in the Record-Herald May 25.

Interests Improve

Petrassi has confided that "Italy is not the opera-loving nation it once was," that addiction now better describing West Germany, which has 20 major government-supported opera companies to Italy's 11. However, interest in symphonic music is growing in intellectual circles in Italy and Petrassi believes there will be a renaissance for opera, with renewed enthusiasm stimulated by such modern great works as Alban Berg's "Lulu" and "Wozzeck."

Hillert will continue his profession in Wausau this fall, composing in his free time. He resides here at 529 S. Sixth Ave.

Employed at Tanglewood this summer is Dr. Will Ogdon, Madison, who taught a series of music appreciation classes here last semester under auspices of the University Extension Center and the Marathon County Historical Society. He is to be an instructor at Illinois Wesleyan University, Bloomington, this fall and will compose for performance as part of his duties.

GOFFREDO PETRASSI AND RICHARD HILLERT
Local Composer (right) Studies Under Famed Italian in East

. . . Newsweek Photo

RECORD
SOCIE
FEA
MONDAY, JULY 30, 195

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,780
AUG 5 1956

Attractions for Summer Travelers

ONE OF THE pleasantest things about the informal pace of summer living is a chance to make some of the trips that are prohibited by winter schedules and winter weather. Most of us during the summer do some vacation traveling, as well as weekend and one-day expeditions to interesting places. New England is rich in old houses, museums and historic spots that reward a stop when passing by or are well worth a special trip.

Maine travelers know Wiscasset as an old and interesting town, and on Aug. 15 Wiscasset Open House Day will be held from 11 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. Open to view will be old houses dating from 1763 and one modern house, old churches, the library, and the Lincoln County Court House. Also open will be the Lincoln County Jail, built in 1809, and the new Lincoln County Museum in the jailer's house. The musum, which features "things made by Maine people for use and pleasure during the last 200 years," is now open daily from 9-12 and 2-5 and Sunday from 2-5.

Many of those who make summer journeys to Cape Ann in Massachusetts know of the Folly Cove Designers in an old barn at Folly Cove, in Gloucester. The 17th annual exhibition of the work of this talented group of textile designers was opened last week and will be on view through Sept. 2. The workshop is open Tuesday through Saturday from 11-5 and Sunday from 2-5 and is closed Monday. Each day that the shop is open a demonstration of textile printing will be given from 2 to 4 in the afternoon.

At Tanglewood in the western part of the state the Berkshire Festival is now going on with a series of weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and leading soloists. Now in its 75th anniversary season, the orchestra will play the last series of concerts of the current Berkshire Festival next weekend. Friday evening's program includes Haydn's Symphony No. 102, Strauss' Don Juan, and Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston, composed for the 75th anniversary. On Saturday evening Pierre Monteux will conduct Brahms' Symphony No. 3, Suite for Orchestra by Enesco, and Strauss' Suite from Der Rosenkavalier. On Sunday afternoon Charles Munch will conduct the final concert, an all-Wagner program including the Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser, A Siegfried Idyll, and the opening and final scene of Act III of Die Meistersinger.

. . . Record-Herald Photo

TEACHER-COMPOSER—Shown holding the score of his three-movement symphony, recently performed in part at a composers' symposium at the University of Illinois, is Richard Hillert, organist at Trinity Lutheran Church and teacher in the church school. Hillert received his master's degree last summer at Northwestern University School of Music and has represented that school in several concerts. Hillert, who began composing at the age of 14 in his home town of Granton, Clark county, is particularly fascinated with the challenge of the possibilities in contemporary church music and some of his works in that field have won praise here. He has composed some 200 works. This summer he will study music at Tanglewood in Massachusetts.

[226]

Wausau Daily Record-Herald (Wisconsin)

Richard Hillert At Music School

Local friends and pupils of Richard W. Hillert, this city, will be interested in the honor recently paid him when the accompanying picture appeared in the music section of Newsweek magazine.

The music section of the magazine carried an interview with his instructor, Goffredo Petrassi, "one of Italy's most distinguished composers. Hillert himself has composed some 200 works, climaxed with a symphony, played in part last May at a composers' symposium at the University of Illinois.

Studies in East

The organist at Trinity Lutheran Church and upper grades teacher in the church school next Monday will begin his fifth week of study under Petrassi at Tanglewood, located near Lenox, Mass. His symphony was written as his thesis for his master's degree from Northwestern University and several of his works have been used by that university to represent its school of music.

Petrassi, the current European composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center, is president of the International Society of Contemporary Composers and has been named composer-in-residence at the American Academy in Rome, according to the Newsweek article.

Four of his major works, including "Morte dell' Aria," an opera which the University of Illinois produced last winter, are being performed at Tanglewood this summer. It is interesting to note that a composition by Hillert also was presented at that university.

The Italian musician favors small combinations of instruments over large symphonic ensembles and Hillert has composed the former type as well, as noted in an interview published in the Record-Herald May 25.

Interests Improve

Petrassi has confided that "Italy is not the opera-loving nation it once was," that addiction now better describing West Germany, which has 20 major government-supported opera companies to Italy's 11. However, interest in symphonic music is growing in intellectual circles in Italy and Petrassi believes there will be a renaissance for opera, with renewed enthusiasm stimulated by such modern great works as Alban Berg's "Lulu" and "Wozzeck."

Hillert will continue his profession in Wausau this fall, composing in his free time. He resides here at 529 S. Sixth Ave.

Employed at Tanglewood this summer is Dr. Will Ogdon, Madison, who taught a series of music appreciation classes here last semester under auspices of the University Extension Center and the Marathon County Historical Society. He is to be an instructor at Illinois Wesleyan University, Bloomington, this fall and will compose for performance as part of his duties.

GOFFREDO PETRASSI AND RICHARD HILLERT
Local Composer (right) Studies Under Famed Italian in East
. . . Newsweek Photo

RECORD
SOCIE
FEA
MONDAY, JULY 30, 195

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 104,780
AUG 5 1956

Attractions for Summer Travelers

ONE OF THE pleasantest things about the informal pace of summer living is a chance to make some of the trips that are prohibited by winter schedules and winter weather. Most of us during the summer do some vacation traveling, as well as weekend and one-day expeditions to interesting places. New England is rich in old houses, museums and historic spots that reward a stop when passing by or are well worth a special trip.

Maine travelers know Wiscasset as an old and interesting town, and on Aug. 15 Wiscasset Open House Day will be held from 11 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. Open to view will be old houses dating from 1763 and one modern house, old churches, the library, and the Lincoln County Court House. Also open will be the Lincoln County Jail, built in 1809, and the new Lincoln County Museum in the jailer's house. The musum, which features "things made by Maine people for use and pleasure during the last 200 years," is now open daily from 9-12 and 2-5 and Sunday from 2-5.

Many of those who make summer journeys to Cape Ann in Massachusetts know of the Folly Cove Designers in an old barn at Folly Cove, in Gloucester. The 17th annual exhibition of the work of this talented group of textile designers was opened last week and will be on view through Sept. 2. The workshop is open Tuesday through Saturday from 11-5 and Sunday from 2-5 and is closed Monday. Each day that the shop is open a demonstration of textile printing will be given from 2 to 4 in the afternoon.

At Tanglewood in the western part of the state the Berkshire Festival is now going on with a series of weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and leading soloists. Now in its 75th anniversary season, the orchestra will play the last series of concerts of the current Berkshire Festival next weekend. Friday evening's program includes Haydn's Symphony No. 102, Strauss' Don Juan, and Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston, composed for the 75th anniversary. On Saturday evening Pierre Monteux will conduct Brahms' Symphony No. 3, Suite for Orchestra by Enesco, and Strauss' Suite from Der Rosenkavalier. On Sunday afternoon Charles Munch will conduct the final concert, an all-Wagner program including the Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser, A Siegfried Idyll, and the opening and final scene of Act III of Die Meistersinger.

TEACHER-COMPOSER—Shown holding the score of his three-movement symphony, recently performed in part at a composers' symposium at the University of Illinois, is Richard Hillert, organist at Trinity Lutheran Church and teacher in the church school. Hillert received his master's degree last summer at Northwestern University School of Music and has represented that school in several concerts. Hillert, who began composing at the age of 14 in his home town of Granton, Clark county, is particularly fascinated with the challenge of the possibilities in contemporary church music and some of his works in that field have won praise here. He has composed some 200 works. This summer he will study music at Tanglewood in Massachusetts.
. . . Record-Herald Photo

D 26

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Wausau Daily Record-Herald (Wisconsin)

Richard Hillert At Music School

Local friends and pupils of Richard W. Hillert, this city, will be interested in the honor recently awarded him when the accompanying picture appeared in the [illegible] issue of Newsweek magazine.

The music section of the magazine featured an interview with his instructor, Goffredo Petrassi, "one of Italy's most distinguished composers." Hillert himself has composed some 200 works, climaxed with a symphony, played in part this May at a composers' symposium at the University of Illinois.

Studies in East

The organist at Trinity Lutheran Church and upper grades teacher in the church school next Monday will begin his fifth week of study under Petrassi at Tanglewood, located near Lenox, Mass. His symphony was written as his thesis for his master's degree from Northwestern University and several of his works have been used by that university to represent its school of music.

Petrassi, the current European composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center, is president of the International Society of Contemporary Composers and has been named composer-in-residence at the American Academy in Rome, according to the Newsweek article.

Four of his major works, including "Morte dell' Aria," an opera which the University of Illinois produced last winter, are being performed at Tanglewood this summer. It is interesting to note that a composition by Hillert also was presented at that university.

The Italian musician favors small combinations of instruments over large symphonic ensembles and Hillert has composed the former type as well, as noted in an interview published in the Record-Herald May 25.

Interests Improve

Petrassi has confided that "Italy is not the opera-loving nation it once was," that addiction now better describing West Germany, which has 20 major government-supported opera companies to Italy's 11. However, interest in symphonic music is growing in intellectual circles in Italy and Petrassi believes there will be a renaissance for opera, with renewed enthusiasm stimulated by such modern great works as Alban Berg's "Lulu" and "Wozzeck."

Hillert will continue his profession in Wausau this fall, composing in his free time. He resides here at 529 S. Sixth Ave.

Employed at Tanglewood this

GOFFREDO PETRASSI AND RICHARD HILLERT . . . Newsweek Photo
Local Composer (right) Studies Under Famed Italian in East

summer is Dr. Will Ogdon, Madison, who taught a series of music appreciation classes here last semester under auspices of the University Extension Center and the Marathon County Historical Society. He is to be an instructor at Illinois Wesleyan University, Bloomington, this fall and will compose for performance as part of his duties.

RECORD-HERALD SOCIETY
FEATU
MONDAY, JULY 30, 1956

...ers

...pleasantest
...the informal
...living is a
...some of the
...prohibited by
...ules and winter
...st of us during the
...some vacation trav-
...well as weekend and
...expeditions to inter-
...laces. New England is ...old houses, museums
...storic spots that reward
...p when passing by or are
...worth a special trip.

Maine travelers know Wiscasset as an old and interesting town, and on Aug. 15 Wiscasset Open House Day will be held from 11 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. Open to view will be old houses dating from 1763 and one modern house, old churches, the library, and the Lincoln County Court House. Also open will be the Lincoln County Jail, built in 1809, and the new Lincoln County Museum in the jailer's house. The musum, which features "things made by Maine people for use and pleasure during the last 200 years," is now open daily from 9-12 and 2-5 and Sunday from 2-5.

Many of those who make summer journeys to Cape Ann in Massachusetts know of the Folly Cove Designers in an old barn at Folly Cove, in Gloucester. The 17th annual exhibition of the work of this talented group of textile designers was opened last week and will be on view through Sept. 2. The workshop is open Tuesday through Saturday from 11-5 and Sunday from 2-5 and is closed Monday. Each day that the shop is open a demonstration of textile printing will be given from 2 to 4 in the afternoon.

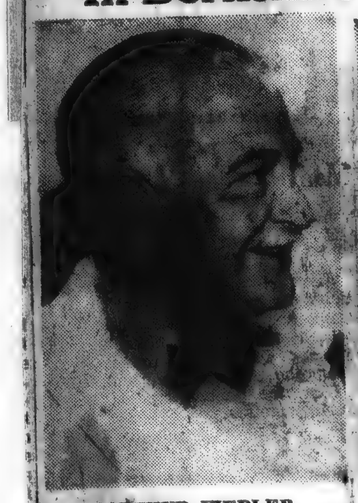
At Tanglewood in the western part of the state the Berkshire Festival is now going on with a series of weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and leading soloists. Now in its 75th anniversary season, the orchestra will play the last series of concerts of the current Berkshire Festival next weekend. Friday evening's program includes Haydn's Symphony No. 102, Strauss' Don Juan, and Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston, composed for the 75th anniversary. On Saturday evening Pierre Monteux will conduct Brahms' Symphony No. 3, Suite for Orchestra by Enesco, and Strauss' Suite from Der Rosenkavalier. On Sunday afternoon Charles Munch will conduct the final concert, an all-Wagner program including the Overture and Bacchanale from Tannhauser, A Siegfried Idyll, and the opening and final scene of Act III of Die Meistersinger.

TEACHER-COMPOSER—Shown holding the score of his three-movement symphony, recently performed in part at a composers' symposium at the University of Illinois, is Richard Hillert, organist at Trinity Lutheran Church and teacher in the church school. Hillert received his master's degree last summer at Northwestern University School of Music and has represented that school in several concerts. Hillert, who began composing at the age of 14 in his home town of Granton, Clark county, is particularly fascinated with the challenge of the possibilities in contemporary church music and some of his works in that field have won praise here. He has composed some 200 works. This summer he will study music at Tanglewood in Massachusetts.
Record-Herald Photo

[illegible]

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
AUG 5 1956

In Berkshire Music Festival Concert at Tanglewood



ARTHUR FIEDLER

JESUS MARIA SANROMA

MARGUERITE WILLAUER

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra performs in "Tanglewood on Parade" in the Music Shed Thursday night, Aug. 9. Arthur Fiedler will conduct. Pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist in Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F. On Sunday, Aug. 12, Marguerite Willauer, soprano, sings in a concert version of Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
AUG 5 1956

11,104 IN TRIBUTE TO KOUSSEVITSKY AT TANGLEWOOD

Memorial Concert Draws Season's Peak Audience; Artists Excel

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 4—The Berkshire Music Festival reached its peak audience tonight when 11,104 people crowded the shed and spacious lawns to hear the concert in memory of Serge Koussevitsky. Eeach year since his death, there has been such a memorial concert and each concert has been directed by Leonard Bernstein, protege of Koussevitzky and now one of the most significant figures in American music.

It was eminently appropriate that Mr. Bernstein should choose to present the Kyrie and Gloria from the "Mass in C Minor" by Mozart.

Favorite of Late Conductor

It contains some of the finest music ever written and was a favorite work of the great conductor. All the resources of the festival were on hand to pay tribute to the beloved founder of the festival. This year the festival chorus, directed by Hugh Ross, is exceptionally fine and the excellent soloists were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum. Then there was the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing for Mr. Bern-which permeates the finale was clearly realized. There were magnificent climaxes and moments of tenderness in the broad constructive scheme of this symphony. It is impressive in its rhythmic and melodic contrasts and there is melody aplenty for Prokofieff was a melodist at heart, even when writing with his tongue in his cheek.

(Continued On Page 15A)

An audience which had already given the performance of the Kyrie and Floria a tremendous ovation, unleashed its applause again after the symphony, and with reason.

Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. Charles Munch will direct the orchestra in a program which will include the Tschiakowsky violin concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

Robert Schumann's second symphony will be played in memory of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program will open with a "Symphonic Ode" by Aaron Copland, a work revised for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
AUG 5 1956

Tanglewood Premiere

Walter Piston, left, eminent American composer, and Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Piston's Symphony No. 6 will receive its Tanglewood premiere on Friday night, Aug. 10, in the Music Shed. Dr. Munch will conduct.

NY Times
August 5

R THE WEEK

Arthur Fiedler with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist. Program follows:
(By Boston Symphony)
Russian Easter Overture. Rimsky-Korsakoff
Chorps No. 10 (Rasga o coracao) ..... Villa-Lobos
(By Boston Pops)
La Boutique Fantasque. Rossini-Respighi
Piano Concerto ..... Gershwin
Bolero ..... Ravel

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Symphony No. 102 ..... Haydn
Symphony No. 6 (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Piston
Don Juan ..... Strauss
L'Apprenti Sorcier ..... Dukas

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux.
Festival Overture ..... Freed
Symphony No. 3 ..... Brahms
Suite for Orchestra ..... Enesco
Suite from Der Rosenkavalier .. Strauss

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 12, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; James Pease, bass; Albert Da Costa, tenor; Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Rosalind Hupp; Robert Nagy; John McCurdy, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.
Symphony No. 3 (Eroica) ....Beethoven
Opening and final scenes from Act 3 of Die Meistersinger ..... Wagner

Berkshire Music Barn

TONIGHT, 8:40 P. M., Sarah Vaughn and Trio.

THURSDAY, 8:40 P. M., Concert for Connoisseurs.

SATURDAY, 4 P. M., Richard Dyer-Bennet, folk singer.

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 12, 8:40 P. M., Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors.

CUMMINGTON

TODAY, 3 P. M., Cummington School of the Arts. Program of chamber music for string quartet.

IPSWICH

FRIDAY and SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Castle Hill. Martha Lipton, mezzo-soprano, assisted by Knickerbocker Chamber Players conducted by Herman Neuman. Program of classic arias and works for string orchestra.

PITTSFIELD

SATURDAY, 3:30 P. M., South Mountain. John Corigliano, violinist, and the New York Philharmonic Quartet in program of music of Strauss, Beethoven and Brahms.

MAINE

BLUE HILL

TODAY, 8 P. M., Kneisel Hall. A Beaux Trio program of Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms trios.

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 12, 4 P. M., Kneisel Hall. Szymon Goldberg, violinist.

HANCOCK

TODAY, 8:30 P. M., Forest Studio. Symphony orchestra conducted by Joseph Barone; Frieda Grey Masse, contralto; Katherya Blum, soprano; Samuel Lipman, pianist. Program consists of Act 3 from Orpheus by Gluck and the Schumann Piano Concerto.

NORTH BRIDGTON

MONDAY, 8:15 P. M., Bridgton Academy. Will Holt, ballad singer and guitarist.

VERMONT

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Kinzo Francescatti, violinist.
Symphonic Ode (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Copland
Violin Concerto ..... Tchaikovsky
Symphony No. 2 ..... Schumann

MONDAY and TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. First staged performance of Griffelkin, a three-act opera by Lukas Foss, with libretto by Alastair Reid. Mr. Foss will conduct an orchestra composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center. Boris Goldovsky will stage the production, which will have a cast of 23, in addition to chorus and dancers.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber music by Zino Francescatti, violinist, and Artur Balsam, pianist.
Violin Sonata No. 1 ..... Faure
Violin Sonata ..... Ravel
Violin Sonata in A ..... Franck

THURSDAY, Tanglewood on Parade day. The main concert of the evening will be held in the Music Shed at 8:40, and will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho; The Berkshire Festival Chorus; and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra conducted by

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999
AUG 5 1956

Koussevitzky Memorial

Mozart, Prokofieff Works Feature Berkshire Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—A concertized performance of the Kyrie and Floria from Mozart's C Minor Mass and a thrilling account of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony were the works with which the Boston Symphony and Leonard Bernstein incited great enthusiasm from 11,101 persons last night at Tanglewood. The concert was in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

The festival chorus of 200, students at the Berkshire Music Center, had been expertly prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke De Varon. Soloists were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor.

Completely Efficient

It was a question to whom the night belonged. In the Mozart, Mr. Bernstein was rather subdued but completely efficient in making his wishes known, and they were strictly in the interest of the Mozart Mass.

In the Prokofieff, his trademarks of style appeared in full force, but in justice it must be said that the symphony is almost vulnerable to exorbitances. The chorus sang exceedingly well in the Mozart. There was a silken quality in the sopranos and a fine body of tone from the male voices. The orchestra was relegated to its function of providing sensitive but firm backgrounds. Interims that placed it in a dominant role were beautifully executed and it is to the conductor's credit that instantaneous focus was placed on voices when words became the primary issue.

Fine work was accomplished by the soloists. There was a slight uneasiness in both women's voices when technical passages became hazardous and exposed. But Miss Curtin's high tones soared securely over the fabric of full chorus, in duets and the trip with her fellow soloists.

Miss Alberts gave a splendid rendition of her difficult solo, the high range being confident and richly toned and an opulence emerging from the depths of her scale. The tenor was heard as a voice in the trio, but it was sufficient to establish a fine, ringing quality from Mr. McCollum, and a control of phrase and technical requirements.

The wisdom should also be pointed out of having the soloists stationed to the rear of the stage. Instead of tempering their solo status, it gave an admirable perspective to their basic function in the text—namely, to contribute to the religious theme and not dominate it.

A bravura performance was given the Prokofieff Symphony. It was virtuoso playing by the orchestra, and the comparative slow tempos that Mr. Bernstein elected to adopt permitted the fullest absorption of its iner workings.

This afternoon's program, conducted by Charles Munch, will include Copland's revision of his Symphonic Ode, for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Tchaikovsky's violin concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist, and Schumann's Second Symphony.

[22]

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372

AUG 5 1956

In Berkshire Music Festival Concert at Tanglewood

ARTHUR FIEDLER

JESUS MARIA SANROMA

The Boston Pops Orchestra performs in "Tanglewood on Parade" in the Music Shed Thursday night, Aug. 9. Arthur Fiedler will conduct. Pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist in Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F. On Sunday, Aug. 12, Marguerite Willauer, soprano, sings in a concert version of Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

MARGUERITE WILLAUER

R THE WEEK

Arthur Fiedler with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist. Program follows:
(By Boston Symphony)
Russian Easter Overture.....Rimsky-Korsakoff
Choros No. 10 (Rasga o coracao).....Villa-Lobos
(By Boston Pops)
La Boutique Fantasque.....Rossini-Respighi
Piano Concerto.....Gershwin
Bolero.....Ravel

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Symphony No. 102.....Haydn
Symphony No. 6 (first Tanglewood performance).....Piston
Don Juan.....Strauss
L'Apprenti Sorcier.....Dukas

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux.
Festival Overture.....Freed
Symphony No. 3.....Brahms
Suite for Orchestra.....Enesco
Suite from Der Rosenkavalier.....Strauss

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 12, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; James Pease, bass; Albert Da Costa, tenor; Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Rosalind Hupp; Robert Nagy; John McCurdy, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.
Symphony No. 3 (Eroica).....Beethoven
Opening and final scenes from Act 3 of Die Meistersinger.....Wagner

Berkshire Music Barn

TONIGHT, 8:40 P. M., Sarah Vaughn and Trio.

THURSDAY, 8:40 P. M., Concert for Connoisseurs.

SATURDAY, 4 P. M., Richard Dyer-Bennet, folk singer.

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 12, 8:40 P. M., Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors.

CUMMINGTON

TODAY, 3 P. M., Cummington School of the Arts, Program of chamber music for string quartet.

IPSWICH

FRIDAY and SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Castle Hill. Martha Lipton, mezzo-soprano, assisted by Knickerbocker Chamber Players conducted by Herman Neuman. Program of classic arias and works for string orchestra.

PITTSFIELD

SATURDAY, 3:30 P. M., South Mountain. John Corigliano violinist, and the New York Philharmonic Quartet, in program of music of Strauss, Beethoven and Brahms.

MAINE

BLUE HILL

TODAY, 4 P. M., Kneisel Hall. Allenert Trio. Program of Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms trios.

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 12, 4 P. M., Kneisel Hall. Joseph Fuchs, violinist.

HANCOCK

TODAY, 4:30 P. M., Forest Studio. Symphony orchestra conducted by Joseph Barone; Frieda Grey Masse, contralto; Katheryn Blum, soprano; Samuel Lipman, pianist. Program consists of Act 3 from Orpheus by Gluck and the Schumann Piano Concerto.

NORTH BRIDGTON

MONDAY, 8:15 P. M., Bridgton Academy. Will Holt, ballad singer and guitarist.

VERMONT

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Zino Francescatti, violinist.
Symphonic Ode (first Tanglewood performance).....Copland
Violin Concerto.....Tchaikovsky
Symphony No. 2.....Schumann

MONDAY and TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. First staged performance of Griffelkin, a three-act opera by Lukas Foss, with libretto by Alastair Reid. Mr. Foss will conduct an orchestra composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center. Boris Goldovsky will stage the production, which will have a cast of 23, in addition to chorus and dancers.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber music by Zino Francescatti, violinist, and Artur Balsam, pianist.
Violin Sonata No. 1.....Faure
Violin Sonata.....Ravel
Violin Sonata in A.....Franck

THURSDAY, Tanglewood on Parade day. The main concert of the evening will be held in the Music Shed at 8:15, and will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho; The Berkshire Festival Chorus; and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra conducted by

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372

AUG 5 1956

11,104 IN TRIBUTE TO KOUSSEVITSKY AT TANGLEWOOD

Memorial Concert Draws Season's Peak Audience; Artists Excel

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 4—The Berkshire Music Festival reached its peak audience tonight when 11,104 people crowded the shed and spacious lawns to hear the concert in memory of Serge Koussevitsky. Eeach year since his death, there has been such a memorial concert and each concert has been directed by Leonard Bernstein, protege of Koussevitzky and now one of the most significant figures in American music.

It was eminently appropriate that Mr. Bernstein should choose to present the Kyrie and Gloria from the "Mass in C Minor" by Mozart.

Favorite of Late Conductor

It contains some of the finest music ever written and was a favorite work of the great conductor. All the resources of the festival were on hand to pay tribute to the beloved founder of the festival. This year the festival chorus, directed by Hugh Ross, is exceptionally fine and the excellent soloists were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum. Then there was the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing for Mr. Bern-which permeates the finale was clearly realized. There were magnificent climaxes and moments of tenderness in the broad constructive scheme of this symphony. It is impressive in its rhythmic and melodic contrasts and there is melody aplenty for Prokofieff was a melodist at heart, even when writing with his tongue in his cheek.

(Continued On Page 15A)

An audience which had already given the performance of the yrie and Floria a treniendous ration, unleashed its applause gain after the symphony, and ith reason.

Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. harles Munch will direct the chestra in a program which ll include the Tschiakowsky olin concerto with Zino Franscatti as soloist.

Robert Schumann's second symony will be played in memory the 100th anniversary of the mposer's death. The program ll open with a "Symphonic e" by Aaron Copland, a work vised for the 75th anniversary the orchestra.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372

AUG 5 1956

Tanglewood Premiere

Walter Piston, left, eminent American composer, and Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Piston's Symphony No. 6 will receive its Tanglewood premiere on Friday night, Aug. 10, in the Music Shed. Dr. Munch will conduct.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

AUG 5 1956

Koussevitzky Memorial

Mozart, Prokofieff Works Feature Berkshire Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—A concertized performance of the Kyrie and Floria from Mozart's C Minor Mass and a thrilling account of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony were the works with which the Boston Symphony and Leonard Bernstein incited great enthusiasm from 11,101 persons last night at Tanglewood. The concert was in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

The festival chorus of 200, students at the Berkshire Music Center, had been expertly prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke De Varon. Soloists were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor.

Completely Efficient

It was a question to whom the night belonged. In the Mozart, Mr. Bernstein was rather subdued but completely efficient in making his wishes known, and they were strictly in the interest of the Mozart Mass.

In the Prokofieff, his trademarks of style appeared in full force, but in justice it must be said that the symphony is almost vulnerable to exorbitances. The chorus sang exceedingly well in the Mozart. There was a silken quality in the sopranos and a fine body of tone from the male voices. The orchestra was relegated to its function of providing sensitive but firm backgrounds. Interims that placed it in a dominant role were beautifully executed and it is to the conductor's credit that instantaneous focus was placed on voices when words became the primary issue.

Fine work was accomplished by the soloists. There was a slight uneasiness in both women's voices when technical passages became hazardous and exposed. But Miss Curtin's high tones soared securely over the fabric of full chorus, in duets and the trip with her fellow soloists.

Miss Alberts gave a splendid rendition of her difficult solo, the high range being confident and richly toned and an opulence emerging from the depths of her scale. The tenor was heard as a voice in the trio, but it was sufficient to establish a fine, ringing quality from Mr. McCollum, and a control of phrase and technical requirements.

The wisdom should also be pointed out of having the soloists stationed to the rear of the stage. Instead of tempering their solo status, it gave an admirable perspective to their basic function in the text—namely, to contribute to the religious theme and not dominate it.

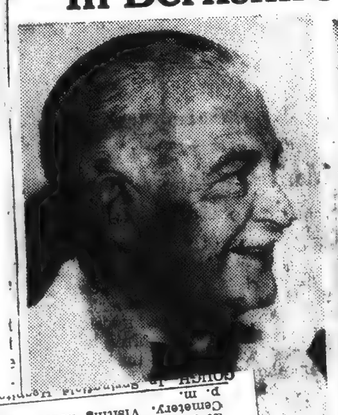
A bravura performance was given the Prokofieff Symphony. It was virtuoso playing by the orchestra, and the comparative slow tempos that Mr. Bernstein elected to adopt permitted the fullest absorption of its iner workings.

This afternoon's program, conducted by Charles Munch, will include Copland's revision of his Symphonic Ode, for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchrestra; Tchaikovsky's violin concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist, and Schumann's Second Symphony.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372

AUG 5 1956

In Berkshire Music Festival Concert at Tanglewood



JESUS MARIA SANROMA

The Boston Pops Orchestra performs in "Tanglewood on Parade" in the Music Shed Thursday night, Aug. 9. Arthur Fiedler will conduct. Pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist in Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F. On Sunday, Aug. 12, Marguerite Willauer, soprano, sings in a concert version of Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

MARGUERITE WILLAUER

(Continued From Page 1A)

stein as it used to play for Koussevitzky.

It was a stupendous performance, finely detailed and directed with consummate authority. The chorus singing was excellent. Particularly impressive was the "Cum Sancto Spiritu," a fully developed fugue which was sung with clarity and sense of spaciousness.

Soloists Excel

Miss Curtin sang with clarity and flexibility the taxing air in the "Christe Eleison" and Miss Alberts, singing better than we have heard her in many years, was admirable in the "Laudamus Te." The duet by the two women, "Dominus Deus," was the offering of two fine-voiced musicians. In the "Auaniam Tu Solus Sanctus," the women were joined by tenor John McCollum. There was impassioned choral singing in the Gloria, particularly the repeated utterance of "Miserere." The orchestra was in its best estate and Mr. Bernstein held all forces together, bending them to his will.

Prokofieff's "Symphony No. 5" was written in 1944 and its American premiere was given by Dr. Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Although Mr. Prokofieff insisted this was pure music, without program, he did say that "It is a symphony about the spirit of man."

Vivid Reading Given

Mr. Bernstein provided a vivid, authoritative reading, one in which the melodies were made clearly expressive and the underlying thought of brutal warfare which permeates the finale was clearly realized. There were magnificent climaxes and moments of tenderness in the broad constructive scheme of this symphony. It is impressive in its rhythmic and melodic contrasts and there is melody aplenty for Prokofieff was a melodist at heart, even when writing with his tongue in his cheek.

An audience which had already given the performance of the Kyrie and Floria a tremendous ovation, unleashed its applause again after the symphony, and with reason.

Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. Charles Munch will direct the orchestra in a program which will include the Tschiakowsky violin concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

Robert Schumann's second symphony will be played in memory of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program will open with a "Symphonic Ode" by Aaron Copland, a work revised for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372

AUG 5 1956

Tanglewood Premiere

Walter Piston, left, eminent American composer, and Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Piston's Symphony No. 6 will receive its Tanglewood premiere on Friday night, Aug. 10, in the Music Shed. Dr. Munch will conduct.

R THE WEEK

Arthur Fiedler with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist. Program follows:
(By Boston Symphony)
Russian Easter Overture. Rimsky-Korsakoff
Choros No. 10 (Rasga o coracao) ..... Villa-Lobos
(By Boston Pops)
La Boutique Fantasque. Rossini-Respighi
Piano Concerto ..... Gershwin
Bolero ..... Ravel

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Symphony No. 102 ..... Haydn
Symphony No. 6 (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Piston
Don Juan ..... Strauss
L'Apprenti Sorcier ..... Dukas

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux.
Festival Overture ..... Freed
Symphony No. 3 ..... Brahms
Suite for Orchestra ..... Enesco
Suite from Der Rosenkavalier ..Strauss

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 12, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; James Pease, bass; Albert Da Costa, tenor; Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Rosalind Hupp; Robert Nagy; John McCurdy, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.
Symphony No. 3 (Eroica) ....Beethoven
Opening and final scenes from Act 3 of Die Meistersinger ..... Wagner

Berkshire Music Barn

TONIGHT, 8:40 P. M., Sarah Vaughn and Trio.

THURSDAY, 8:40 P. M., Concert for Connoisseurs.

SATURDAY, 4 P. M., Richard Dyer-Bennet, folk singer.

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 12, 8:40 P. M., Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors.

CUMMINGTON

TODAY, 3 P. M., Cummington School of the Arts, Program of chamber music for string quartet.

IPSWICH

FRIDAY and SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Castle Hill. Martha Lipton, mezzo-soprano, assisted by Knickerbocker Chamber Players conducted by Herman Neuman. Program of classic arias and works for string orchestra.

PITTSFIELD

SATURDAY, 3:30 P. M., South Mountain. John Corigliano, violinist, and the New York Philharmonic Quartet, in program of music of Strauss, Beethoven and Brahms trios.

MAINE

BLUE HILL

TODAY, 4 P. M., Kneisel Hall. Allegri Trio. Program of Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms trios.

NEXT SUNDAY, Aug. 12, 4 P. M., Kneisel Hall, Joseph Fuchs, violinist.

HANCOCK

TODAY, 4:30 P. M., Forest Studio. Symphony orchestra conducted by Joseph Barone; Frieda Grey Masse, contralto; Katheryn Blum, soprano; Samuel Lipman, pianist. Program consists of Act 3 from Orpheus by Gluck and the Schumann Piano Concerto.

NORTH BRIDGTON

MONDAY, 8:15 P. M., Bridgton Academy. Will Holt, ballad singer and guitarist.

VERMONT

MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood
TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Zino Francescatti, violinist.
Symphonic Ode (first Tanglewood performance) ..... Copland
Violin Concerto ..... Tchaikovsky
Symphony No. 2 ..... Schumann
MONDAY and TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. First staged performance of Griffelkin, a three-act opera by Lukas Foss, with libretto by Alastair Reid. Mr. Foss will conduct an orchestra composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center. Boris Goldovsky will stage the production, which will have a cast of 23, in addition to chorus and dancers.
WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber music by Zino Francescatti, violinist, and Artur Balsam, pianist.
Violin Sonata No. 1. ..... Faure
Violin Sonata ..... Ravel
Violin Sonata in A ..... Franck
THURSDAY, Tanglewood on Parade day. The main concert of the evening will be held in the Music Shed at 8:15, and will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho; The Berkshire Festival Chorus; and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra conducted by

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

AUG 5 1956

Koussevitzky Memorial

Mozart, Prokofieff Works Feature Berkshire Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—A concertized performance of the Kyrie and Floria from Mozart's C Minor Mass and a thrilling account of Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony were the works with which the Boston Symphony and Leonard Bernstein incited great enthusiasm from 11,101 persons last night at Tanglewood. The concert was in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

The festival chorus of 200, students at the Berkshire Music Center, had been expertly prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke De Varon. Soloists were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor.

Completely Efficient

It was a question to whom the night belonged. In the Mozart, Mr. Bernstein was rather subdued but completely efficient in making his wishes known, and they were strictly in the interest of the Mozart Mass.

In the Prokofieff, his trademarks of style appeared in full force, but in justice it must be said that the symphony is almost vulnerable to exorbitances. The chorus sang exceedingly well in the Mozart. There was a silken quality in the sopranos and a fine body of tone from the male voices. The orchestra was relegated to its function of providing sensitive but firm backgrounds. Interims that placed it in a dominant role were beautifully executed and it is to the conductor's credit that instantaneous focus was placed on voices when words became the primary issue.

Fine work was accomplished by the soloists. There was a slight uneasiness in both women's voices when technical passages became hazardous and exposed. But Miss Curtin's high tones soared securely over the fabric of full chorus, in duets and the trip with her fellow soloists.

Miss Alberts gave a splendid rendition of her difficult solo, the high range being confident and richly toned and an opulence emerging from the depths of her scale. The tenor was heard as a voice in the trio, but it was sufficient to establish a fine, ringing quality from Mr. McCollum, and a control of phrase and technical requirements.

The wisdom should also be pointed out of having the soloists stationed to the rear of the stage. Instead of tempering their solo status, it gave an admirable perspective to their basic function in the text—namely, to contribute to the religious theme and not dominate it.

A bravura performance was given the Prokofieff Symphony. It was virtuoso playing by the orchestra, and the comparative slow tempos that Mr. Bernstein elected to adopt permitted the fullest absorption of its iner workings.

This afternoon's program, conducted by Charles Munch, will include Copland's revision of his Symphonic Ode, for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchrestra; Tchaikovsky's violin concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist, and Schumann's Second Symphony.

[227]

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372

AUG 5 1956

Vacation and Travel Lands

By LEO "BUDDY" MARCEAU

Martha's Vineyard — People have been discovering Martha's Vineyard to their pleasure since 1602, when Bartholomew Gosnold found this idyllic island south of Cape Cod; 100 square miles of hills, dales, forests, sandy beaches, with a wealth of birds, wild flowers, and the wild grapes from which the island received its name.

Explorers who come now—arriving by steamer, ferry or plane from the mainland—still find miles of unspoiled beauty, but they also find every provision for satisfactory vacations: good harbors for sailing; miles of excellent beaches for swimming and swimming; world-renowned fishing; golf courses; bicycles, riding horses and cars to rent; and many good hotels, guest houses and restaurants.

Though millionaries and famous people have summer homes on the island, they fall into the informal Vineyard spirit. There's friendliness wherever you go. Many families come to the island year after year, but the first timers feel just as welcome. The easy, relaxed living is one reason airlines brings vacationers from all over the country to Boston and New York on their way to the Vineyard. Another reason is the wide choice of recreation.

Yachtsmen, and this includes many who rent boats, choose a narbor as headquarters, compete in races there sail their b[illegible]ts round the island. Edgartown, Oak Bluffs, Vineyard Haven and Menensha harbors all have sailing colonies.

Swimmers and sun-bathers head for the blue-green waters which wash the sandy beaches. Oak Bluffs has a public beach; the state beach between Oak Bluffs and Edgartown is six miles long, and South Beach, for surf bathers, runs for 20 miles along the southern coast.

Many anglers, and we are honored to be one of the judges, come to the Vineyard for the annual striped bass derby which will be held this year from Sept. 15 to Oct 15. During this period thousands visit the beaches ll around the island in an effort to beach "that big one". There is little sleep for the striped bass fisherman. It's the surf during the night and boats during the day.

Right now fishermen are getting mackerel and are going out after tuna, marlin, and blue fish, but it is the striped bass which has made the island known to fishermen around the world. The island is so set in the ocean currents that it has not one but four tides, and anglers move with the tides around the island. That's reason for "no sleep."

Oak Bluffs was a cluster of camp meeting tents a short hundred years ago. Tents were replaced with wooden cottages, ornate with scrolls, towers and cupolas in the style of the day. The big tent became a tabernacle set in a park, and is still a center of services, community sings, band concerts and church sales. The sings are held every Wednesday night. On Aug. 15 the annual Illumination Night takes place, with every house and tree on the winding streets and circles decorated with lighted Japanese lanterns.

August 2-25 is the week of the annual fair at West Tisbury, an old time fair with exhibits, cattle and poultry judging, handicrafts and games.

* * *

Here and There—Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will board a special flight of KLM Royal Dutch Airline at Boston, Aug. 14 for a six-week European concert tour at the close of the Berkshire Music Festival. The orchestra, under the direction of Charles Munch, is scheduled to perform in 13 countries. . . .Block Island, located mainland continues to capture the fishing headlines. Leo Garceau recently made news by catching what might be a record rod and reel striped bass weighing 61 ¾ pounds. . . .The fabulous east coast cities of South America—Rio de Janeiro, Santos, Montevideo and Buenos Aires are at their best in the spring. And it's spring south of the Equator when autumn winds start to blow in the United States . . . . .Florida is 600 miles south of the southern boundary of California and the southern tip of the state is 1700 miles north of the equator and misses being in the tropics by 100 miles. South America is east of Miami and Jacksonville is west of Maine, and directly beneath Cleveland, O Pensacola is directly beneat Chicago. . . . .Florida is reall in the Central Standard Tim zone, but for the past 50 year has used Eastern Standard Time The Gulf Stream flows throug the Straits of Florida at the rat of 14 cubic miles per hour, 50 times the hourly discharge of th Mississippi River at flood stage

Grand Manan, that island para dise in the Bay of Fundy, is on of New Brunswick's most unusu al tourist attractions. Champlain and Captain Kidd were among its callers, as was the late President Roosevelt. Accommodations on the island are as modern ate as its residents' way of life six or seven dollars a day wi house and feed you. One membe of the Royal Canadian Mounte Police keeps the peace on Gran Manan, and the island has n jail. . . .The Navajo Indians northwestern New Mexico be lieve a massive, craggy roc mountain that rises steeply fro the plains, is a huge bird whic brought the Navajos to the land far back in history, and the turned to stone. . . .Work is begin this month on a new $7 000,000 tourist center in Montre al, to be located at 15557 She brooke St. East. The centre building a tourist palace with th ground floor devoted to the Pro vince of Quebec and the secon floor accommodating display for each of the other Canadia provinces, is to cost $3,000,000. addition, there is to be a 100-roon motel, office building, shoppin center, convention hall, restaur ant, motion picture theater an a gasoline service station. There are to be swimming pools fo motel with sun courts.

The Scottish clans are gather ing on North Carolina's Grandfa ther Mountain Aug. 19, a day when McRae Meadow above the little resort of Linville will re semble a scene from "Brigadoon" as kilted dancers perform to the music of bagpipes. . . .Martha's Vineyard, that vacationland off Massachusetts, has had six names in the past, besides its present one, American Airlines reports. It was called Noe-pe by the Indians, meaning "island in the streams;" Straumey by Icelanders, meaning an island around which there are strong currents; n Luisa by an Italian navigator; La Soupconnuse by Samuel Champlain; Trexel, in honor of a Netherland island; and Isle of Chapawick. . . . .The Littleton National Bank of Littleton, N. H. announces are recent purchase of the Upland Terrace Hotel by a group of Florida hotel operators. The Upland Terrace, one of three generations of White Mountain Toronto, is adding 400 rooms with a 17-story wing that will bring yal New York hotel, operated by tain Vacation lore. . . . .New York's hotel men are sprucing up their premises in a dozen different ways to satisfy visitors during the annual festival. Hotels have spent more than 10 million dollars to modernize and improve their facilities and are spending this year. . . .The Rothe nation's most famous resort hotels, located in Bethleham, N. H. has a history covering the Canadian Pacific Railroad, in its present capacity up to 1600 rooms. This is at a cost of $10,000. . . . . .

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372

AUG 5 1956

Final Week at Tanglewood Promises Brilliant Climax

Fiedler and De Carvalho to Conduct 'Tanglewood On Parade' Program Thursday, Sanroma Piano Soloist; Francescatti Violin Soloist Today

Lenox, Aug. 4—Four concerts during the coming week — a recital on Wednesday evening (Aug. 8) in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and thre week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (Aug. 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 12) by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed—will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra in Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode," Peter Tchaikowsky's violin concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist, and Robert Schumann's second symphony.

"Parade" Thursday

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (Aug. 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fielder, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final group of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series, when Francescatti and Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theater-Concert Hall, 8.30 p. m.)

Dr. Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening (Aug. 10) concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening (Aug. 11); and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon (Aug. 12) with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

New Piston Symphony

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (Aug. 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's "Festival" Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday with demonstrations at 6 p. m. by all departments—student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4 p. m. At 8.15 p. m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn.

Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and acting head this summer of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross.

Sanroma Soloist

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

A bonus for festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m. (Aug. 11), which Pierre Monteux will conduct and for which a nominal charge of $1 is orchestra's pension fund. The complete programs:

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 8 — 8:30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall—Chamber Music
Zino Francescatti, violin
Artur Balsam, piano
Violin Sonata No. 1 ..... Faure
Violin Sonata ..... Ravel
Violin Sonata in A ..... Franck

THURSDAY, AUG. 9
"Tanglewood On Parade"
4.00 p. m.—Special performance of opera, performance of opera, to be announced, Formal Gardens (For reserved seat and box patrons only)
6.00 p. m.—Student symphony orchestra, Music Shed
Student opera, Theater-Concert Hall
Student composition, Chamber Music Hall
7.00 p. m.—Picnic Supper, student chorus, Porch, Administration Building
8.15 p. m.—Music Shed
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Eleazar de Carvalho, Conductor
Overture ..... Rimsky-Korsakoff
Choros No. 10 ..... Villa-Lobos
Rasga o Coracao
(With Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross)
BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA
Arthur Fiedler, Conductor
Suite from "La Boutique Fantasque" ..... Rossini-Respighi
Piano Concerto in F ..... Gershwin
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma
Bolero ..... Ravel
10.30 p. m.—Drawing for door prizes, Music Shed
11.00 p. m.—Waltzing on the lawn, by the Administration Building

FRIDAY, AUG. 10 — 8.30 P. M.
Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
Symphony No. 102 in B-Flat .... Haydn
Symphony No. 6 ..... Piston
Don Juan ..... Strauss
L'Apprenti Sorcier ..... Dukas
Charles Munch, Conductor

SATURDAY, AUG. 11 — 8.30 P. M.
Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
Festival Overture ..... Freed
Symphony No. 3 in F ..... Brahms
Suite for Orchestra, Opus 9 .... Enesco
Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" Strauss
Pierre Monteux, Conductor

SUNDAY, AUG. 12 — 2.30 P. M.
Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
Symphony No. 3 in E-Flat. "Eroica" ..... Beethoven
Opening and final scenes from Act II of "Die Meistersinger" . Wagner
Soloists: James Pease, bass; Albert Da Costa, tenor; Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Rosalind Hupp, Robert Nagy; John MacCurdy.
Berkshire Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by James Aliferis
Charles Munch, Conductor

The final week of the Berkshire Music Center will see the school in almost continuous activity. Student concerts, open to the public through a voluntary contribution to the school's support, are as follows:

SUNDAY, AUG. 5 — 10 A. M.
Chamber Music Hall
Concert of Chamber Music by students of Dept. I

MONDAY AND TUESDAY, AUG. 6 AND 7 — 8.30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall
(Students of Dept. IV)
"Griffelkin," opera in three acts, by Lukas Foss of the Berkshire Music Center composition faculty. Libretto by Alastair Reid. Orchestra of Dept. I students conducted by the composer. Stage direction by Boris Goldovsky. First complete stage performance.

SATURDAY, AUG. 11 — 3 P. M.
Music Shed
Symphony orchestra concert by students of Dept. I
(Season's scholarships and prizes to be announced during concert)

SUNDAY, AUG. 12 — 10 A. M.
Theater-Concert Hall
Concert of Chamber Music by students of Dept. I

NY Herald Tribune
August 5, 1956.

Miss Olivera Is Soloist

Symphony at Tanglewood Conducted by de Carvalho

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 4.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra began the next to the last week end of the Berkshire Music Festival yesterday evening in Tanglewood's Music Shed where Eleazar de Carvalho conducted and his wife, Jocy de Olivera, made her North American debut as soloist in Ravel's Concerto for Piano and Orchestra.

The Brazilian conductor devoted the rest of his program to music from twentieth century ballet scores, including part of a suite from Henry Barraud's 'La Kermesse," the familiar three dances from Manuel de Falla's "Three Cornered Hat," and virtually all of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" music. The attendance for the cool, fair evening was 6,009.

First Appearance in 5 Years

Mr. de Carvalho is acting head of the Berkshire Music Center's Department of Orchestra and Conducting, but this was his first Festival appearance with the Boston Symphony in five years. Miss de Olivera, who was a pupil of Marguerite Long, has played both in her own country and in Europe where she first was heard last season.

Her playing was technically accomplished, musical in tone, well phrased, tasteful and revelant of detail. It had dynamic finesse and, as a rule, disclosure of mood. At certain moments span of color and volume might have been somewhat wider; the jazzier measures of the work seemed to need a slightly less refined, more assertive statement here and there; the meditative Adagio fared very well.

Orchestra Expressive

The orchestra under Mr. de Carvalho gave the soloist admirably well balanced, co-ordinated and expressively sympathetic co-operation. This concerto, now twenty-four years old, is nt a work which gives a comprehensive test of a pianist's expressive powers; its jazz yesterday seemed pale and the first movement had momentary suggestions of both the Russian and the Spanish works in the same program.

The conductor's interpretation revealed knowledge and authority, definite and clearly transmitted and executed ideas of phrase, volume and expression. Vitality and animation marked all three ballet scores. The third o fthe de Falla dances combined energy with some excess of weight, showing an emphasis of accent which slightly restricted the soaring of the dance melody.

Triumph on "Petrouchka"

Barraud's generally festive music has color and melodic appeal, although its dominating melody is a little overworked. Both the conductor and the orchestra were triumphant in the "Petrouchka" music, in rhythm, color and disclosure of the general atmosphere and the varying emotions of the music.

The usual suite of extracts from this score is familiar, but much of the rest is seldom heard on the concert stage and the whole memorable performance gave no hint of familiarity in its prevailing spirit and vividness of hue; it spoke eloquently for the conductor's understanding and the qualities of the Boston Symphony at its best.

[illegible]

Boston Sunday Globe
August 5

"Ibsen Drama

Final Week at Tanglewood

Four concerts during the coming week—a recital on Wednesday evening in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed—will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on August 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m.)

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening; and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, with demonstrations at 6 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4 p.m.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a.m., which Pierre Monteux will conduct and for which a charge of $1 is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Wednesday, August 8—8:30 p.m.—Theatre-Concert Hall—Chamber Music: Zino Francescatti, violin, and Artur Balsam, piano. Faure: Violin Sonata No. 1. Ravel: Violin Sonata. Franck: Violin Sonata in A.

Thursday, August 9—"Tanglewood on Parade": 4:00 p.m.—Special performance of opera, to be announced; formal gardens (for reserved seat and box patrons only). 6:00 p.m.—Student symphony orchestra. Music Shed. Student opera, Theatre-Concert Hall. Student composition, Chamber Music Hall. 7:00 p.m.—Picnic Supper—Student Chorus, Porch, Administration Building. 8:15 p.m.—Music Shed: Boston symphony Orchestra—Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor: Russian Easter Overture, Rimsky-Korsakoff; Choros No. 10, Rasga o Coracao, Villa-Lobos (with Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross), Boston Pops Orchestra—Arthur Fiedler conductor: Suite from "La Boutique Fantasque," Rossini-Respighi; Piano Concerto in F, Gershwin, soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma. Bolero, Ravel. 10:30 p.m.—Drawing for Door Prizes, Music Shed. 11 p.m.—Waltzing on the lawn by the Administration Building.

Friday, August 10—8:30 p.m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Haydn: Symphony No. 104 in B-flat; Piston, Symphony No. 6; Strauss: Don Juan; Dukas, L'Apprenti Sorcier, Conductor, Charles Munch.

Saturday, August 11—8:30 p.m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Freed: Festival Overture; Brahms: Symphony No. 3 in F; Enesco: Suite for Orchestra, Opus 9; Strauss: Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier", Conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, August 12—8:30 p.m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 in E-flat, "Eroica"; Wagner: Opening and final scenes from Act III of "Die Meistersinger." Soloists: James Pease, bass; Albert Da Costa, tenor; Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Rosalind Rupp; Robert Nagy, John McCurdy. Berkshire Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by James Allieria.

NY Herald Tribune
Sunday, August 5.

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Saturday night's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 5, 1956.

BRAZILIAN LEADS CONCERT AT LENOX

Eleazar de Carvalho Returns After 5-Year Absence—Wife Is Piano Soloist

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 3—Eleazar de Carvalho, young Brazilian conductor who was a familiar figure at Tanglewood in the days of Serge Koussevitzky, tonight conducted his first Berkshire Festival concert in five years. He had with him as piano soloist his 21-year-old wife, Jocy de Oliveira, who made her North American debut playing Ravel's piano concerto.

The rest of the program consisted of ballet music. It opened with "La Kermesse," the first movement of a ballet of the same name by Henry Barraud. The other works were three dances from Falla's "The Three-Cornered Hat" and Stravinsky's "Petruchka."

Senhorita de Oliveira is a comely young lady with red-brown hair who looked like a young goddess in an off-the-shoulder red dress. She proved to be a sensitive performer with a musical and agreeable touch. But she was hardly equal to the particular concerto she played.

In the first movement, the slow, blue-like passages had a pleasant poignance, and her high treble playing in the latter part of the second movement sounded prettily above the rather grave orchestral scoring. But Senhorita de Oliveira did not have enough depth for the deceptively simple long piano solo that opens the slow movement. And she needed far more clarity of articulation and cold, flashing brilliance for the more striking parts of the first and last movements.

Eleazar de Carvalho

Senhor de Carvalho's accompaniment was exceptionally considerate, but even so there were hardly be heard.

When "La Kermesse" opened, one looked at one's program in incredulity. Had they started moments when the pianist could with the last number first and begun with "Petruchka?" No, it just sounded like Stravinsky. Thereafter it suggested several more composers before it came to the end of its nine-minute length with an ear-splitting crescendo.

Senhor Carvalho led the wonderful Falla score with the same application of thick poster colors and heavyhanded rhythms. The men of the Boston symphony gave him what he asked in volume, and the performance aroused lots of enthusiasm, but it did not have real fire and magic.

The tread was inclined to be a little heavy in "Petruchka," too, but this performance had more variety of effect and subtlety of color, and there were many brilliant instrumental passages. It also was received enthusiastically by the audience of 6,000. Then the listeners dispersed quickly under the bright stars toward the avenue of tall pines, for there was a little chill in the clear mountain air.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

AUG 5

Tanglewood Switch Is 'Unhappy'

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass., Aug. 3—Local rustics bedded the stock down with an extra forkful of hay tonight, as primeval cold settled over the Berkshire Music Festival.

It must all have semed a long way from home to the evening's conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, a Brazilian, and to his wife, Jocy de Oleveira, soloist for the concert in Ravel's Piano Concerto. Had they dropped around at the press house, they might have warmed themselves with a cup of home-brew, which to Brayilians, of course, is coffee.

Sounded Like Best

The original program for tonight had promised Hindemith's "Mathis Der Maler," the Ravel, and the complete Stravinsky score for the ballet "Petrouchka." This sounded like one of the summer's best offerings, but for some unhappy reason, the Hindemith was replaced with "La Kermesse," from Henri Barraud's ballet suite of the same name, and three of the dances from "The Three Cornered Hat," in De Falla's score. The result was a salmagundi of the dance, and a poor exchange for the original billing.

The presence of the Barraud was completely inexplicable. In the first place, it was foolish to open and close the evening with works both of which are about fairs, in the second place, to stack the French composer up against Stravinsky did him little good indeed, for the Barraud score is a most commonplace bit of scene-painting, composed of standard, noises and atmospheric cliches.

As a matter of fact, the first half of the program might have been written off anyway, for under the interpretation of Mr. de Carvalho it was dull and in the performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the evening's soloist, it was lackluster. Jocy de Oliveira lacked the pianistic brilliance needed to give vitality and dash to the first and last jazz-type movements of the Ravel, and was completely uncommunicative in the beautifully transcendant, Chopinesque adagio. The orchestra swamped her frequently, and when she was audible, her pianism was awkward and her interpretation colorless.

Picked Up A Bit

In the post-intermission stanza, things picked up a bit. The Stravinsky score for "Petrouchka" is a striking piece of musical business in all departments, and even if only approximated in the performance, still manages to fascinate. Mr. de Carvalho and the orchestra did more than approximate it, both in the reading and playing. The conductor went after it with drive and the orchestra served the music up with vehemence. I would not call it a stylish presentation, nor one that went very far into the poignance of the score, but in the crowd scenes and overall fire - works, it gathered up a reasonable amount of the color Stravinsky had in mind, and lined out the sheerly musical design incisively. Bernard Zighera was the pianist, and with all deference to the pretty Jocy and the fair sex in general, I'm afraid his contribution was the better keyboard offering of the evening.

T.H.P.

[229]

Boston Sunday Globe
August 5

Ibsen Drama

Final Week at Tanglewood

Four concerts during the coming week,—a recital on Wednesday evening in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed—will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on August 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p. m.)

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening; and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

"The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, with demonstrations at 6 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4 p.m.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a.m., which Pierre Monteux will conduct and for which a charge of $1 is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Wednesday, August 8—8:30 p.m.—Theatre-Concert Hall—Chamber Music: Zino Francescatti, violin, and Artur Balsam, piano. Faure: Violin Sonata No. 1. Ravel: Violin Sonata. Franck: Violin Sonata in A.

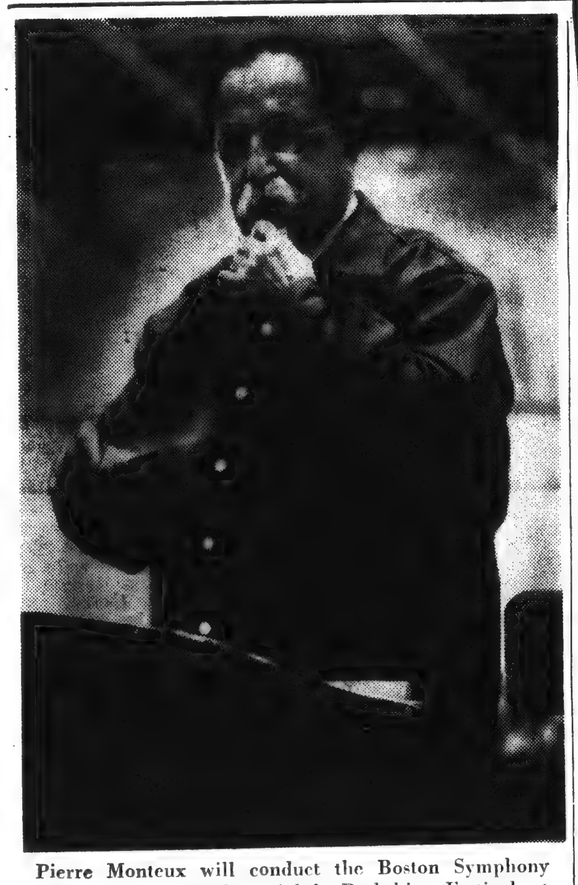
Thursday, August 9—"Tanglewood on Parade": 4:00 p.m.—Special performance of opera, to be announced, formal gardens (for reserved seat and box patrons only). 6:00 p.m.—Student symphony orchestra, Music Shed. Student opera, Theatre-Concert Hall. Student composition, Chamber Music Hall. 7:00 p.m.—Picnic Supper—Student Chorus, Porch, Administration Building. 8:15 p.m.—Music Shed: Boston symphony Orchestra—Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor: Russian Easter Overture, Rimsky-Korsakoff; Chorus No. 10, Rasga o Coracao, Villa-Lobos (with Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross); Boston Pops Orchestra—Arthur Fiedler conductor: Suite from "La Boutique Fantasque", Rossini-Respighi; Piano Concerto in F, Gershwin. Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma. Bolero, Ravel. 10:30 p.m.—Drawing for Door Prizes, Music Shed. 11 p.m.—Waltzing on the lawn, by the Administration Building.

Friday, August 10—8:30 p.m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Haydn: Symphony No. 102 in B-flat; Piston, Symphony No. 6; Strauss: Don Juan; Dukas, L'Apprenti Sorcier. Conductor, Charles Munch.

Saturday, August 11—8:30 p.m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Freed: Festival Overture; Brahms: Symphony No. 3 in F; Enesco: Suite for Orchestra, Opus 9; Strauss: Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier". Conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, August 12—2:30 p.m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 in E-flat, "Eroica"; Wagner: Opening and final scenes from Act III of "Die Meistersinger." Soloists: James Pease, bass; Albert Da Costa, tenor; Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Rosalind Hupp; Robert Nagy, John McCurdy. Berkshire Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by James Aliferis.

NY Herald Tribune
Sunday, August 5.



Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Saturday night's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, AUGUST 5, 1956.

BRAZILIAN LEADS CONCERT AT LENOX

Eleazar de Carvalho Returns After 5-Year Absence—Wife Is Piano Soloist

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 3—Eleazar de Carvalho, young Brazilian conductor who was a familiar figure at Tanglewood in the days of Serge Koussevitzky, tonight conducted his first Berkshire Festival concert in five years. He had with him as piano soloist his 21-year-old wife, Jocy de Oliveira, who made her North American debut playing Ravel's piano concerto.

The rest of the program consisted of ballet music. It opened with "La Kermesse," the first movement of a ballet of the same name by Henry Barraud. The other works were three dances from Falla's "The Three-Cornered Hat" and Stravinsky's "Petruchka."

Senhorita de Oliveira is a comely young lady with red-brown hair, who looked like a young goddess in an off-the-shoulder red dress. She proved to be a sensitive performer with a musical and agreeable touch. But she was hardly equal to the particular concerto she played.

In the first movement, the slow, bluesike passages had a pleasant poignance, and her high treble playing in the latter part of the second movement sounded prettily above the rather grave orchestral scoring. But Senhorita de Oliveira did not have enough depth for the deceptively simple long piano solo that opens the slow movement. And she needed far more clarity of articulation and cold, flashing brilliance for the more striking parts of the first and last movements.

Eleazar de Carvalho

Senhor de Carvalho's accompaniment was exceptionally considerate, but even so there were hardly be heard.

When "La Kermesse" opened, one looked at one's program in incredulity. Had they started moments when the pianist could with the last number first and begun with "Petruchka?" No, it just sounded like Stravinsky. Thereafter it suggested several more composers before it came to the end of its nine-minute length with an ear-splitting crescendo.

Senhor Carvalho led the wonderful Falla score with the same application of thick poster colors and heavyhanded rhythms. The men of the Boston symphony gave him what he asked in volume, and the performance aroused lots of enthusiasm, but it did not have real fire and magic.

The tread was inclined to be a little heavy in "Petruchka," too, but this performance had more variety of effect and subtlety of color, and there were many brilliant instrumental passages. It also was received enthusiastically by the audience of 6,000. Then the listeners dispersed quickly under the bright stars toward the avenue of tall pines, for there was a little chill in the clear mountain air.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

AUG 8

Tanglewood Switch Is 'Unhappy'

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass., Aug. 3—Local rustics bedded the stock down with an extra forkful of hay tonight, as primeval cold settled over the Berkshire Music Festival.

It must all have semed a long way from home to the evening's conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, a Brazilian, and to his wife, Jocy de Oleveira, soloist for the concert in Ravel's Piano Concerto. Had they dropped around at the press house, they might have warmed themselves with a cup of home-brew, which to Brayilians, of course, is coffee.

Sounded Like Best

The original program for tonight had promised Hindemith's "Mathis Der Maler," the Ravel, and the complete Stravinsky score for the ballet "Petrouchka." This sounded like one of the summer's best offerings, but for some unhappy reason, the Hindemith was replaced with "La Kermesse," from Henri Barraud's ballet suite of the same name, and three of the dances from "The Three Cornered Hat," in De Falla's score. The result was a salmagundi of the dance, and a poor exchange for the original billing.

The presence of the Barraud was completely inexplicable. n the first place, it was foolish to open and close the evening with works both of which are about fairs, in the second place, to stack the French composer up against Stravinsky did him little good indeed, for the Barraud score is a most commonplace bit of scene-painting, composed of standard, noises and atmospheric cliches.

As a matter of fact, the first half of the program might have been written off anyway, for under the interpretation of Mr. de Carvalho it was dull and in the performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the evening's soloist, it was lacklustre. Jocy de Oliveira lacked the pianistic brilliance needed to give vitality and dash to the first and last jazz-type movements of the Ravel, and was completely uncommunicative in the beautifully transcendant. Chopinesque adagio. The orchestra swamped her frequently, and when she was audible, her pianism was awkward and her interpretation colorless.

Picked Up A Bit

In the post-intermission stanza, things picked up a bit. The Stravinsky score for "Petrouchka" is a striking piece of musical business in all departments, and even if only approximated in the performance, still manages to fascinate. Mr. de Carvalho and the orchestra did more than approximate it, both in the reading and playing. The conductor went after it with drive and the orchestra served the music up with vehemence. I would not call it a stylish presentation, nor one that went very far into the poignance of the score, but in the crowd scenes and overall fire - works, it gathered up a reasonable amount of the color Stravinsky had in mind, and lined out the sheerly musical design incisively. Bernard Zighera was the pianist, and with all deference to the pretty Jocy and the fair sex in general, I'm atraid his contribution was the better keyboard offering of the evening.

T.H.P.

The opera by Lukas... Festival tomorrow a... score with Boris Gol... from the opera with... title role, John Fare... Constantine. The co... other conductors wh...

Charles Munch, dire... conduct this eve...

"GRIFFELKIN" FEATURED IN THE FINAL WEEK AT TANGLEWOOD

Joe Petrovec

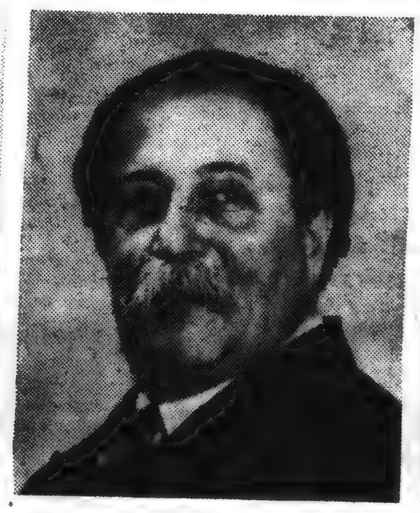
The opera by Lukas Foss will have its first stage production at Berkshire Festival tomorrow and Tuesday. Above, Mr. Foss, at right, discussing his score with Boris Goldovsky, who has staged the work. At right is a scene from the opera with, left to right, Malcolm Bernstein, Mildred Allen in the title role, John Parella, Virginia Babikian, Donald Henrickson and Spelios Constantine. The composer will conduct both performances. Below, four other conductors who will share assignments during festival's last week.

Clemens Kalischer

Charles Munch, director of Berkshire Festival, will conduct this evening, Friday and next Sunday.

Lenscraft Photos

Arthur Fiedler, who will lead the Boston "Pops" Thursday night.



Pierre Monteux, who takes over the baton on Saturday evening.

Egone, Boston

Eleazar de Carvalho, who will lead Boston Symphony Thursday.

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

AUG 5 1956

Some of the summer theatre stars of the week.. Top, left to right, Pierre Monteux, conducting the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival this week; and Peter Kelley as Larry in "Me and Juliet," at the South Shore Music Circus. In the centre, Hope Holiday, as Adelaide, in "Guys and Dolls," continuing at the North Shore Music Theatre. Bottom, left to right: Louis Edmonds as the Roman captain in "Androcles and the Lion," at Wellesley, and Chico Marx in "The Fifth Season," opening at the Boston Summer Theatre tomorrow night.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 56,950

AUG 6 1956

Copland Ode Is Odd

Francescatti Dazzles In Concerto at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — An ultra-modern work by Aaron Copland, coupled with sensible, romantic scores by Tchaikovsky and Schumann were yesterday afteroon's fare at Tanglewood, performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, with Zino Francescatti as violin soloist.

The ultimate evidence of excellence at Tanglewood is an ovation for a soloist in which applause is generously shared by the members of the orchestra. This is what Francescatti received for his dazzling performance of the Tchaikovsky violin concerto.

Most Eloquent Performance

If one were to make a microscopic search for flaws, he could detect slight rhythmic disagreements in the final movement. But these would indeed be tiny blemishes in a performance by both soloist and orchestra that completely disposed of the difficult work in the most eloquent terms, both poetically and technically.

Some violinists beat their instruments black and blue in this concerto. It is, of course, loaded with the most exorbitant demands—even its most fervent emotions are somehow affixed to technical elaborations.

Francescatti played it in luscious, luminous tones, produced without physical stress or strain. Rarely have we seen a performance so confidently delivered. The bristling cadenza of the first movement was disposed of with aplomb. The awkwardly-positioned harmonics were reached with secure fingers and without exploring the near-vicinity of pitch.

The second movement sang lovingly, but unaffectedly, and in the finale, interest was unwavering between reflective sections and digital exhibitions.

One of Francescatti's most ardent fans was Fritz Kreisler, seated in the first row.

Modern Music

Much as we would like to say so, the hue and cry over more modern music on these programs was not abated by the inclusion of Copland's "Symphonic Ode". It probably did more harm than good.

Copland wrote it in 1929 in honor of the Boston Symphony's 50th anniversary. Yesterday's revision was for the same orchestra's 75th anniversary. Not having heard the original version, we can't compare the two, but a second revision is clearly in order—or a brave scrapping of the entire score.

Basically, it is an exercise in sounds, very few of which are downright pleasant. It moves through what the composer describes as five sections. They are indeed distantly related — wandering, filled with such surprises as sudden booms from timpani, clattering brasses, strings going their half-hearted and mysterious ways, and some infectious rhythms in the final section.

For the most part, it left us wondering what was going on —and we feel certain that we were not alone in this ignorance — what brought on what was happening, and what possible course it could follow.

Confused Along With Him

As Copland stated in the program notes: "It is not an ode to anything other than the particular spirit to be found in the music itself. What that particular spirit is, is not for me to say."

We found ourselves as confused as he is. As a listener within our hearing distance expressed it: "Only a great orchestra could get away with that."

The unfettered beauties of the Schumann Symphony No. 2 were welcomed solace. The orchestra played the work supremely well, and whether or not you consider it a great work didn't mar the pleasure of sympathetic ears. Yesterday there were 10,837 listeners.

The next major event at Tanglewood is tonight when Lukas Foss' opera, "Griffelkin" will be premiered before an audience of friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

AUG 6 1956

22,000 Attend Tanglewood's Concerts

Sunny skies and mild weather attracted nearly 22,000 people to the shed and surrounding lawns at Tanglewood Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra perform.

Under the inspired and energetic direction of Leonard Bernstein, the Saturday evening concert was in memory of Serge Koussevitsky. Each year since his death there has been such a memorial concert and each has been directed by Mr. Bernstein, protege of the late Koussevitzky.

The first selection of the evening was the Kyrie and Gloria from the "Mass in C Minor" by Mozart. Unaccepted for more than 100 years after it was first played in 1783, it has now taken its place with the best of Bach and Beethoven.

A favorite of the late conductor, the Mass was ably performed by the festival chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross with exceptional solos by Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Roberts, contralto, and John McCollum.

Mr. Bernstein exercised a perfect command over the superb Boston Symphony Orchestra, which gave a stupendous performance.

The second part of the evening concert was devoted to Prokofieff's "Sympthony No. 5," which was written in 1944, and first performed in this country by Dr. Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The late Prokofieff, although he was a contemporary composer, seems to have written the Fifth Symphony in a modified contemporary form. Robert Magidoff, writing to the New York Times of his interviews with the composer, in Moscow, quoted Serge Prokofieff: "To write a symphony means to me to create a whole world," the writer said. Although he insisted that it was without program, he did say "it is a symphony about the spirit of man."

The audience acclaimed the work with applause that matched the powerful ending of the last movement, and with reason.

The Berkshire Festival Sunday afternoon concert, under the knowing direction of Charles Munch, featured the eminent violinist, Zino Francescatti, who won a standing ovation from an overjoyed audience for his performance of Tschaikowsky's violin concerto.

The program opened with a revised "Symphonic Ode" by Aaron Copland, which was revised for the Boston Symphony orchestra's 75th anniversary. The final work was Schumann's exquisite "Symphony in C Major," performed by the full orchestra.

This evening the opera department of the Berkshire Music center will offer the first stage performance of the opera, "Griffelkin" by Lucas Foss.

Transcript-Telegram (e
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

AUG 6 1956

DeCarvalho To Conduct Aug. 9 At Tanglewood

Eleazar de Carvalho, the artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Thursday evening, Aug. 9, in the first half of the gala concert which will conclude this season's "Tanglewood on Parade", the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, the Chorus No. 10 by Villa-Lobos.

Mr. de Carvalho has returned to Tanglewood this summer, after a five-year absence, as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center. Since his last guest - conducting appearance at the Berkshire Festival in 1951, he has conducted primarily in his own country and in Europe, especially in Paris, Brussels, London and Berlin. In addition to his post with the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, Mr. de Carvalho is general director of the Juventude Musical Brasileira (Brazilian Musical Youth), a society which he founded in 1952.

This season Mr. de Carvalho also conducted the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Berkshire Festival concert of Friday, Aug. 3, and portions of the concerts by the student symphony orchestra of Department I on Thursday evenings.

On the second half of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra will make their third consecutive "Tanglewood on Parade" appearance, playing a Suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque" arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini, Ravel's "Bolero" and the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist.

During the afternoon simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments — student symphony (Department I), chorus (Department II), original compositions (Department III), opera (Department IV), and the amateur division, or Tanglewood Study Group (Department V).

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 253,604

AUG 5 1956

Final Week at Tanglewood

Four concerts during the coming week—a recital on Wednesday evening in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed—will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on August 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p. m.)

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening; and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

"The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, with demonstrations at 6 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4 p.m.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a.m., which Pierre Monteux will conduct and for which a charge of $1 is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Wednesday, August 8—8:30 p.m.—Theatre-Concert Hall—Chamber Music: Zino Francescatti, violin, and Artur Balsam, piano. Faure: Violin Sonata No. 1. Ravel: Violin Sonata. Franck: Violin Sonata in A.

Thursday, August 9—"Tanglewood on Parade": 4:00 p.m.—Special performance of opera, to be announced, formal gardens (for reserved seat and box patrons only). 6:00 p.m.—Student symphony orchestra, Music Shed. Student opera, Theatre-Concert Hall. Student composition, Chamber Music Hall. 7:00 p.m.—Picnic Supper—Student Chorus, Porch, Administration Building. 8:15 p.m.—Music Shed: Boston symphony Orchestra—Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor: Russian Easter Overture, Rimsky-Korsakoff; Choros No. 10, Rasga o Coracao, Villa-Lobos (with Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross). Boston Pops Orchestra—Arthur Fiedler conductor: Suite from "La Boutique Fantasque", Rossini-Respighi; Piano Concerto in F, Gershwin. Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma. Bolero, Ravel. 10:30 p.m.—Drawing for Door Prizes. Music Shed. 11 p.m.—Waltzing on the lawns, by the Administration Building.

Friday, August 10—8:30 p.m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Haydn: Symphony No. 102 in B-flat; Piston, Symphony No. 6; Strauss: Don Juan; Dukas, L'Apprenti Sorcier. Conductor, Charles Munch.

Saturday, August 11—8:30 p.m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Freed: Festival Overture; Brahms: Symphony No. 4 in E minor; Enesco: Suite for Orchestra, Opus 9; Strauss: Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier". Conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, August 12—2:30 p.m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 in E-flat, "Eroica"; Wagner: Opening and final scenes from Act III of "Die Meistersinger." Soloists: James Pease, bass; Albert Da Costa, tenor; Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Rosalind Hupp; Robert Nagy, John McCurdy. Berkshire Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by James Aliferis.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 6 1956

DE CARVALHO CONCERT SET ON THURSDAY

Scheduled as First Half of 'Tanglewood On Parade' Program

Lenox, Aug. 5—Eleazar de Carvalho, the artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Thursday evening in the first half of the gala concert which will conclude this season's "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Mr. de Carvalho will conduct Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, the Choros No. 10 by Villa-Lobos.

Mr. de Carvalho has returned to Tanglewood this summer, after a five-year absence, as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center. Since his last guest-conducting appearance at the Berkshire Festival in 1951, he has conducted primarily in his own country and in Europe, especially in Paris, Brussels, London and Berlin. At the end of the current season at the Berkshire Festival, Mr. de Carvalho will return to Brazil for three weeks with his orchestra. In September, with Herbert von Karajan and Karl Bohm, he will conduct the Berlin Philharmonic during the Festival of Berlin.

This season Mr. de Carvalho also conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire Festival concert Friday and portions of the concerts by the student symphony orchestra of Department I on Thursday evenings.

On the second half of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive "Tanglewood on Parade" appearance, playing a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque" arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini, Ravel's "Bolero" and the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist.

During the afternoon simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments — student symphony, chorus, original compositions, opera and the amateur division, or Tanglewood Study Group.

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 216,173

AUG 5 1956

Post Tours Through New England

By ANNE C. HAMEL
Public Relations Department, ALA

The Berkshire Hills in the western part of Massachusetts are undoubtedly known best for the superb concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. For that very reason tourists often overlook the many other attractions that the Berkshire area has to offer.

The Berkshires are another wonderful feature of the Bay State and if you've never seen them, an extended week end is actually all you need to make the 140-mile trip from Boston to the centre of the mountains and to visit the surrounding area.

About 25 miles before you come to Pittsfield on U. S. Route 20 is Jacob's Ladder, so-called because of the way the road rises over the hills. In this section of the Berkshire Valley you'll find Jacob's Pillow, the famous dance theatre founded by Ted Shawn. Here during the summer months you can see the world's greatest dancers. Continuing on to Lee and then to Stockbridge, you'll want to stop and see one of the presentations of the Berkshire Summer Playhouse. Other special attractions of Stockbridge include the Mission Museum House, built on Prospect Hill in 1739 for John Cargeant, first missionary of the Stockbridge Indians, and the Berkshire Garden Centre with its beautiful model gardens.

If you want to play at being Indian, be sure to stop at the Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary near Lenox. The Trailside Museum located here is the starting point for many of the interesting trails through the valley.

Just before you get to Pittsfield off U. S. 20 in the South Mountain Temple of Music which is famous for its summer chamber music concerts For the museum enthusiast is the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield with its exhibits of art and natural history for all ages.

After Pittsfield your next stop will be the Greylock reservation. Here, Mount Greylock, the highest mountain in the State rises to an elevation of 3505 feet. Improved roads run to the top of the mountain from Lanesboro and North Adams, but these should be attempted only by experienced drivers. On the summit you can climb to the top of the 105 foot war memorial beacon and and get a breaktaking view of the four surrounding States.

U. S. 7 will eventually bring you to picturesque Williamstown, home of Williams College and the Adams Memorial Theatre, one of the finest summer theatres in the East.

The trip home along the Mohawk Trail is perhaps one of the most beautiful that you will ever take.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 6 1956

FRANCESCATTI BRIGHT STAR AT TANGLEWOOD

Noted Violinist's Performance Heard by Audience of 10,837

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 5—A perfect day, a fine program and a brilliant soloist attracted 10,837 people to the Berkshire Music Festival this afternoon. The parking lots looked as though each person had come in an individual car and long before the concert the areas were full.

Kreisler in Audience

Zino Francescatti was the bright star of the program. The eminent violinist provided a performance of Tschaikowsky's violin concerto that elicited a standing ovation. In this performance he was admirably assisted by the Boston Symphony players under the knowing direction of Charles Munch.

Francescatti's large, warm tone, his dazzling technique and his feeling for phrase, all mounted up to an elegant and exciting performance. Rarely have we seen an audience so moved.

In the audience was the great Fritz Kreisler, whose presence was almost as much of an attraction as Francescatti.

The program opened with a

Continued On Page 6

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 22,452

AUG 6 1956

Tanglewood Concert Set Thursday

Eleazar de Carvalho, the artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Thursday evening in the first half of the gala concert which will conclude this season's "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer schol of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, the Choros No. 10 by Villa-Lobos.

Mr. de Carvalho has returned to Tanglewood this summer, after a five-year absence, as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center. Since his last guest-conducting appearance at the Berkshire Festival in 1951, he has conducted primarily in his own country and in Europe, especially in Paris, Brussels, London and Berlin. In addition to his post with the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, Mr. de Carvalho is general director of the Juventude Musical Brasileira (Brazilian Musical Youth), a society which he founded in 1952. Recognized as a public utility in Brazil, sponsored by the Ministry of Education and Culture, the society in 1955 brought the musical education of some 75,000 Brazilian youngsters under its supervision. At the conclusion of the current season at the Berkshire Festival, Mr. de Carvalho will return to Brazil for three weeks with his orchestra. In September, with Herbert von Karajan and Karl Bohm, he will conduct the Berlin Philharmonic during the Festival of Berlin.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4300
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
AUG 6 1956

Miss Robinson Smith Entertains At The Residence, Stockbridge

Photos by Mahn

Among those at the event, attended by 125, were Mrs. Helen D. Lindsay of Sarasota, Fla., housegest of Mrs. William Penn Cresson of Chesterwood, Stockbridge; Leo Montileone of New York, who spent weekend with Mr. and Mrs. George K. Livermore of Stockbridge; Miss Mabel Choate and C. D. Jackson, both of Stockbridge. Party followed the concert.

Miss Robinson Smith greet George Szolsky of Sandisfield and Mr. and Mrs. Zino Francescatti of Monterey. Mr. Francescatti, noted violinist, was soloist at yesterday's Berkshire Festival concert, conducted by Dr. Munch. Party at Miss Robinson Smith's summer home, the Residence, Stockbridge, honored Dr. Munch and Mr. Francescatti.

At Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith's party, Dr. Charles Munch, BSO conductor, third from left, chats with Goffredo Petrassi, one of Italy's foremost composers, guest teacher of composition at Berkshire Music Center, left; Mrs. Massimo Freccia and Mr. Freccia of Washington, Conn. Latter is conductor of Baltimore Symphony.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908
AUG 6 1956

'Tanglewood on Parade' Offers Many Attractions

De Carvalho, Fiedler, Will Be Guest Conductors at Annual Gala Event, as Season Nears Close

Lenox, Aug. 6—Eleazar de Carvalho, the artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Thursday evening, in the first half of the gala concert which will conclude this season's "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, the Choros No. 10 by Villa-Lobos.

Mr. de Carvalho has returned to Tanglewood this summer, after a five-year absence, as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center. Since his last guest-conducting appearance at the Berkshire Festival in 1951, he has conducted primarily in his own country and in Europe, especially in Paris, Brussels, London and Berlin. In addition to his post with the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, Mr. de Carvalho is general director of the Juventude Musical Brasileira (Brazilian Musical Youth), a society which he founded in 1952. Recognized as a public utility in Brazil, sponsored by the Ministry of Education and Culture, the Society in 1955 brought the musical education of some 75,000 Brazilian youngsters under its supervision.

At the conclusion of the current season at the Berkshire Festival, Mr. de Carvalho will return to Brazil for three weeks with his orchestra. In September, with Herbert von Karajan and Karl Bohm, he will conduct the Berlin Philharmonic during the Festival of Berlin.

This season Mr. de Carvalho also conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire Festival concert of last Friday, and portions of the concerts by the student symphony orchestra of Department I on Thursday evenings.

On the second half of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive "Tanglewood on Parade" appearance, playing a Suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque" arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini, Ravel's "Bolero" and the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist.

During the afternoon simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments—student symphony (Department I), chorus (Department II), original compositions (Department III), opera (Department IV), and the amateur division, or Tanglewood Study Group (Department V).

Tickets are now on sale at the box office at Tanglewood in Lenox, for "Tanglewood on Parade." A special afternoon performance of scenes from 20th Century operas will be given in the formal gardens at 4, to which holders of box seats only will be admitted. Seats may be reserved by telephoning Lenox 600.

[2-3]

Second Thoughts on Music

Portions of Five Operas Performed at Tanglewood

Single Acts From 'La Rondine,' 'The Trojans,' 'Aida,' 'Don Carlo' and 'Falstaff' Heard to Advantage; Full Orchestra at Peak

By WILLIARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 4—The quality of performance at the Berkshire Music Festival continues high. One of the strongest departments in the school is the opera department, presided over by Boris Goldovsky. This past week they offered acts from five 19th-century operas including "La Rondine" by Puccini; "The Trojans" by Berlioz and "Aida," "Don Carlo" and "Falstaff" by Verdi. One heard some excellent voices and saw staging, costumes and scenery that were both ingenious and handsome.

Quite the finest offering was the second act of "Don Carlo." John Parella, baritone, handled the difficult aria of King Phillip in a thoroughly artistic manner and the "Inquisitor" of John McCurdy provided some of the finest singing of the entire evening. Another splendid singer was Shirley Carter, who sang "O Don Fatale" in an exciting manner.

Singing Excels

Mr. Goldovsky is particularly fond of "The Trojans." In fact, he offered the American premiere of this opera. In the fourth act, sung in English he offered such fine singers as Marjorie McClung, soprano, and Robert Nagy, one the best tenors we have heard here.

The concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra have been consistenly fine and worthy of larger audiences, but weather has not been kind. Charles Munch directed the orchestra in a program which included the second "Leonore" overture and Petrassi's "Fifth Concerto for Orchestra" in the first half and concluded with the Symphony No. 4 in F minor by Tchiakowsky. The Petrassi opus was one of the works commissioned by the orchestra for its 75th anniversary. Mr. Petrassi is visiting composer at the Center this summer.

To this listener, the work was not an unqualified success. It has many fine moments but there is a lack of direction and focus. It just doesn't get any place. Had we not heard Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" the week before, it is possible Mr. Petrassi's work might have attracted more interest. Mr. Munch has a way with Tchaikowsky, a very personal way. His interpretations remain intimate while not lacking in vigor.

Memorial Elegy

The following night, Mr. Munch offered as his opening work an "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" by Howard Hanson. Lacking any great imagination, this is a sincere work with moments of grandeur. This was another of the commissioned works for the 75th anniversary. Mr. Hanson has been a significant figure among American composers for a long time and, through the Eastman School, has done more than his bit for the American composer.

It was Rudolf Serkin, pianist, who was the bright star of this concert. He drew more than 9000 people to Tanglewood, the largest audience thus far. His playing of Schumann Concerto in A minor was a truly magnificent achievement. It was far more a dramatic reading than we have heard before. It was continually exciting and gave the huge audience just about everything it wanted. Honegger's fifth symphony, a particular favorite with Mr. Munch, and Debussy's "La Mer," a work in which Munch is a supreme interpreter, made up the program.

Burgin Conducts

Sunday afternoon drew some 7000 people in spite of good weather. Some strange sort of planning resulted in concertmaster Richard Burgin conducting the orchestra in a program of Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler. The soloist was violinist Ruth Posselt. (Mrs. Burgin.) Sunday afternoon is a time when Tanglewood should get its largest crowd and it should see to it that such a crowd gets the best Tanglewood has to offer. Mr. Burgin has had a long and distingusihed career, but his drawing power as a conductor is not great. Neither do we feel that Mahler's first symphony or Hindemith's violin concerto are works to attract a Sunday afternoon audience, fine as both are.

The orchestra played its best for Mr. Burgin and Miss Posselt gave a superb performance of the Hindemith violin concerto. Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" ballet suite is a glowing, brilliant work and it was played with an exciting concept. No fault can be found with this program or its performance: it just isn't the sort of program that will bring a large audience to Tanglewood on a Sunday afternoon.

"Tanglewood On Parade"

Don't forget "Tanglewood On Parade" on Thursday. There is no better opportunity to see the Berkshire concerts, chamber music and choral singing. In the evening the Boston Symphony orchestra with Festival chorus will be heard in the "Russian Easter" overture by Rimsky-Korsakoff and "Choros No. 10" by Villa-Lobos. The Brazilian conductor De Carvalho will conduct this portion of the program.

The second portion will be devoted to a real Boston "Pops" program including Gershwin's "Piano Concerto in F" played by Jesus Maria Sanroma. Ravel's "Bolero" and "La Boutique" as arranged by Resphigi, will also be heard. There will be encores. All this should make for a pleasant afternoon and evening at Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music Center will benefit.

In Berkshire Music Festival Concert at Tanglewood

ARTHUR FIEDLER

JESUS MARIA SANROMA

The Boston Pops Orchestra performs in "Tanglewood on Parade" in the Music Shed Thursday night, Aug. 9. Arthur Fiedler will conduct. Pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist in Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F. On Sunday, Aug. 12, Marguerite Willauer, soprano, sings in a concert version of Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

MARGUERITE WILLAUER

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, Aug. 4—Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, of Glendale and New York, will be host to Dr. Charles Munch, music director, Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the distinguished violinist, Zino Francescatti, who makes his home in Monterey, Mass., at her summer home following the tomorrow afternoon Music Shed concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

* * *

Preparations are in full swing at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center for the day-long gala in which all five departments of the Boston Symphony's summer music school will be open for inspection by the public. "Tanglewood on Parade" this year will feature simultaneous demonstrations starting at 6.00 p. m. Thursday by the student symphony orchestra in the Music Shed, by chamber music students in the Chamber Music Hall, by the opera department (combining both active and associate divisions) in the Theater Concert Hall; and at 7.00 p. m. on the steps of the Main House, by the choral department.

* * *

Thursday's four student conductors will share the student symphony four-long program at "Tanglewood on Parade." David Wooldridge, of London, England, will conduct Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride;" Kenneth Schermerhorn, of Schenectady, will lead the student aggregatiopn in Prokofieff's Classical Symphony. Clayton Westerman, of New York City, will be conductor for Franck's Symphonic Variations, with Joy Pottle of Los Angeles, as piano soloist; and Ibert's Escales will be led by Jean-Louis LeRoux, of Montevideo, Uruguay.

* * *

A dividend for holders of box seats and purchasers of reserved seats for the gala evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Eleazar de Carvalho, and by the Boston Pops Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fielder, at "Tanglewood On Parade" on August 9, will be a special program of scenes from 20th Century operas, given by students of Boris Goldovsky in the Formal Gardens of Tanglewood at 4 p. m. The program will include excerpts from Prokofieff's "The Love of Three Oranges," Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande," Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler;" Richard Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier."

* * *

Two government-sponsored visitors to Tanglewood during the forthcoming week are Professor Gilberto Vega, director of the Orchestra de la Guardia Nacional, Nicaragua, who will be staying at the home of Mrs. Jessie Beebe, 30 Merrian St., Pittsfield; and Claudio Carneyro, director of the Conservatory of Music in Oporto, Portugal, who will be a guest at the Hotel Wendell in Pittsfield.

* * *

The Tanglewood Study Group, of largely amateur musicians, will give a piano ensemble and chamber music demonstration at 1 p. m. Saturday, Aug. 11, in the Barn.

* * *

Roman Szulc, retiring as first timpanist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the age of 62, at the close of the Tanglewood season next week, was honored by his confreres of the orchestra at a luncheon to be held at Wheatleigh, residence of Tanglewood's male students, following the morning rehearsal yesterday. Dr. Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony's conductor, presented him with a gold watch as a token of gratitude for his 21 years with the orchestra. His successor is his pupil, Everett J. Firth, 26, of Boston, a member of the orchestra since 1954, who becomes first timpanist when the orchestra's tour of Europe commences in Cork, Ireland on August 24.

At the orchestra ceremony each member of the ensemble was presented with an engraved card attenting to his status in the Boston Symphony, signed by Henry L. Cabot, president of the Board of Trustees; and with bronze lapel buttons, a reproduction in miniature of the orchestra's 75th Anniversary medal. The orchestra committee consists of Gaston Dufresne, Stanley Benson, Paul Keany, George Zazofsky and Harry Dickson.

* * *

The opera indoors part of "Tanglewood on Parade" on August 9 will consist of four scenes: the final ones from Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel," and Tchaikowsky's "Eugene Onegin"; a portion of Act II of Vrdi's "A Masked Ball;" the duet from Puccini's "La Boheme," Act I. This concert by students of the active section of the opera department will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall from 6-7 p. m.

* * *

The season's final student symphony orchestra program will feature the presentation of prizes and awards to students of all departments of the Berkshire Music Center, presented at intermission by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the BSO summer music school at Tanglewood. The final concert, not as customary on a Thursday evening, is to be held Saturday, Aug. 11, at 3 p. m. in the Tanglewood Music Shed.

Final Week at Tanglewood Promises Brilliant Climax

Fiedler and De Carvalho to Conduct 'Tanglewood On Parade' Program Thursday, Sanroma Piano Soloist; Francescatti Violin Soloist Today

Lenox, Aug. 4—Four concerts during the coming week — a recital on Wednesday evening (Aug. 8) in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and thre week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (Aug. 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 12) by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed—will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra in Aaron Copland's "Symphonic Ode," Peter Tchaikowsky's violin concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist, and Robert Schumann's second symphony.

"Parade" Thursday

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (Aug. 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fielder, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final group of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series, when Francescatti and Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theater-Concert Hall, 8.30 p. m.)

Dr. Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening (Aug. 10) concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening (Aug. 11); and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon (Aug. 12) with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

New Piston Symphony

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (Aug. 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's "Festival" Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday with demonstrations at 6 p. m. by all departments—student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4 p. m. At 8.15 p. m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn.

Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and acting head this summer of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross.

Sanroma Soloist

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

A bonus for festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m. (Aug. 11), which Pierre Monteux will conduct and for which a nominal charge of $1 is orchestra's pension fund. The complete programs:

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 8 — 8:30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall—Chamber Music
Zino Francescatti, violin
Artur Balsam, piano
Violin Sonata No. 1 ..... Faure
Violin Sonata ..... Ravel
Violin Sonata in A ..... Franck

THURSDAY, AUG. 9
"Tanglewood On Parade"
4.00 p. m.—Special performance of opera, performance of opera, to be announced. Formal Gardens (For reserved seat and box patrons only)
6.00 p. m.—Student symphony orchestra, Music Shed
Student opera, Theater-Concert Hall
Student composition, Chamber Music Hall
7.00 p. m.—Picnic Supper, student chorus, Porch, Administration Building
8.15 p. m.—Music Shed
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Eleazar de Carvalho, Conductor
Overture ..... Rimsky-Korsakoff
Choros No. 10 ..... Villa-Lobos
(With Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross)
BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA
Arthur Fiedler, Conductor
Suite from "La Boutique Fantasque" ..... Rossini-Respighi
Piano Concerto in F ..... Gershwin
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma
Bolero ..... Ravel
10.30 p. m.—Drawing for door prizes, Music Shed
11.00 p. m.—Waltzing on the lawn, by the Administration Building

FRIDAY, AUG. 10 — 8.30 P. M.
Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
Symphony No. 102 in B-Flat .... Haydn
Symphony No. 6 ..... Piston
Don Juan ..... Strauss
L'Apprenti Sorcier ..... Dukas
Charles Munch, Conductor

SATURDAY, AUG. 11 — 8.30 P. M.
Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
Festival Overture ..... Freed
Symphony No. 3 in F ..... Brahms
Suite for Orchestra, Opus 9 ..... Enesco
Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" Strauss
Pierre Monteux, Conductor

SUNDAY, AUG. 12 — 2.30 P. M.
Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
Symphony No. 3 in E-Flat, "Eroica" ..... Beethoven
Opening and final scenes from Act II of "Die Meistersinger" ..... Wagner
Soloists: James Pease, bass; Albert Da Costa, tenor; Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Rosalind Hupp, Robert Nagy; John McCurdy
Berkshire Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by James Allferis
Charles Munch, Conductor

The final week of the Berkshire Music Center will see the school in almost continuous activity. Student concerts, open to the public through a voluntary contribution to the school's support, are as follows:

SUNDAY, AUG. 5 — 10 A. M.
Chamber Music Hall
Concert of Chamber Music by students of Dept. I

MONDAY AND TUESDAY, AUG. 6 AND 7 — 8.30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall
(Students of Dept. IV)
"Griffelkin," opera in three acts, by Lukas Foss of the Berkshire Music Center composition faculty. Libretto by Alastair Reid. Orchestra of Dept. I students conducted by the composer. Stage direction by Boris Goldovsky. First complete stage performance.

SATURDAY, AUG. 11 — 3 P. M.
Music Shed
Symphony orchestra concert by students of Dept. I
(Season's scholarships and prizes to be announced during concert)

SUNDAY, AUG. 12 — 10 A. M.
Theater-Concert Hall
Concert of Chamber Music by students of Dept. I

10 Top Records

(Selected from a poll of listening audiences)

Popular

"The Street Where You Live," V. Damone (Mercury).
"Allegheny Moon," Patti Page (Mercury).
"I Want You, I Need You," Elvis Presley (Victor).
"How Little We Know," F. Sinatra (Capitol).
"Whatever Will Be, Will Be," D. Day (Columbia).

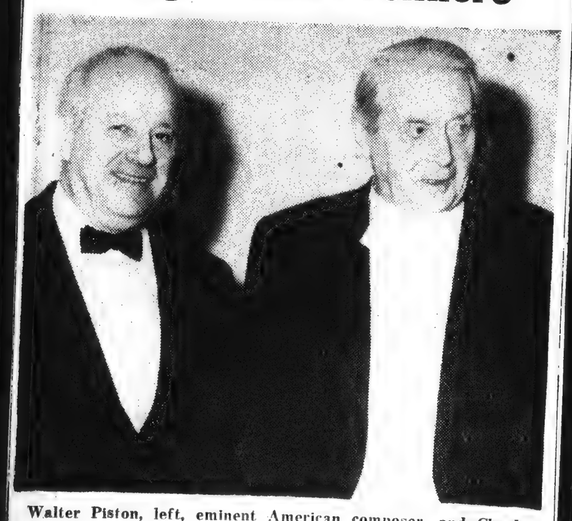
Classical

"Best-Loved Serenades," Boyd Neel Orchestra (Epic).
Concerto (Mendelssohn), David Oistrakh-Phila. Orch (Columbia).
Symphony No. 9 (Beethoven), Karajan conducting (Angel).
"Operatic Arias," Renata Tebaldi, soprano (London).
"Boston Pops Picnic," A. Fiedler conducting (RCA Victor).

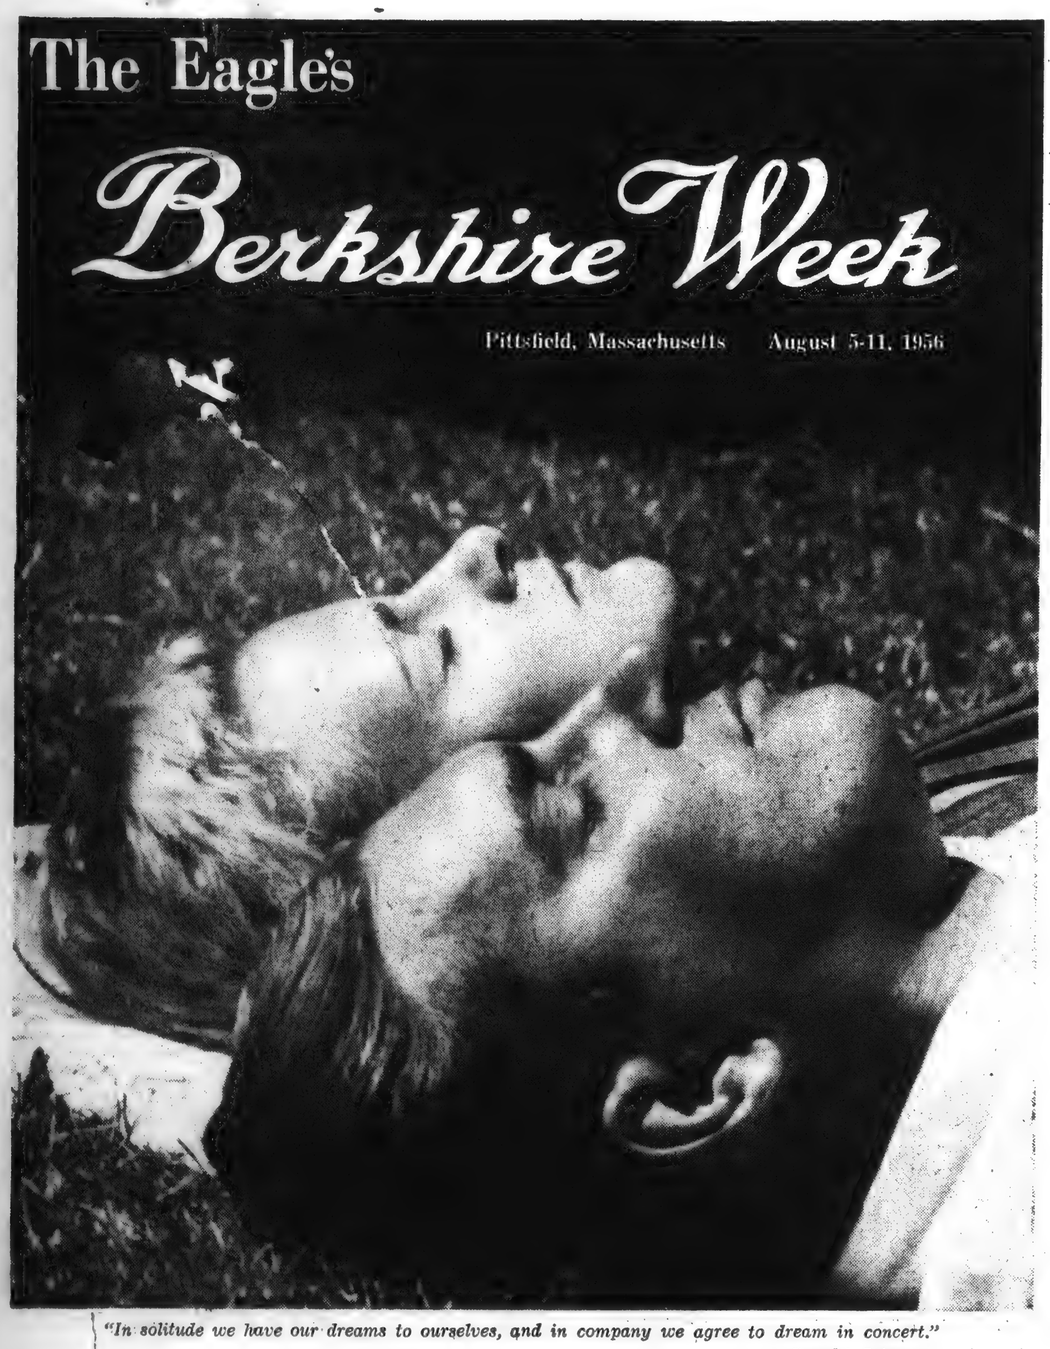
In Berkshire Concerts

A festival of early music by the New York Pro Musica Antiqua takes place at South Mountain Temple of Musica, Pittsfield, on four Sunday afternoons, Aug. 12, 19, 26 and Sept. 2. Seen in this picture are Russell Oberlin, Charles Bressler and Arthur Squires with musical director, Noah Greenberg, third from left.

Tanglewood Premiere



Walter Piston, left, eminent American composer, and Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Piston's Symphony No. 6 will receive its Tanglewood premiere on Friday night, Aug. 10, in the Music Shed. Dr. Munch will conduct.



"In solitude we have our dreams to ourselves, and in company we agree to dream in concert."
—Samuel Johnson

A Midsummer Day's Dream

Photos and Text

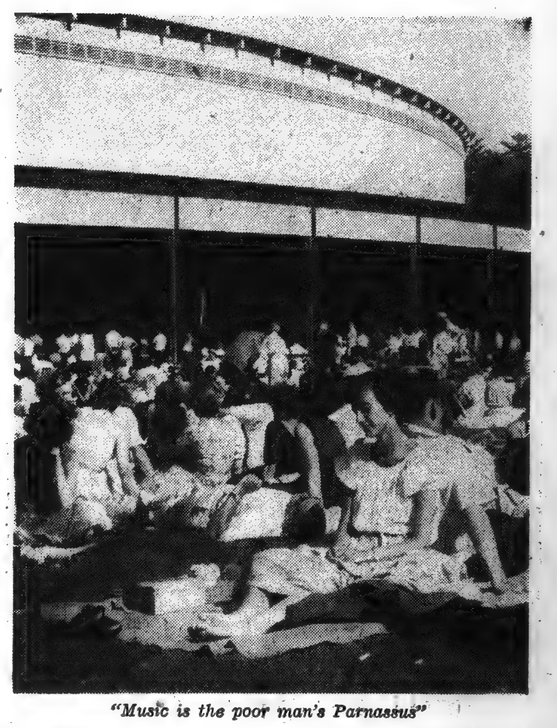
By William Tague

ONCE THE CONCERT has begun, a condition resembling coma, hypnosis, the effects of opium or simple sleep invariably seizes a large percentage of the prone and near-prone audience on the lawn at Tanglewood.

No respecter of age, sex or social standing, the phenomenon shuts the eyes of its victims from a few moments after the first wave of the conductor's baton until applause signals intermission and the spell is broken. The same thing happens during the concert's second half.

There are three major causes for this condition. In order of increasing frequency, we hope, they are: One, the listener has had a hard night and is sleeping it off; two, he or she is getting a sun tan and the sun is in his or her eyes. Three, the listener is a true lover of music whose eyes are closed to blot out all impressions except pure sound.

A fourth, much less common, cause is that the listener is a chronic daydreamer who finds that everything about Tanglewood aggravates this wonderful affliction.



"Music is the poor man's Parnassus"
—Emerson

"Rings on her fingers and bells on her toes,
And so she makes music wherever she goes."
—"Nursery Rhymes of England"

"Where there is music there can't be mischief."
—Cervantes

"Music is well said to be the speech of angels."
—Thomas Carlyle

"If music be the food of love, play on."
—Shakespeare

"Music is the eye of the ear."
—Thomas Draxe

Camera Angles: Tanglewood's Gorgeous People

By William Tague

TANGLEWOOD is a wonderful place for taking pictures. Its setting amid the lovely Berkshire scenery excites the pictorial photographer. Its music alternately soothes and excites photographers who enjoy music. What excites me, though, are the gorgeous acres of people, most of them absorbed in music and oblivious of the camera, who inhabit the great lawn around the Shed. One activity of these lawn habitués is portrayed on the cover of this issue. How the photographs were taken might be of interest to other photographers (also to the subjects, who were not conscious of being photographed).

Telephoto Lenses

My equipment consisted of a Leica Model II F camera and three telephoto lenses, 90 mm, 135 mm and 350mm. The latter lens is not a Leica product but a 15-inch Wollensak lens made for a Speed Graphic. It is mounted on a reflex housing and bellows attachment which permits focusing on a ground glass. A double cable release for simultaneously tripping the camera shutter and flipping the reflex housing's mirror out of the way completes this unorthodox, but effective rig. Closeups of faces can be made with it from 30 feet away. I usually shoot at 1/500 second to eliminate all chances of camera movement, but have taken sharp pictures at speeds as low as 1/50 second.

The cover pictures were taken last Sunday and I spent the whole concert roaming through the crowd on the lawn. I didn't hear the music. Quite a few other people were roaming around, too, on various quests, including three or four photographers. One of these was Wilbur E. Garrett of the National Geographic Magazine, who was using two new Leicas and color film. I was using an old Leica and black and white, Tri-X film as always. Getting back to the point, there is no objection to walking about in the crowd on the lawn unless you tread on someone. You can tiptoe quite near to a rapt listener or a couple wrapped up in themselves.

Telephoto lenses are by no means essential. They only make full-face studies easier. Used with discretion at close range, less expensive equipment is fully capable of similar results. For pictures of a group of people the telephoto lens is awkward, often impossible.

I have forgotten which pictures were taken with what lens. The majority, I recall, were taken with the 350 mm. I burned up six 20-exposure rolls of film, which may account for my losing track. The unpublished pictures in many instances were near-duplicates of the same subject taken at different angles and exposures. Others didn't fit in with the theme, but can be used later. Your picture may be in the collection if you were at Tanglewood last Sunday. Keep reading The Eagle and you may see yourself sometime.

Listening on the lawn at Tanglewood

Museum Shows Vickery Photos

MORE THAN average interest is reported by officials of the Berkshire Museum in the current exhibit of photographs by Charles H. Vickery. It opened Wednesday, and will remain on view all month.

Mr. Vickery is vice president of the E. D. Jones & Sons Co., and lives in New Lebanon, N.Y. He has exhibited at the Museum several times. The current show is comprised of 26 photographs, each 14 by 17 inches.

The subject is Haiti. All pictures were taken with a Leica, hand-held, since Mr. Vickery is opposed to the use of tripods, although he employs slow shutter speeds.

Regarded by camera fans as an expert in the field of 35 mm photography, Mr. Vickery works almost entirely in black and white. In taking the Haitian pictures, he used a wide-angle lens, a telephoto, and a normal lens.

Problems of contrast due to the strong sunlight in the semi-tropics require considerable skill in planning the pictures. However, the human subjects in his photographs are entirely unposed.

It Could Be Verse

And Quickly Settled

If you would visit us in haste,
To take the road you sort of turn like,
If distance you prefer erased,
We hope you wait, and take the Turnpike.

It's fine to speed in this green heaven,
Plus costs, it may be five times thirty.
The copse ain't green on U.S. 7,
The gate is run by Judge Alberti.

ALBERT M. JACKSON
Becket

Those Chromium Cars

Grunts From an Old Grouch

THE OLD GROUCH is plenty peeved because, so he says, he can't get an automobile that looks like an automobile for less than $27,000. "Used to be possible to get a car that looked like an automobile, not a canal boat," he growled. "It didn't have a set of chromium false teeth stuck out two feet in front of its radiator. It didn't have its tail lights elevated in contraptions that look like the rudder of an Eastern Airlines Silver Falcon. Its top wasn't so low that you couldn't get into the darn thing without knocking your hat off. (If you don't wear a hat you knock your head off.) It didn't have its driver's seat so low and its hood so high and wide that you could never see where your right front wheel is.

"It was painted a conservative color and it wasn't a 'two-tone job.' It wasn't raspberry pink and cream white, with magenta upholstery. It wasn't 'glacier blue.' It looked like a piece of machinery built to travel on land, not a chromium-plated canal boat painted up like a Jezebel or a Mexican sunset."

The Old Grouch heaved a great sigh. "Remember the old Packard twin-six, sleek and clean with its stylish shield design framing the radiator? Remember John Shepard in his, with the top down and the wind singing in his whiskers? When I see the present-day Packard looking like all the other bedizened canal boats, it fair makes me sick. It has tried to keep a hint of the old shield design in the upper lip of its chromium false teeth, but what a pathetic relic of the distinguished style which once characterized our high-grade automobiles in the days when they looked like automobiles and you could park 'em without smashing your right front fender."

"If you feel so strongly about it," somebody said, "why don't you get one of those cars you mention, which still look like automobiles? I suppose you mean a Rolls-Royce."

"There are 27,000 reasons why I don't, you poor idiot," grunted the Old Grouch.

Night and Day

DAY AND NIGHT this sixth issue of "Berkshire Week," summer supplement of The Eagle, represents a sort of round-the-clock operation by Bill Tague, our art director, chief photographer and camera columnist. For years he has itched to put into a group of pictures some of the off-beat things he has seen while the music played at Tanglewood. From this yen emerged our cover, picturing daytime dreamers who inhabited the lawns outside the Shed Sunday afternoon, creating "A Midsummer Day's Dream." For the back page, Tague focused on the music festival at Ellenville in New York's Catskills. On a recent picture-report trip there he found "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in production. It was staged in a tent, recalling Tanglewood's early days.

Fielding

Photo Trio

To wrap it all up, Tague's "Camera Angles" column (up above) tells how he took the Tanglewood shots. Some of his pictures, not used, were more intimate than printable; it is startling to see how an embrace on the grass in the view of thousands grows in intimacy and impact when reproduced in a photo.

Three other major pictorial contributions are by Vera V. Fielding and Bartlett Hendricks, both of Pittsfield, and by Clemens Kalischer of Stockbridge, the latter doing a second installment (Page 8A) of portraits of Berkshire "bigwigs," a photo gallery he produced in the 1955 "Berkshire Week."

Mrs. Fielding, who, like Mr. Hendricks is a star of the Berkshire Museum Camera Club, explored little-known Berkshire waterfalls to bring back pictures for William Annin's Page 3A article.

Bart Hendricks used both camera and typewriter for his report (Page 11A) on "a little visitor" who came from the New York Herald Tribune Fresh Air Fund to the Hendricks home on Fort Hill Avenue. Science curator of the Berkshire Museum, Bart had a big hand in the 1954 birth of "Berkshire Week," creating a series of "Backroad Berkshire" tours.

Biggest tour in the current issue is one reported on Page 4A by roving columnist Richard Happel. It was, he says, his roughest assignment in a series devoted to checking up on the natural wonders of the Berkshires. The thing that made it tough was finding snow in July. This, we insist, should have been child's play for a newsroom-sharpy whose regular job is finding ways to bring out the meaning in reporters' twisted sentences.

—R.B.K.

Fish Pond Maps Offered by State

FIFTY-SIX of the state's most popular fishing ponds have been mapped by the state Division of Fisheries and Game, including eight in Berkshire County and one just over the line in Hampshire County.

Maps show depths, access points and shorelines. On the back is descriptive information on stocking history, fish population and fishing outlook.

Limited quantities have been printed and a maximum of single copies of five different ponds will be furnished each person who sends in a stamped, self-addressed, legal-size envelope. It is essential that the name of the pond or ponds be stated.

Maps for Berkshire County show Windsor Pond; Greenwater Pond, Becket; Stockbridge Bowl; Pontoosuc Lake and Onota Lake, Pittsfield; Richmond Pond; North Pond, Florida; and Cheshire Reservoir. Near by in Hamshire County is Crooked Pond, also known as Plainfield Pond, in Plainfield.

Requests for maps may be addressed to the Information and Education Section, Fisheries and Game Field Headquarters, Westboro, Mass.

Millions in Diamonds

AMONG poor boys of the Berkshire area who made good, rather overlooked is Dr. Russel H. Conwell. Born on a Worthington farm in 1843, he earned about 11 million dollars before he died in 1925. One of his most famous lectures was "Acres of Diamonds" which he gave more than 6,000 times. It was a story he heard in Mesopotamia, of a farmer who sold his farm and set out to make a fortune in the diamond fields. He searched all his life in vain, then acres of diamonds were found on his old farm.

Rebuttal on 'Purple Cow'

FAME often is based on the least likely events. The late Gelett Burgess wrote 30 books before his death in 1951 at the age of 85. However he's best known as author of the four-line jingle, "The Purple Cow," selected as the name of the Williams College humor magazine.

Mr. Burgess after years of having "The Purple Cow" thrown at him, wrote this antidote:

Ah, yes, I wrote "The Purple Cow,"
I'm sorry now I wrote it.
But I can tell you anyhow
I'll kill you if you quote it.

The original "Purple Cow" was published in The Lark magazine in 1895 as follows:

I never saw a purple cow,
I never hope to see one;
But I can tell you, anyhow,
I'd rather see than be one.

History and Science

Berkshire Museum

On South Street, center of Pittsfield. Hours: Tuesday through Saturday, 10-5; Sunday, 2-5; closed Mondays. Free of charge except where noted. Permanent displays: Rooms on biology, minerals, birds and Berkshire County animals. "Animals of World in Miniature" room contains dioramas by Louis Paul Jonas. In "Hall of Man" is one of Robert E. Peary's North Pole sledges. Berkshire Room features large relief model of county. Historical Room (small charge to individuals, free to schools and camps) includes original "One Hoss Shay," made famous in poem by Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Crane Museum

Off Main Street (Route 9), Dalton, near Crane & Company office. Exhibits, housed in old stone mill, trace history of fine-paper making from Revolutionary times with emphasis on the manufacture of American currency paper and foreign bank notes. Open free of charge 2-5, Monday through Friday.

Mission House

On Main Street in center of Stockbridge. Built in 1739 for John Sergeant, first missionary to the Stockbridge Indians. Moved and restored by Miss Mabel Choate as a memorial to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate. Open Mondays through Saturdays from 10 to 12:30 and from 2 to 6; Sundays, from 2 to 6. Owned by Trustees of Reservations. Small admission charge.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

AUG 6 1956

B. Eagle

Bernstein at Tanglewood

By Jules Wolffers

Lenox, Mass.

There were, so to speak, two Leonard Bernsteins on the podium last Saturday evening for the 19th program of the current Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. The first Mr. Bernstein was wholly admirable.

In a program dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitsky —founding genius of the Berkshire Music Center, and Mr. Bernstein's mentor and friend— the opening work was Mozart's great and glorious Mass in C minor, K. 427. Left in an incomplete state by the composer, the sublime expressiveness of the Kyrie and Gloria are sufficient to place the work alongside the greatest religious works of Bach and Palestrina.

The performance matched the music. The conductor brought all of his undoubted talent to bear on the music for results that were at once dramatic and lofty. Aided by splendid singing from the soloists—Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, John McCollum, tenor —and aided also by the fine response of the Festival Chorus, the conductor welded these forces into the glowing orchestral fabric for altogether superlative results.

Not the least factor in the success of the presentation was the way Mr. Bernstein immersed himself in the music. He devoted himself wholeheartedly to the score, and his directions were entirely in keeping with the nature of the work and the occasion.

The prolonged ovation at the end was a well-deserved tribute which the conductor shared generously with the orchestra, the soloists, and with Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke deVaron, who trained the chorus.

* * *

After the intermission came the Prokofiev Symphony No. 5, where the other Bernstein took command. The work was not only conducted, it was acted, pantomimed, and danced. So extreme did Mr. Bernstein's platform behavior become that one could pay attention to the music only by resolutely turning away one's eyes from him. When one did so, it was apparent that the performance was excellent.

It was somewhat of a relief to return to Charles Munch for the Sunday afternoon program. Opening with Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, the conductor made the most of its exciting vigor and minimized the sections which falter somewhat in relation to the whole.

This work caused some comment this past season when it was learned that this 75th-anniversary commission turned out to be only a slightly revised version of the same work which the composer had presented as a 50th-anniversary commission. It now appears that the composer had first pleaded lack of time to write something new, but had been persuaded to rework the Ode which had not been heard again since its first performance. One can scarcely agree that Mr. Copland was well-advised, nor can one agree with the composer's own affection for the Ode which received only token applause from the audience yesterday in spite of Dr. Munch's skilled and careful reading.

* * *

The big surprise of the program was Zino Francescatti, who showed a virtuosity, zest, and enthusiasm not previously associated with his musicianly and impeccable violinism. Dazzling speed and acrobatic bowing help rather than hinder the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto.

With all the violinist's good taste and refinement remaining unimpaired under the virtuostic onslaught, the result came close to a definitive utterance. Greatly supported by Dr. Munch's completely sympathetic and closely integrated accompaniment, the performance brought down the house.

Dr. Munch's reading of the Schumann Symphony No. 2 closed the program and the weekend. Only one more week of the festival remains before the orchestra departs on its European tour.

TEL. 5111

Young Musicians Present Concert For Hospital Sick

Pittsfield, Aug. 5 — Fifty students from the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood came to Pittsfield this afternoon and played a two hour concert of light classical music for the patients, Sisters of Providence and nurses at St. Luke's Hospital. The student musicians were led by composer-conductor Eleazar De Carvalho. The musicians set up on a lawn in the rear of the hospital adjoining Madonna Hall, so patients could be wheeled to the gallery to enjoy the music.

Rooming House Owners Report Trouble to Cops

Pittsfield, Aug. 5—Police were called upon for assistance from two local rooming house owners today for help in problems arising from rentals to Tanglewood concert goers.

Mrs. Frances Kraay, 422 West Housatonic St. called to say that two girls to whom she had rented rooms Saturday afternoon had never returned and she wondered what to do with the baggage. That problem was solved at short time later when the Misses Barbara McElray and Phyllis Weisberg of Albany, N. Y., came to police headquarters to seek aid in locating their rooming house. After attending the concert last night they couldn't find their lodgings, although they didn't tell the officers where they spent the night. The ladies and their luggage were quickly reunited.

Later today, Mrs. Franklin Scace of 1150 Barker Rd. told a slightly different tale. She rented rooms to three people who registered from Clark-Mills, N. Y., and they returned from the concert all right. However, when they left today Mrs. Scace found that they had taken two fancy feather pillows and cases valued at $20 each, according to the police report.

Music

2 Tanglewood Concerts Draw 22,000

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

TWENTY-TWO THOUSAND people heard two exhilarating concerts at Tanglewood over the weekend. Slightly over eleven thousand heard Leonard Bernstein conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival chorus in a program of Mozart and Prokofieff Saturday night and just a few less than that number heard Charles Munch yesterday afternoon in a program of Copland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Both concerts devoted a part of their programs to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky: Bernstein played a part of the Mozart C minor Mass, (K427) and the fifth Prokofieff symphony which the late Boston conductor had introduced to this country; Munch opened his program with the Ode that Copland wrote in 1929 for the Boston orchestra's 50th anniversary and then revised last year for the occasion of the orchestra's 75th anniversary.

* * *

COPLAND was called to the stage by Munch to acknowledge the applause the huge audience accorded his Ode but it appeared to us in some degree a succes d'estime. It is heavily orchestrated and reaches levels of proud triumph toward the end. The destination however, was not always clear and it was long arriving there. After a sustained episode of full power, Copland, surely a master of his metier, provides a contrast but asks the strings to apply mutes against a complete reed section playing without restraint. Such devices leave queries in the minds of listeners who have not been dulled by the excessive insistence on one idiom. The rhythmic pattern was extremely complex and Munch led to devote his main attention to his score.

The Tchaikovsky violin concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist was a tremendous performance. The violinist and the conductor functioned as parts of the same operation.

Aaron Copland

Francescatti's tone was large and full, warm and sensitive, and his command of his instrument so complete that not a single note was slighted or given less than its exact value. His bow always seemed to have great reserves, and his conception was a genuine and thorough one. He seemed to play from inside the fiddle, if that were possible, instead of upon it. The terrifying difficulties were dashed off with clarity, dexterity and fire, and the canzona was melting in its warmth and appeal.

* * *

ONE MIGHT have debated the validity of the extreme speed he took in the finale but that in itself was no obstacle at all. The orchestra under Munch gave him most agile support. The heavy-heeled Russian dance of Tchaikovky in this version became a lighter, less meaningful piece of ballet music.

The final half of the program was devoted to the memory of Robert Schumann whose death occurred just a century ago. The two central movements of the second symphony are most characteristic. The scherzo has a light vivacity we commonly attribute to Mendelssohn; the adagio is a typical Schumann Lied of deep compassion. The Boston string section was brilliant and poetically lyrical in the respective movements. Munch struck extremely happy tempi in both cases. The first trio showed off the Boston reed choir in all its glory and it was an added pleasure to hear delicacy amidst two programs which were predominantly percussion and brass a tutta forza.

* * *

THE CHORUS. Saturday night had been trained by Hugh Ross and Lorne Cooke de Varon. They responded to Bernstein's intense and violent demands with great body of tone and often with effective climaxes. The soloists were placed at the back of the stage, on the top row of the bleachers and that location proved to be an excellent place from which to be heard. Phyllis Curtin, was in spendid voice and her solo was projected without effort. Mozart gives the soprano an unusual tonal range, descending to registers not commonly called upon. On the other hand, the contralto, Eunice Alberts, later has a solo which is operatic in its florid passages and poaches well into the territory of her soprano colleague. Miss Alberts encompassed her grateful assignment with extraordinary competence. Tenor John McCollum had but one allotment, and that only in concert with his two partners.

Bernstein was not content to let the Kyrie and the Gloria, the sections sung Saturday, remain conventionally sober and devout, an attitude in which Mozart, in this particular instance, gave him much abetment. The result was a fervid and excited Mass, more animated and fiery than normally expected of devotional music, but tonally glowing and pulsating.

* * *

KOUSSEVITZKY introduced the Prokofieff fifth symphony to Tanglewood less than a year after he had given it its first American performance in Boston, and he repeated it twice here thereafter. Bernstein kept demanding greater responses from the men of the orchestra, insisting on more volume, pleading for more intensity, begging for more warmth, appealing for more vibrancy. The methods he used by which he hoped to receive these boons were highly dramatic, emotionally graphic and physically shameless. When the strings had pressed their bows to the wood, and the wind expended their last puff of breath, Bernstein was not satisfied and asked for more. When it was apparent to all but Bernstein that it could not be forthcoming, it became apparent to the audience that he was conducting them and not the orchestra. The validity of this procedure has not been proven. That the audience approved of it is not debatable for they recalled him and gave him and overwhelming ovation.

* * *

PROKFIEFF'S symphony is highly impressive and entertaining music. It was war time, 1944, when Prokofieff was working on it and the Russians were still locked in combat with the Nazis and men were deeply troubled. Prokofieff gave it no program background but the moods of introspection and exaltation can be traced easily to the fury of the military struggle. Bernstein evoked these tempers vividly.

[237]

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

AUG 6 1956

21,941 Attend Tanglewood Concerts Over Week-End

The Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood had its biggest week-end of the season, with 21,941 persons attending the shed concerts Saturday evening and yesterday afternoon.

Koussevitzky Memorial

The Saturday program was the annual memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, conducted by his former pupil, Leonard Bernstein. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival chorus and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum were heard in the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor in the first half of the program. The second half was devoted to Prokofieff's Fifth symphony. There were 11,104 persons on hand.

Yesterday afternoon, with the weather remaining ideal, concert-goers again filled the big shed to capacity and spread out over the Tanglewood lawns. Charles Munch was on the podium and Zino Francescatti was soloist in Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto. Also heard was Copland's Symphonic ode and Schumann's Second symphony.

The festival now moves into its final week, with three special concerts in addition to the four regular programs.

The Opera Programs

Tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock in the theater-concert hall the students of the Music center's Opera department will present the first complete stage performances of "Griffelkin," an opera in three acts by Lukas Foss. Mr. Foss is a member of the Music center composition faculty. Admission to those concerts will be by making a contribution to the school through its "Friends" organization.

On Thursday evening there will be the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit program, featuring the Boston Symphony, the Boston Pops orchestra and demonstrations by all five departments of the Music center. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the symphony orchestra, while Athur Fiedler will be on the podium with his Pops orchestra.

The regular Festival concerts are scheduled Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

The Wednesday program will be the last in the weekly chamber music concerts, held in the theater-concert hall. Performing will be Mr. Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam. Works by Favre, Raveland and Franck will be heard.

Final Shed Concerts

The Friday, Saturday and Sunday programs will be in the big shed, featureing the full Boston Symphony.

Mr. Munch will conduct music by Hayden, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas on Friday evening. Pierre Monteux will be on the podium in a concert of music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday, and the festival will conclude Sunday afternoon with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony and thr third act from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger." Soloists for that will be James Pease, Albert da Costa and Marguerite Willauer.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

AUG 6 1956

Brilliant Warmth To Friday's Concert At Tanglewood

Rhythms danced and caught fire under the baton of Brazilian Eleazar De Carvalho who directed the Boston Symphony orchestra in a concert at Tanglewood Friday night and brought a brilliant warmth to the ears of the audience sitting in the shed and covering the lawn.

The season's small concert audiences have been blamed on the type of programs, the popularity of the artists, or just that "the concerts aren't what they used to be." A directing personality who can add warmth to perfected technique reminiscent of the concerts led by the late Serge Koussevitzky is another reasonable answer.

Such a director is De Carvalho who has been active as a conductor in the Brazilian Symphony orchestra and was a member of the conducting faculty at the Berkshire Music center from 1947 to 1951.

Making her North American debut in the same performance was his wife, Jocey De Oliveira, piano soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Sheer magic of rhythm colored Manuel De Falla's Three Dances from the ballet "The Three-Cornered Hat," the piece de resistance of the evening. Under the dynamic direction of genius De Carvalho, the sweep of the rhythms swelled and burst forth when the audience along with bits of melody winding in like silken threads.

Appropriately dressed in a flame red gown for Ravel's concerto for Piano and Orchestra which is accented by jazz rhythms, Miss De Oliveira impressed the audience by her polished technique complimented by tonal shading thru the first movement, the reflective second, and the jazz rhythm of the third with effective orchestral assistance.

Rather wearying at times was a complete rendition of the four scenes of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" which is commonly shortened for audience consumption altho De Carvalho directed the whole brilliantly. This work concluded the concert which opened with a fine performance of Barraud's ballet "La Kermesse."

Prince Rainier III [illegible] the Palace.

NY Herald Tribune 8/6

Boston Symphony Attracts Largest Week-End Crowd

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5—More than 20,000 persons heard the Boston Symphony Orchestra in this week end's Berkshire Festival concerts in the music shed at Tanglewood.

Last night's crowd, 11,104, marked the record thus far for this season's festival; today's gathering in the shed and on the lawn almost equaled this figure with 10,837. Warmer weather was one of the reasons cited for the increase in attendance over the previous two week ends of the festival's major series. The figure does not include the 6,000 present heard yesterday morning's public rehearsal.

Three Conductors

The week end offered an array of three conductors. Eleazar de Carvalho on Friday night was followed by Leonard Bernstein for last night's annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Charles Munch conducted this afternoon, with Zino Francescatti as soloist in Tchaikovsky's violin concerto; Aaron Copland's revised Symphonic Ode and Robert Schumann's Second Symphony, in C major, completed the program. Yesterday's program consisted of contrasted works, the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427) and the Fifth Symphony of Serge Prokofiev.

Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor, were the soloists in Mozart's music with the festival orchestra and the chorus trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon. The Kyrie and the Gloria are among the parts of the C minor mass which Mozart actually finished; they are among his most eloquent and representative contributions to the literature of religious music—and indeed to music in general. Yesterday's performance did not suggest the operatic character sometimes ascribed to parts of Mozart's church works; it revealed the fugue at the end of the Gloria as a magnificent combination of compelling spontaneity and scholarship. The chorus sang this with clarity and brilliance. All details of the vocal and musical fabric had not seemed entirely clear at the start, but this impression soon faded. The soloists sang with expressive sympathy, and the general interpretation under Mr. Bernstein gave a sense of understanding and devotion.

One reason why Mr. Bernstein had chosen Prokofiev's Fifth Symphony for yesterday's program was that Dr. Koussevitzky had introduced it to America eleven years ago. Reheard, it revealed general individuality of style and a wide expressive span; it holds attention for most of its generous course, but there are episodes in which a particular musical idea seems slightly overdone; the higher end of the dynamic range is also rather overemphasized, although the adagio provides contrasted lyric meditation. Mr. Bernstein directed an admirable and revealing performance with notable communicativeness; he and the orchestra successfully prevented successive climaxes from neutralizing each other.

The orchestra also dealt laudably with Mr. Copland's ode at the beginning of today's concert under Mr. Munch. The work, first written for the Bostonians' fiftieth anniversary and revised for their seventy-fifth, was heard last season in both Boston and New York. Today it gave a sense of much vitality with ingenuity of structure and skill in its colorful scoring.

Mr. Francescatti was generally in good form for the Tchaikovsky Concerto, apart from a few measures; his tone had its customary ingratiating quality, fineness of texture and effortless fluency. He also displayed his well known technical prowess in a musicianly, sympathetic interpretation, but here and there in the work's more energetic moments there was room for somewhat more Russian color and savor. Mr. Munch and the orchestra gave the violinist well proportioned co-operation and closed the festival's semi-final week with a satisfying and persuasive performance of the Schumann Symphony.

Mr. Munch's selections besides the Schumann symphony were Aaron Copland's seventeen-minute Symphonic ode, which the Boston Symphony played during its winter concerts, and the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

In all of them Mr. Munch's leadership was rough-hewn, vigorous and authoritative. There was little let-down in the [illegible] except in the adagio of the Schumann. Mr. Francescatti played with a bold [illegible] technical virtuosity [illegible] the spirit of the [illegible]. He won an ovation from the vast throng and the men of the orchestra applauded as heartily as the audience.

NY Times 8/6

Music

Berkshire Programs Honor Composers

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5—Up until Friday, the attendance at this year's Berkshire Festival had been lagging behind that of recent summers. But the turn-outs for the last two concerts of the fifth weekend heartened festival officials. Yesterday's audience of 11,104 set the summer's record to date, and this afternoon's 10,837 lagged only a little behind.

It was a week-end of memorial observances. Last night Leonard Bernstein led the annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. In doing so, he paid tribute to the Mozart bicentennial by devoting the first half of the program to the "Kyrie" and "Gloria" from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427). Today, Charles Munch marked the centennial of Schumann's death by leading the Boston Symphony in the composer's Symphony No. 2 in C major.

There was beautiful weather for both concerts. The evening was cool and silvery, and today the afternoon was golden. The many people who brought their bright colored blankets to stretch out on the lawns fanning out behind the shed were able to get a pleasant tan as they listened to the music.

Mr. Bernstein was a protegé of Koussevitzky and he led the memorial concert last year, too. Then he led a notable performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis." On Friday, he approached the excerpts from the Mozart mass as if they were Beethovenian, too.

Leonard Bernstein

In doing so, he made them seem heavily dramatic with a deep, pounding pulse. It was an approach that stirred the audience, but one that meant considerable loss of Mozartean style and grace. Still, the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon sang so well that there were many fine moments. The able soloists were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor.

[illegible] the other work of the evening Mr. Bernstein chose a selection that Koussevitzky introduced to America—Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony. The world for the performance was sensational, and this is not meant in an altogether flattering sense. Under his almost frenzied leadership the performance had enormous drive and vitality and the sonorities were piled up to mighty proportions. But for this listener at least the performance seemed more bombastic than penetrating.

[238]

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

AUG 6 1956

21,941 Attend Tanglewood Concerts Over Week-End

The Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood had its biggest week-end of the season, with 21,941 persons attending the shed concerts Saturday evening and yesterday afternoon.

Koussevitzky Memorial

The Saturday program was the annual memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, conducted by his former pupil, Leonard Bernstein. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival chorus and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum were heard in the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor in the first half of the program. The second half was devoted to Prokofieff's Fifth symphony. There were 11,104 persons on hand.

Yesterday afternoon, with the weather remaining ideal, concert-goers again filled the big shed to capacity and spread out over the Tanglewood lawns. Charles Munch was on the podium and Zino Francescatti was soloist in Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto. Also heard were Copland's Symphonic ode and Schumann's Second symphony.

The festival now moves into its final week, with three special concerts in addition to the four regular programs.

Two Opera Programs

Tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock in the theater-concert hall, the students of the Music center's Opera department will present the first complete stage performances of "Griffelkin," an opera in three acts by Lukas Foss. Mr. Foss is a member of the Music center composition faculty. Admission to those concerts will be by making a contribution to the school through its "Friends" organization.

On Thursday evening there will be the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit program, featuring the Boston Symphony, the Boston Pops orchestra and demonstrations by all five departments of the Music center. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the symphony orchestra, while Athur Fiedler will be on the podium with his Pops orchestra.

The regular Festival concerts are scheduled Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

The Wednesday program will be the last in the weekly chamber music concerts, held in the theater-concert hall. Performing will be Mr. Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam. Works by Favre, Raveland and Franck will be heard.

Final Shed Concerts

The Friday, Saturday and Sunday programs will be in the big shed, featureing the full Boston Symphony.

Mr. Munch will conduct music by Hayden, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas on Friday evening. Pierre Monteux will be on the podium in a concert of music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday, and the festival will conclude Sunday afternoon with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony and thr third act from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger." Soloists for that will be James Pease, Albert da Costa and Marguerite Willauer.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

AUG 6 1956

Brilliant Warmth To Friday's Concert At Tanglewood

Rhythms danced and caught fire under the baton of Brazilian Eleazar De Carvalho who directed the Boston Symphony orchestra in a concert at Tanglewood Friday night and brought a brilliant warmth to the ears of the audience sitting in the shed and covering the lawn.

The season's small concert audiences have been blamed on the type of programs, the popularity of the artists, or just that "the concerts aren't what they used to be." A directing personality who can add warmth to perfected technique reminiscent of the concerts led by the late Serge Koussevitzky is another reasonable answer.

Such a director is De Carvalho who has been active as a conductor in the Brazilian Symphony orchestra and was a member of the conducting faculty at the Berkshire Music center from 1947 to 1951.

Making her North American debut in the same performance was his wife, Jocey De Oliveira, piano soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto.

Sheer magic of rhythm colored Manuel De Falla's Three Dances from the ballet "The Three-Cornered Hat," the piece de resistance of the evening. Under the dynamic direction of genius De Carvalho, the sweep of the rhythms swelled and burst forth upon the audience along with bits of melody winding in like silken threads.

Appropriately dressed in a flame red gown for Ravel's concerto for Piano and Orchestra which is accented by jazz rhythms, Miss De Oliveira impressed the audience by her polished technique complimented by tonal shading thru the first movement, the reflective second, and the jazz rhythm of the third with effective orchestral assistance.

Rather wearying at times was a complete rendition of the four scenes of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" which is commonly shortened for audience consumption altho De Carvalho directed the whole brilliantly. This work concluded the concert which opened with a fine performance of Barraud's ballet "La Kermesse."

Prince Rainier III [illegible] at the Palace.

NY Herald Tribune 8/6

Boston Symphony Attracts Largest Week-End Crowd

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5.—More than 20,000 persons heard the Boston Symphony Orchestra in this week end's Berkshire Festival concerts in the music shed at Tanglewood.

Last night's crowd, 11,104, marked the record thus far for this season's festival; today's gathering in the shed and on the lawn almost equaled this figure with 10,837. Warmer weather was one of the reasons cited for the increase in attendance over the previous two week ends of the festival's major series. The figure does not include the 6,000 present heard yesterday morning's public rehearsal.

Three Conductors

The week end offered an array of three conductors. Eleazar de Carvalho on Friday night was followed by Leonard Bernstein for last night's annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Charles Munch conducted this afternoon, with Zino Francescatti as soloist in Tchaikovsky's violin concerto; Aaron Copland's revised Symphonic Ode and Robert Schumann's Second Symphony, in C major, completed the program. Yesterday's program consisted of contrasted works, the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427) and the Fifth Symphony of Serge Prokofiev.

Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McColum, tenor, were the soloists in Mozart's music with the festival orchestra and the chorus trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon. The Kyrie and the Gloria are among the parts of the C minor mass which Mozart actually finished; they are among his most eloquent and representative contributions to the literature of religious music—and indeed to music in general. Yesterday's performance did not suggest the operatic character sometimes ascribed to parts of Mozart's church works; it revealed the fugue at the end of the Gloria as a magnificent combination of compelling spontaneity and scholarship. The chorus sang this with clarity and brilliance. All details of the vocal and musical fabric had not seemed entirely clear at the start, but this impression soon faded. The soloists sang with expressive sympathy, and the general interpretation under Mr. Bernstein gave a sense of understanding and devotion.

One reason why Mr. Bernstein had chosen Prokofiev's Fifth Symphony for yesterday's program was that Dr. Koussevitzky had introduced it to America eleven years ago. Reheard, it revealed general individuality of style and a wide expressive span; it holds attention for most of its generous course, but there are episodes in which a particular musical idea seems slightly overdone; the higher end of the dynamic range is also rather overemphasized, although the adagio provides contrasted lyric meditation. Mr. Bernstein directed an admirable and revealing performance, with notable communicative intensity; he and the orchestra successfully prevented successive climaxes from neutralizing each other.

The orchestra also dealt laudably with Mr. Copland's ode at the beginning of today's concert under Mr. Munch. The work, first written for the Bostonians' fiftieth anniversary and revised for their seventy-fifth, was heard last season in both Boston and New York. Today it gave a sense of much vitality with ingenuity of structure and skill in its colorful scoring.

Mr. Francescatti was generally in good form for the Tchaikovsky Concerto; apart from a few measures, his tone had its customary ingratiating quality, fineness of texture and effortless fluency. He also displayed his well known technical prowess in a musicianly, sympathetic interpretation, but here and there in the work's more energetic moments there was room for somewhat more Russian color and savor. Mr. Munch and the orchestra gave the violinist well proportioned co-operation and closed the festival's semi-final week with a satisfying and persuasive performance of the Schumann Symphony.

Mr. Munch's selections besides the Schumann symphony were Aaron Copland's seventeen-minute Symphonic ode, which the Boston Symphony played during its winter concerts, and the Tchaikovsy Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

In all of them Mr. Munch's leadership was rough-hewn, vigorous and authoritative. There was little let-down in the [illegible] except in the adagio of the Schumann. Mr. Fra[illegible]ed with a boldness and [illegible]echanical virtuosity [illegible] the spirit of the [illegible]ment. He won an ovation from the vast throng and the men of the orchestra applauded as heartily as the audience.

NY Times 8/6

Music

Berkshire Programs Honor Composers

By ROSS FARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5—Up until Friday, the attendance at this year's Berkshire Festival had been lagging behind that of recent summers. But the turn-outs for the last two concerts of the fifth week-end heartened festival officials. Yesterday's audienee of 11,104 set the summer's record to date, and this afternoon's 10,837 lagged only a little behind.

It was a week-end of memorial observances. Last night Leonard Bernstein led the annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. In doing so, he paid tribute to the Mozart bicentennial by devoting the first half of the program to the "Kyrie" and "Gloria" from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427). Today, Charles Munch marked the centennial of Schumann's death by leading the Boston Symphony in the composer's Symphony No. 2 in C major.

•

There was beautiful weather for both concerts. The evening was cool and silvery, and today the afternoon was golden. The many people who brought their bright colored blankets to stretch out on the lawns fanning out behind the Shed were able to get a pleasant tan as they listened to the music.

Mr. Bernstein was a protegè of Koussevitzky and he led the memorial concert last year, too. Then he led a notable performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis." On Friday, he approached the excerpts from the Mozart mass as if they were Beethovenian, too.

Leonard Bernstein

In doing so, he made them seem heavily dramatic with a deep, pounding pulse. It was an approach that stirred the audience, but one that meant considerable loss of Mozartean style and grace. Still, the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon sang so well that there were many fine moments. The able soloists were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor.

For the other work of the evening Mr. Bernstein chose a selection that Koussevitzky introduced to America—Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony. The word for the performance was sensational, and this is not meant in an altogether flattering sense. Under his almost frenzied leadership the performance had enormous drive and vitality and the sonorities were piled up to mighty proportions. But for this listener at least the performance seemed more bombastic than penetrating.

[illegible]

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,485

AUG 6 1958

Record Crowd At Concerts At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 6 — The Berkshire Music Festival now going into its final week with the concerts to be presented Friday, Saturday and Monday completed its third week yesterday with the largest attendance this season. An audience of more than 10,800 yesterday afternoon brought the weekend total attendance for the three concerts to 27,950.

Zino Francescatti, violin soloist in Tchaikovsky's "Violin Concerto in D major," added to his laurels yesterday. There was no doubt about it in the thunderous ovation he received not only from audience but from the entire orchestra as well. His was a performance given a virtuoso's touch.

The entire week end was one of brilliant performances coupled with brilliant conducting with three conductors. Friday evening's audience had the rare treat of hearing the guest conductor, Eleazar De-Carvalho conduct a program of Falla, Ravel, and Stravinsky. The conductor's wife, Joey De Oliveira, gave a moving performance of the Ravel "Piano Concerto" in a program which included "Petrouchka."

Bernstein Conductor

Leonard Bernstein, conducting Saturday night in the annual memorial concert in memory of his teacher, Serge Koussevitsky, repeated the successes of former years. This concert as the corresponding one in other years, drew the largest audience of the year. More than 11,100 persons crowded the grounds and all of the parking facilities. As usual this was a brilliant performance which opened with the playing of Mozart's "Kyrie and Gloria" from the "Mass in C Minor." The Festival Chorus and soloists joined in this.

Prokofieff's "Symphony No. 5" in four movements completed what was one of the best performances of the season.

Yesterday's concert concluded with the performance of Schumann's "Symphony No. 2, in C Major," a number we have not heard here in previous seasons. The adagio espressivo third movement was hauntingly beautiful.

Final Week's Program

This last week of the festival will bring the additional evening of music with the opportunity to see different parts of the school here in operation. What has come to be looked forward to eagerly each year, "Tanglewood on Parade," will begin at 6 p. m. Thursday and run through to 11 o'clock. The program includes music of Villa-Iobos with the Berkshire Festival Chorus and with Mr. Carvalho as conductor. The second number of his first part of the program will be the Rimsky - Korsakoff overture to "The Russian Easter." Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops orchestra in a typical Pop's program. Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist in the Gershwin "Piano Concerto in F." Ravel's "Bolero" will complete the program.

Wednesday evening Mr. Francescatti will give a concert in the music hall.

Charles Munch, who conducted this afternoon, will conduct Friday evening and the concluding concert Sunday afternoon.

Saturday evening Pierre Monteaux will conduct a program to include Brahms' "Symphony No. 3, in F major," Enesco's "Suite for Orchestra," and Strauss' "Suite from Der Rosenkavalier." Friday night's program will include music of Haydn, Piston, Dukas, and Strauss.

The final concert of this 19th season at Tanglewood will have Charles Munch as conductor in program of "Beethoven's "Eroica" and Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger". The opening and final scenes will be presented with chorus.

SM

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

AUG 7 1956

Sanroma, Fiedler, De Carvalho Star In Annual "Tanglewood on Parade"

The gala concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras, which will climax this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday evening in the great Music Shed in Lenox, will bring back to Tanglewood piano virtuoso Jesus Maria Sanroma. He will play at the Berkshire Festival for the first time since 1942. With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Pops Orchestra, Sanroma will introduce into the Festival repertoire the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin.

PIANIST Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops in Gershwin's Concerto in F at the annnual Berkshire Festival event, "Tanglewood On Parade" on Thursday night.

In addition to Sanroma's performance, the Pops portion of the concert will feature a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

On the first half of the concert Eleazer de Carvalho will condut the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10, called "Rasga o Coracao," with the Festival Chorus of students trained by Hugh Ross.

During the afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center—student symphony and chamber music, chorus, original compositions, opera and the amateur division or Tanglewood Study Group.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

AUG 7 1956

Holland-America Line

The Nieuw Amsterdam, which sails from Boston Aug. 14. On board will be some members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, en route to Europe for the forthcoming concert tour which will take the full orchestra into 13 countries for 27 concerts. Sept. 5-10 is to be spent in the Soviet Union, with pairs of concerts being given in Leningrad and Moscow.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

AUG 7 1956

Sanroma, Fiedler, De Carvalho Star In Annual "Tanglewood on Parade"

The gala concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras, which will climax this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Thursday evening in the great Music Shed in Lenox, will bring back to Tanglewood piano virtuoso Jesus Maria Sanroma. He will play at the Berkshire Festival for the first time since 1942. With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Pops Orchestra, Sanroma will introduce into the Festival repertoire the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin.

In addition to Sanroma's performance, the Pops portion of the concert will feature a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque," music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

On the first half of the concert Eleazer de Carvalho will condut the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10, called "Rasga o Coracao," with the Festival Chorus of students trained by Hugh Ross.

During the afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center—student symphony and chamber music, chorus, original compositions, opera and the amateur division or Tanglewood Study Group.

PIANIST Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops in Gershwin's Concerto in F at the annnual Berkshire Festival event, "Tanglewood On Parade" on Thursday night.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 134,866

AUG 8 1956

Boston Plans Send-Off for Symphony

Boston will give an official send-off to the Boston Symphony Orchestra Monday prior to the group's departure for an unprecedented tour of 14 different countries, including the Soviet Union.

Trustees of the orchestra along with conductor Charles Munch and former conductor Pierre Monteux will gather at the office of Mayor Hynes at 3 p. m. to receive the blessings of the city.

EBONY BATON

The mayor will present an official City of Boston flag to Munch to be flown at all concerts and an ebony baton encrusted with gold to be kept in the orchestra's museum as a memento of the tour.

The slogan of the symphony on its historic tour will be "International Good Will Through Music." The group will play in 19 foreign cities, starting in Cork, Ireland, on Aug. 24.

Dr. Munch and 79 of those making the tour are expected to leave by plane Monday evening. The rest will leave by ship the following morning. All are expected to leave London for home on Sept. 27.

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 184,973

AUG 8 1956

Hub Symphony Gala Sendoff Set

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which leaves Monday night for an extended concert tour of European and Iron Curtain countries, will receive a royal sendoff from the city before its departure.

Acting Mayor Edward J. McCormack, filling in for Mayor Hynes, will present Dr. Charles Munch, the conductor, with an official city flag to be flown at all concerts, an ebony baton, and copies of "Boston, America's Home Port," which will be presented to the mayors of the various cities in which the orchestra will appear.

The tour, which includes 19 cities in 14 countries, opens Aug. 24 with a concert at Cork, Ireland, and closes Sept. 25, with a performance before Queen Elizabeth in England.

DA COSTA AT TANGLEWOOD—Heldentenor Albert Da Costa of the Metropolitan Opera Company will sing the role of Walther in a concert version of "Die Meistersinger" and the final scene from Act III with the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon. Da Costa, center, and his wife are shown being welcomed to Tanglewood by Thomas D. Perry Jr. in front of the huge shed where the concert will be held. Da Costa, a native of Amsterdam, made his Berkshire Festival debut on July 21.

Last Tanglewood Concert Will Be Heard Saturday

Albert Da Costa, tenor, will be heard in the role of Walther in the final concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon at the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the program which will include Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger." Other soloists include James Pease as Hans Sachs and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

The program will conclude the festival for this year.

* * *

OTHER PROGRAMS this week are the annual benefit for the school, "Tanglewood on Parade" on Thursday evening; the Boston Symphony program on Friday evening under the baton of Dr. Munch; and a program Saturday evening conducted by Pierre Monteux.

Tomorrow evening Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

* * *

THE FRIDAY EVENING program will include music by Haydn, Richard Strauss and Dukas and a first performance of Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony.

The Saturday evening program will include a first performance of Isadore Freed's "Festival Overture" and the late George Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, number 9, and music by Brahms and Richard Strauss.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

AUG 8 1956

Symphony to Get Big Send-off

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will get an official send-off from Mayor Hynes Monday before leaving on its tour of Eur-

The mayor will present a City of Boston flag to Charles Much in ceremonies at the City Hall.

He will also give the orchestra baton encrusted with kept in the orchestra's as a memento of the tour.

Dr. Munch and 79 of those making the tour leave by plane Monday. The rest leave later by ship.

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

AUG 8 1956

Symphony to Get Boston's Official Send-Off Monday

Acting Mayor Edward J. McCormack, president of the City Council, will give the Boston Symphony Orchestra the official city send-off Monday at 3 p. m. in the Mayor's office.

Eighty members of the orchestra, conducted by Dr. Charles Munch, will leave for Ireland by plane Monday evening for a tour through Europe and the British Isles, including iron curtain countries where concerts will be sponsored by the State Department. 13

The concert tour itinerary will include 19 cities in 14 nations with the first concert Aug. 24 at Cork, Ireland, and the final before the Queen of England Sept. 25. The orchestra also will play in Dublin, Edinburgh, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm, Helsinki, Leningrad, Moscow, Prague, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres and Leeds.

During Monday's ceremonies, McCormack will present Dr. Munch with an official city flag to be flown at all concerts, copies of "Boston, America's Home Port" for mayors of all cities and an ebony baton.

LD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 9, 1956

Pianist, Violinist Excel In Tanglewood Recital

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 8—The final chamber music recital drew 1901 people to the concert hall tonight. Two incomparable musicians joined forces to provide a sonata recital of unusual excellence. They were Zino Francescatti, violinist, who had previously been heard as soloist in the Tschaikowsky "Concerto for Orchestra and Violin," and Arthur Balsam, a pianist of unusual sensitivity.

Most at Home

Mr. Francescatti was playing music in which he is most at home, the French violin literature. The program opened with the Faure "Violin Sonata No. 1, in A Major;" Ravel's "Violin Sonata" and the Franck "Violin Sonata in A Major."

There was much to admire in the work of Mr. Francescatti and Mr. Balsam. Seldom does one encounter musicians so thoroughly en rapport. The Faure opus is a soaring, passionate work, tender and gay but in turn, always vital and seemingly pressing forward all the time. Particularly fine was the depth of feeling revealed in the andante and the superb sweep of the opening allegro. The allegro vivo went like the wind and the finale was presented with eclat.

There could be no greater contrast than the Ravel sonata which followed. Within its framework, this sonata has an exoticism and coloration unmatched in contemporary violin literature. The second movement is frankly labeled "blues" but it is hardly that. There is a certain "blue rhythm" but the thematic material is in a class by itself. The two participants tossed the movement off in a manner that was quite startling.

Cesar Franck has a good deal to say in his "A Major Violin Sonata," and he says it in a straightforward manner. There is both depth and unity in the four movements and it carries everything before it. [illegible] of the [illegible] coupled the [illegible] which Mr. Balsam [illegible] from the piano, resulted in [illegible] rich in understanding, staged with imagination, where two great artists [illegible] they did tonight, results [illegible] to become treasured memories. Both artists gave their services for the benefit of the center's revolving scholarship fund.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

AUG 8 1956

Joe Petrovec

Shown at Tanglewood are two new members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra [illegible] Press, percussionist (left), and Earl Hedberg, violist (center). Everett Firth (right) is elevated to the post of first timpanist upon the retirement of Roman Szulc.

Volume CXXIII. Number 32.
Berkshire Courier
8/9/56

Tanglewood Closes Season on Sunday

Three Week-end Concerts to Conclude Festival

Annual Tanglewood on Parade Is Attraction Tonight.—Carvalho and Fiedler to Conduct.—Monteux on Podium Saturday Evening. Munch Will Direct Farewell Performance.

Week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music shed will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held this evening and tonight with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening; and the festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony on Friday night, one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its seventy-fifth anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence today with demonstrations at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4:00 p.m.

At 8:15 p.m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and acting head this summer of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobo's Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Canroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m., which Pierre Monteux will conduct and for which a nominal charge is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

[240]

DA COSTA AT TANGLEWOOD—Heldentenor Albert Da Costa of the Metropolitan Opera Company will sing the role of Walther in a concert version of "Die Meistersinger" and the final scene from Act III with the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon. Da Costa, center, and his wife are shown being welcomed to Tanglewood by Thomas D. Perry Jr. in front of the huge shed where the concert will be held. Da Costa, a native of Amsterdam, made his Berkshire Festival debut on July 21.

Last Tanglewood Concert Will Be Heard Saturday

Albert Da Costa, tenor, will be heard in the role of Walther in the final concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon at the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the program which will include Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger." Other soloists include James Pease as Hans Sachs and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

The program will conclude the festival for this year.

* * *

OTHER PROGRAMS this week are the annual benefit for the school, "Tanglewood on Parade" on Thursday evening; the Boston Symphony program on Friday evening under the baton of Dr. Munch; and a program Saturday evening conducted by Pierre Monteux.

Tomorrow evening Ziho Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

* * *

THE FRIDAY EVENING program will include music by Haydn, Richard Strauss and Dukas and a first performance of Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony.

The Saturday evening program will include a first performance of Isadore Freed's "Festival Overture" and the late George Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, number 9, and music by Brahms and Richard Strauss.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

AUG 8 1956

Symphony to Get Big Send-off

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will get an official send-off from Mayor Hynes Monday before leaving on its tour of Europe.

The mayor will present an official city of Boston flag to conductor Charles Munch in ceremonies at the City Hall.

He will also give the orchestra a gold baton encrusted with gold to be kept in the orchestra's museum as a memento of the tour.

Dr. Munch and 79 of those making the tour leave by plane Monday. The rest leave later by ship.

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 264,020

AUG 8 1956

Symphony to Get Boston's Official Send-Off Monday

Acting Mayor Edward J. McCormack, president of the City Council, will give the Boston Symphony Orchestra the official city send-off Monday at 3 p. m. in the Mayor's office.

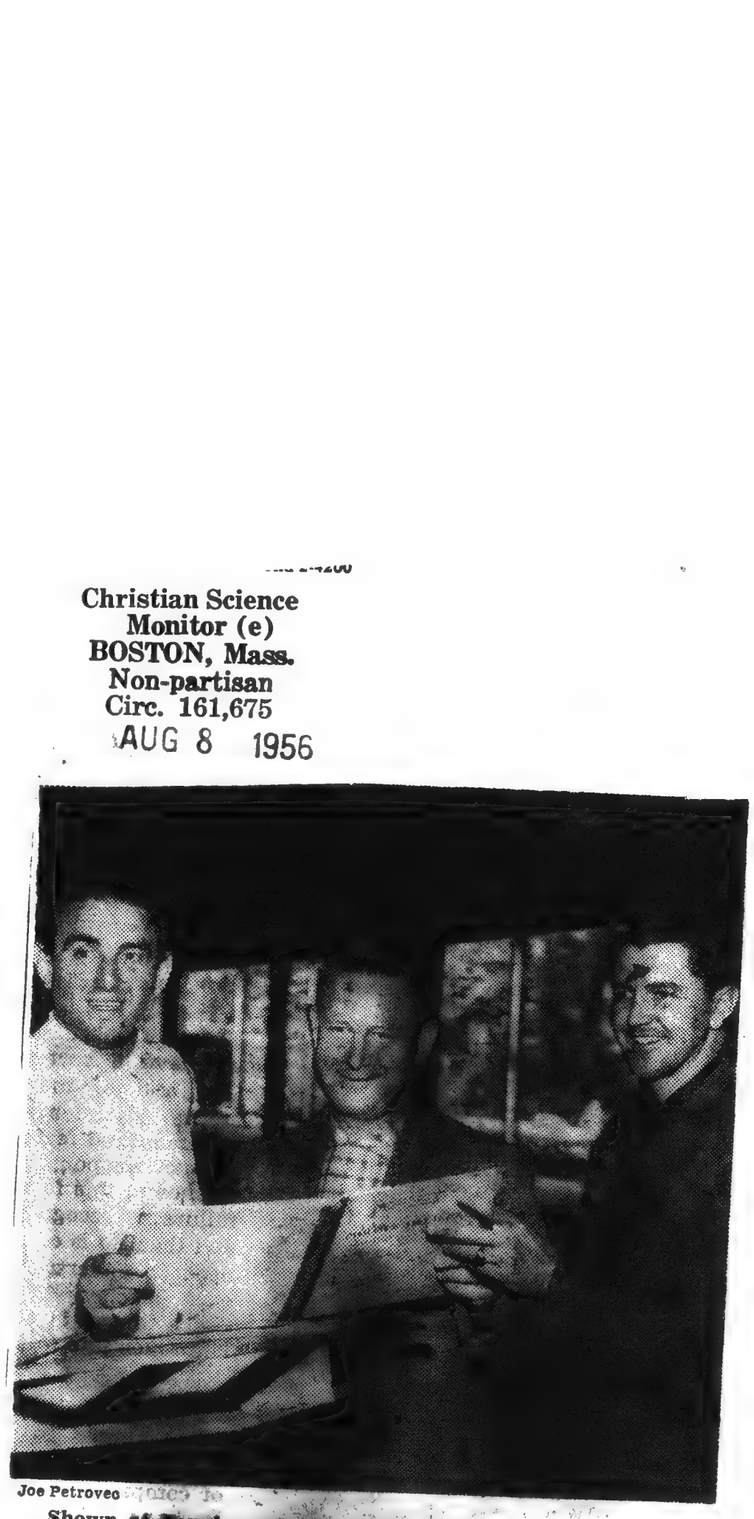
Eighty members of the orchestra, conducted by Dr. Charles Munch, will leave for Ireland by plane Monday evening for a tour through Europe and the British Isles, including iron curtain countries where concerts will be sponsored by the State Department.

The concert tour itinerary will include 19 cities in 14 nations with the first concert Aug. 24 at Cork, Ireland, and the final before the Queen of England Sept. 25. The orchestra also will play in Dublin, Edinburgh, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm, Helsinki, Leningrad, Moscow, Prague, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Zurich, Berne, Paris, Chartres and Leeds.

During Monday's ceremonies, McCormack will present Dr. Munch with an official city flag to be flown at all concerts, copies of "Boston, America's Home Port" for mayors of all cities and an ebony baton.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

AUG 8 1956



Joe Petrovec

Shown at Tanglewood are two new members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra—Charles Press, percussionist (left), and Earl Hedberg, violist (center). Everett Firth (right) is elevated to the post of first timpanist upon the retirement of Roman Szulc.

[24]

Pianist, Violinist Excel In Tanglewood Recital

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 8—The final chamber music recital drew 1901 people to the concert hall tonight. Two incomparable musicians joined forces to provide a sonata recital of unusual excellence. They were Zino Francescatti, violinist, who had previously been heard as soloist in the Tschaikowsky "Concerto for Orchestra and Violin," and Arthur Balsam, a pianist of unusual sensitivity.

Most at Home

Mr. Francescatti was playing music in which he is most at home, the French violin literature. The program opened with the Faure "Violin Sonata No. 1, in A Major;" Ravel's "Violin Sonata" and the Franck "Violin Sonata in A Major."

There was much to admire in the work of Mr. Francescatti and Mr. Balsam. Seldom does one encounter musicians so thoroughly en rapport. The Faure opus is a soaring, passionate work, tender and gay but in turn, always vital and seemingly pressing forward all the time. Particularly fine was the depth of feeling revealed in the andante and the superb sweep of the opening allegro. The allegro vivo went like the wind and the finale was presented with eclat.

There could be no greater contrast than the Ravel sonata which followed. Within its framework, this sonata has an exoticism and coloration unmatched in contemporary violin literature. The second movement is frankly labeled "blues" but it is hardly that. There is a certain "blue rhythm" but the thematic material is in a class by itself. The two participants tossed the movement off in a manner that was quite startling.

Cesar Franck has a good deal to say in his "A Major Violin Sonata" and he says it in a straightforward manner. There is both depth and unrest in the four movements and a forward [illegible] carries everything before it. The warmth of the Mr. Francescatti's tone coupled the nearly [illegible] tones which Mr. Balsam drew from the piano, resulted in a performance rich in understanding, tinged with imagination. When two great artists pool their resources as they did tonight, results are such as to become treasured memories. Both artists gave their services for the benefit of the center's revolving scholarship fund.

Volume CXXIII. Number 32.
Berkshire Courier
8/9/56

Tanglewood Closes Season on Sunday

Three Week-end Concerts to Conclude Festival

Annual Tanglewood on Parade Is Attraction Tonight.—Carvalho and Fiedler to Conduct.—Monteux on Podium Saturday Evening, Munch Will Direct Farewell Performance.

Week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music shed will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held this evening and tonight with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening; and the festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony on Friday night, one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its seventy-fifth anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence today with demonstrations at 6:00 p. m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4:00 p. m.

At 8:15 p. m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and acting head this summer of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobo's Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Canroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a. m., which Pierre Monteux will conduct and for which a nominal charge is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Petrovec

THREE STUDENTS of the Berkshire Music Center opera department at Tanglewood have been selected to sing Sunday in the final concert of the Berkshire Music Festival with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The opportunity to accompany the orchestra's presentation of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" was granted after personal auditions by Music Director Charles Munch. Left to right are Robert D. Nagy, Rosaline Hupp, Dr. Munch, John McGurdy.

A Millstone for Tanglewood

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:

I have noticed reports recently that until this past weekend, attendance at Tanglewood has been running below average, with most of the blame falling on the weather.

Recently, Jay S. Harrison, writing in the New York Herald Tribune, contributes the suggestion that lack of initiative in repertoire may very well be keeping metropolitan area music lovers from making the long haul to Lenox.

As one who has journeyed to the Berkshires each of the past four summers for a weekend of Tanglewood, I should like to suggest a reason that may be at least as important as the above. In the Tanglewood area, a place to spend the night usually costs too much.

The going rate for a room in the area seems to be $4 and up per person, or $8 and up for double room. Certainly this would not be excessive if it included private bath, twin beds and other conveniences found in a motel or good inn or hotel. But $8 and up for double rooms of the type found in the Tanglewood area is reason enough for anyone who lives some distance away to think of looking for a musical weekend closer to home.

The room probably is in a private home—a circumstance as inconvenient to the owner as the visitor. The bed probably is a double one and, on at least one occasion for me, an extremely uncomfortable one. A private bath is unlikely.

Sometimes there are special inconveniences, such as, on another occasion, some very early-rising poultry just outside the window.

If the people in the Tanglewood area have extra rooms they want to rent to the festival visitors—fine. It's good for the festival, residents and tourists alike.

But they should remember that what they have to offer is not in the same league with a first-class hotel room, or sometimes even an average one, plus the fact that the visitor has to put out the cost of tickets, meals, gasoline and the wear and tear of a long trip.

In short, feelings probably would be better all around, and the Berkshires a more popular place in the summer, if the room prices in the area were more in line with the accommodations offered.

DAVID E. STEVENS.
118 Chestnut St.,
Montclair, N.J.

Wood Sculptures By Mrs. Speyer On View at Museum

An exhibition of wood sculptures by C. Torno Speyer entitled "Silent Musicians" may be seen at the Berkshire Museum throughout August.

Mrs. Speyer, whose husband is a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is a native of Boston. She has studied art in Italy and sculpture under Miss Franc Epping in Lenox.

Her works have been shown in the Jury Show of the Boston Arts Festival, Independent Art Show at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, Brookline Library, Symphony Hall, Boston, and at Tanglewood.

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

AN 18TH century cat named Alexander Pope once laid down the lines

"Be not the first by whom the new are tried Nor yet the last to lay the old aside."

This blueprint for a safe-and-sane Fourth has garnered millions of friends for Eisenhower, but it just causes trouble in the music business.

Tanglewood has been taking it on the chin from various quarters this season for "playing the same tired pieces over again," "rewarming chestnuts" and growing "haggard and worn." Critic Jay Harrison of the New York Herald Tribune wrote that "Tanglewood is in desperate need of an esthetic face-lifting." He is sick and tired of their "Brahms bursting in air."

On the other hand, there have been complaints of too much new and unknown stuff at Tanglewood this year. Fault was found with Richard Burgin conducting a Mahler symphony. It wasn't the quality of the music or Burgin's ability that drew the criticisms; it was just that some people felt neither is well enough known by the general public.

* * *

THE TANGLEWOOD audience, like the rest of the world, is made up of all kinds. There are people in it who make it a point to read "Moby-Dick" and hear Brahm's Symphony No. 2 once every year. There are others who have never read "Moby-Dick" and are hearing the Brahms for the first time. I would venture that most of the people who attend Tanglewood never go to symphony concerts in the winter and could hear Brahms played once a year for 10 years in a row without remembering that they had heard it before.

With critics and cognoscenti, however, it's an entirely different matter. You can easily see how Mr. Harrison would be fed to the teeth with Brahms, no matter how well it is played. I have reached that point with "When the Saints Go Marching In." Years ago I couldn't get enough of that New Orleans dirge and I owned seven different recordings of the number. Nowadays you can't get away from it. It's always the first request yelled out and nearly every jazz group uses it for the finale.

And the crowd goes crazy. Most of the people in the audience hear "Saints" maybe once or twice a year and the driving rhythm and bouncy beat gets them rocking in their chairs and joyously singing along with the band. But when you hear it played week after week, both summer and winter, it sort of slips down from your hit parade. You still enjoy it when it is played well, but you would just as soon hear something else.

* * *

THAT IS WHY so many people admire jazz played by Dave Brubeck or the piano percussions of John Cage or atonal symphonies or maybe just Moondog stroking his oo and trimba. When you become terribly familiar with anything, you feel like striking out in new directions even though you may get miserably lost in the wilderness.

A critic, however, is paid to report on what took place and give his opinion on and, if necessary, his interpretation of the events. If the Brahms is played poorly, speak up. But it is their business if they want to play Brahms. If the critic does not wish to hear what is being offered, let him turn in his omniscience and get a job on the turnpike. And six will get you two that he will find fault with the route that has been chosen by the engineers.

* * *

THE ONLY THING you can be sure of is that a large segment will not approve of the program picked by the management. If Tanglewood chose a straight classical program, the modernists would be up in arms. And it would be versa if they tried to spice things up with a little vice. More people complain about the frigidity of the air during the evening concerts than the coldness of the music. The warmth and grandeur of the great symphonies have protected them from the ravages of time. World premieres are fine in their place, but there are too few giants in the field to make them of world-wide importance.

Therefore, I never complain about what is being played on a program. But I do wish the "Saints" would go to the devil.

In Brief . . .

With the Boys' Club earmarked for a big expansion program in the indefinite future and the state now talking of a new armory here by fiscal '59, the omens for adequate basketball facilities in Pittsfield are at long last beginning to look extremely, and surprisingly, propitious . . . The state Senate vote yesterday to boost his gas probe appropriation from $1,500 to $20,000 would appear to mark the triumphant crossing of the last of an inordinately long series of hurdles for Pittsfield Representative Crawford . . . That influx of male guests at Eastover as a result of the publicity about its surplus of girls just goes to show how difficult it is to keep a nice deal secret . . .

One should keep one's fingers crossed in discussing Berkshire weather, but at this writing today's happy prognosis is for a dry and profitable contrast to last year's rain-drenched edition of Tanglewood on Parade . . . Berkshire tourist-home proprietors who are trying to crowd too much summer income into too little time—a practice far too common in resort areas—would do well to give thoughtful attention to complaint from visitor David E. Stevens in today's "Letters" column. The goose that lays the golden egg deserves better treatment than he often gets . . .

Public Events

Tonight

6:00 — Student Orchestra, Opera Scenes, Chorus, Chamber Music. Tanglewood, Lenox.

8:15—Shed Concert. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho. Tanglewood.

8:40 — "Point of No Return." Williamstown Summer Theater.

8:45 — "The Good Fairy." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45 — "The Seven Year Itch." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

Tomorrow

4:00 p.m. — San Francisco Ballet. Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival.

Berkshire Eagle - August 9, 1956

Marriage Intentions

George Francis Yannone, 10 Lake St., and Constance Marie Dillon, 198 Windsor Ave.

Stockbridge Bowl Assn. Plans Program

Lucas Foss To Preview New Piano Score; Four Will Be Cited

Nathan George Horwitt of Lenox and New York, president of the Stockbridge Bowl Assn., announces that the association will hold a program in the Tanglewood Barn Saturday afternoon from 4:30 to 5:30.

In the first part of the program Lukas Foss, a member of the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival, will give a brief, informal exposition of his "Psalms for Chorus," a work commissioned from Mr. Foss by the association two years ago.

The "Psalms," scored at present for two pianos and chorus, will be orchestrated by the composer during the coming year and will receive its world premiere performance during the 1957 Berkshire Festival. It is a setting of three Psalms from the Old Testament, beginning with Psalm 121, "I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes Unto the Hills." In his exposition Saturday afternoon, Mr. Foss will illustrate some of the musical high lights of the score on the piano.

The second part of the program will honor four significant contributions to the Tanglewood and Stockbridge areas, with citations to the following:

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky — "for planting the seed of tomorrow's great music here." A silver bowl will be presented by the association to the conductor's widow, Mme. Olga Koussevitzky, of Lenox.

George E. Judd, former manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra of Canonsville, N.Y.— "for distinguished service to Tanglewood and the association."

Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, of Lenox, founder of the Stockbridge Bowl Assn.— "for inspiring an much public good."

Mrs. William Norton Bullard, of Lenox—"who gave a magnificent gift to preserve for all the good that flows from this area and Tanglewood."

In commenting on the commission to Lukas Foss, Mr. Horwitt hoped that it would "prove an inspiration to other communities to support and endow the growing musical culture throughout the land."

Reception To Aid Israel Realizes $26,000

Plouffe

Discussing the program for the sale of State of Israel Bonds in Pittsfield at a reception at Seranak given by Madame Serge Koussevitzky are, left to right, Madame Koussevitzky, Albert A. Levin, prominent Cleveland attorney, and Mrs. Henry de Sola Mendes of Blantyre, Lenox reception chairman.

More than $26,000 worth of State of Israel Development Bonds were sold yesterday at a cocktail reception at the home of Madame Serge Koussevitzky, Saranak, Lenox.

Mrs. Henry de Sola Mendes of Lenox was chairman for the reception, initial event of the Pittsfield 1956 Israel bond campaign.

Cleveland Attorney Speaks

The speaker was Albert Arthur Levin of Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Levin described one of his recent trips to Israel and Morocco, and spoke of the prevailing conditions in the young and only middle eastern democracy. He told of the economic development being achieved through bond dollars and explained that only through the continued support of Americans can Israel hope to maintain her present march of progress. Mr. Levin said that he wished everyone could witness the happenings in and around Israel, and, in that way, all would realize the deep need to encourage "America's only real friend in the Middle East."

Mr. Levin is a prominent attorney, investor, and communal leader. He is a member of the board of governors of the State of Israel Bond Organization, president of the Cleveland Zionist District, and is a member of the national cabinet and the executive committee of the United Jewish Appeal. Mr. Levin also is a member of the Cleveland Jewish Community Federation board and is co-chairman of its welfare fund campaign.

Hostesses for Reception

Hostesses for the reception were Mrs. Morris Taylor, Mrs. Stanley M. Shapiro, and Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld.

The State of Israel bond issue is the central source of investment capital for Israel's program of economic stability. Proceeds derived through the sale of Israel Bonds are making possible the growth of industry and agriculture, the expansion of irrigation, the construction of roads, harbors and railways, the increase of electric power, and the exploitation of natural resources.

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

Eleazar de Carvalho as guest conductor. His was one of the true successes of this season as the curtain calls he received easily exceeded the usual number regarded necessary for a top evening.

He has a powerful style, mixed with a pace which blends the entire picture into a setting definite from the viewpoint of the listener. His approach to Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" was something of a wonder in modern interpretation.

Guest Soloist

Guest soloist Jocy de Oliveira made the Ravel Piano Concerto something more than an instrumental study in this style. Best moments were experienced in the final movement. One might say that this was a feeling of jazz without the sometime common medium that invades the interpretive color.

Leonard Bernstein scored an overwhelming success on Saturday evening. His style of expressive demand and the feeling that he completely loses himself in the music seemed to dominate the picture more than ever.

His reading of the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's "Mass in C minor" was truly superb. His ability to blend the excellent Festival chorus soloists, Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum into a living pattern of great musical intention was ever noticeable.

Prokofieff's "Symphony No. 5" received a sound and correct reading. Possibly the gift of the conductor made much of this modern composition. However, one felt that his ability reaches its height in the true classic school.

Charles Munch returned to the podium for the Sunday program. It can be said that the team of Mr. Munch and the guest soloist Zino Francescatti joined forces for possibly the finest team score of the entire festival. The delicacy of feeling for Tchaikovsky's "D Major Violin Concerto" by the conductor, and the almost flawless technical virtuosity of the soloist gave this beloved work one of its truly great readings.

Copland's "Symphonic Ode" and the "Symphony No. 2 in C Major" by Schumann were pleasant to experience. However, the moments given over to the violin score overshadowed everything else on the program.

corps de ballet to the music of Rossini, Mozart, Bach, and Virgil Thompson.

The concerts at the Berkshire Festival covering the days of last Friday, Saturday and Sunday, provided the thousands in attendance with much in the way of variation and expression, both classical and modern.

Friday's concert presented

Composer Conducts Opera

'Griffelkin' by Lukas Foss Presented at Tanglewood

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7.—Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," which was first presented by the National Broadcasting Company's television Opera Theatre last November, had its first non-TV performance last night in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall as the major 1956 production of the Berkshire Music Center's Opera Department.

The composer conducted. Boris Goldovsky, head of the department, staged the work and Mildred Allen sang the title role of the ten-year-old devil who gets a twenty-four hour pass to the upper world as a birthday present and is then permanently banished from Hell for having done a good deed.

Yesterday's audience of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center was the first to hear "Griffelkin" in full, since it was slightly condensed for the TV production. The impression made in both cases was much the same. The story told in Alastair Reid's libretto and Mr. Foss' pleasant score should have a natural appeal for children, but can also be treated on a more adult angle. The work is not planned for any particular age group, but it seemed valid too naive for the sophisticated opera-goer, while suggesting that a youthful audience might find it discursive here and there.

Mr. Foss' music has melodic fluency but not enough melodic salience. Varying to some extent in dramatic communication, it is expressively dramatic, both the vocal and orchestral writing are idiomatic and well proportioned. Its various influences, however, are not completely fused; the score sometimes lingers, and the music for the opening infernal scene needed rather more diabolic spice. In tender episodes there was emotional persuasion, but at times a slight excess of sentiment. The ensemble measures in which Griffelkin is threatened with jail showed both scholarship and humor; more of the latter might have been welcome.

The music seemed generally well shaped for the text, but of this one could not be always sure, since the standard of diction was well below the Tanglewood's usual operatic level. Regina Sarfaty, as the Devil's Grandmother, was among those who san with verbal clarity in an interpretation which had definite personality. Diction was one of the matters in which the production missed the professional atmosphere which has marked some its predecessors. It sometimes added a naivete of its own to that of the opera itself. Even with due allowance for stage limitations, the sets did not always give a definite sense of locale, and the costumes were not always convincing.

The general vocal standard, however, was commendable. Miss Allen's Griffelkin, with a pleasing voice, played the role with considerable charm, although a little more impishness might have been in order. Others with prominent assignments in the populous cast, which included two stone lions (presumably those from our Public Library), were Shirley Carter, Ted Puffer, Abby-Maria Byers, Elaine Quint, Marjorie McClung, John Parella, Malcolm Bernstein and Spelios Constantine. The student orchestra played sensitively under Mr. Foss' leadership.

Sptfld Union Aug 8

Bowl Association To Give Citations At Saturday Rite

Pittsfield, Aug. 9—Four persons who have made contributions to the Tanglewood and Stockbridge areas will be cited by the Stockbridge Bowl Association Saturday afternoon at the Tanglewood barn.

Prior to the citations, Lukas Foss, a member of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will give a brief exposition of his musical work, "Psalms for Chorus," which will be world premiered at Tanglewood in 1957. The meeting will be held from 4.30 to 5.30.

Those to be honored are the late Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, whose widow will receive a silver bowl; George E. Judd, former manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra; Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, founder of the Stockbridge Bowl Association; and Mrs. William Norton Bullard, a benefactor of the area.

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Final performances of the season by the Boston Symphony—Thursday, Aug. 9, at 6: The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program, including offerings by the various student departments of the Berkshire Music Center, a lawn party, a concert by the Boston Symphony (conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho) and the Boston Pops (conducted by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesús-María Sanromá, piano), door prizes, and waltzing on the lawn. For the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 10, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting; no soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 11, at 8:30: Pierre Monteux conducting; no soloists. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 12, at 3:30: Charles Munch directing a Beethoven-Wagner program, with Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor; James Pease, bass; and the Festival Chorus. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.)

CASTLE HILL CONCERTS—Final performances of the season—Friday and Saturday, Aug. 10-11: Martha Lipton, [illegible] and the [illegible] (in Sweden)

[illegible] 102/62

T 11, 1956

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372

AUG 5 1956

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, Aug. 4 Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, of Glendale and New York, will be host to Dr. Charles Munch, music director, Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the distinguished violinist, Zino Francescatti, who makes his home in Monterey, Mass., at her summer home following the tomorrow afternoon Music Shed concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

* * *

Preparations are in full swing at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center for the day-long gala in which all five departments of the Boston Symphony's summer music school will be open for inspection by the public. "Tanglewood on Parade" this year will feature simultaneous demonstrations starting at 6.00 p. m. Thursday by the student symphony orchestra in the Music Shed, by chamber music students in the Chamber Music Hall, by the opera department (combining both active and associate divisions) in the Theater Concert Hall; and at 7.00 p. m. on the steps of the Main House, by the choral department.

* * *

Thursday's four student conductors will share the student symphony hour-long program at "Tanglewood on Parade." David Wooldridge, of London, England, will conduct Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride;" Kenneth Schermerhorn, of Schenectady, will lead the student aggregatiopn in Prokofieff's Classical Symphony. Clayton Westerman, of New York City, will be conductor for Franck's Symphonic Variations, with Joy Pottle, of Los Angeles, as piano soloist, and Ibert's Escales will be led by Jean-Louis LeRoux, of Montevideo, Uruguay.

* * *

A dividend for holders of box seats and purchasers of reserved seats for the gala evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Eleazar de Carvalho, and by the Boston Pops Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fielder, at "Tanglewood On Parade" on August 9, will be a special program of scenes from 20th Century operas, given by students of Boris Goldovsky in the Formal Gardens of Tanglewood at 4 p. m. The program will include excerpts from Prokofieff's "The Love of Three Oranges," Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande," Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler;" Richard Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier."

* * *

Two government-sponsored visitors to Tanglewood during the forthcoming week are Professor Gilberto Vega, director of the Orchestra de la Guardia Nacional, Nicaragua, who will be staying at the home of Mrs. Jessie Beebe, 30 Merrian St., Pittsfield; and Claudio Carneyro, director of the Conservatory of Music in Oporto, Portugal, who will be a guest at the Hotel Wendell in Pittsfield.

* * *

The Tanglewood Study Group of largely amateur musicians, will give a piano ensemble and chamber music demonstration at 1 p. m. Saturday, Aug. 11, in the Barn.

* * *

Roman Szulc, retiring as first timpanist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the age of 62, at the close of the Tanglewood season next week, was honored by his confreres of the orchestra at a luncheon to be held at Wheatleigh, residence of Tanglewood's male students, following the morning rehearsal yesterday. Dr. Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony's conductor, presented him with a gold watch as a token of gratitude for his 21 years with the orchestra. His successor is his pupil, Everett J. Firth, 26, of Boston, a member of the orchestra since 1952, who becomes first timpanist when the orchestra's tour of Europe commences in Cork, Ireland on August 24.

At the orchestra ceremony each member of the ensemble was presented with an engraved card attesting to his status in the Boston Symphony, signed by Henry L. Cabot, president of the Board of Trustees; and with bronze lapel buttons, a reproduction in miniature of the orchestra's 75th Anniversary medal. The orchestra committee consists of Gaston Dufresne, Stanley Benson, Paul Keany, George Zazofsky and Harry Dickson.

* * *

The opera indoors part of "Tanglewood on Parade" on August 9 will consist of four scenes: the final ones from Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel," and Tchaikowsky's "Eugene Onegin"; a portion of Act II of Vrdi's "A Masked Ball;" the duet from Puccini's "La Boheme," Act I. This concert by students of the active section of the opera department will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall from 6-7 p. m.

* * *

The season's final student sympaony orchestra program will feature the presentation of prizes and awards to students of all departments of the Berkshire Music Center, presented at intermission by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the BSO summer music school at Tanglewood. The final concert, not as customary on a Thursday evening, is to be held Saturday, Aug. 11, at 3 p. m. in the Tanglewood Music Shed.

'Griffelkin' Charms Tanglewood Audience

By D. E. RITZ

Whimsy is one of the most precarious commodities in the world but when it is of the Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin" variety, it is sure-fire delightful.

* * *

THE OPERA department of the Berkshire Music Center presented the three-act opera at the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood Monday night and last evening before an audience that chuckled and applauded its approval of the tale of 10-year-old devil straight from hell and his efforts to turn the world into a duplicate.

But the blue sky, human love and finally the commission of a good deed are his undoing. Griffelkin couldn't even remember "a third of the curse," which he had been sworn on a pitchfork to perform, and he sorrowfully concluded that "the worst of the world as far as I can see is that it is as wicked as me."

In a hell-court Griffekin is udged a complete failure and is ossed back to the world as a ittle boy. The Devil's grandnother and companions conlude: "We'll tell your story in ell as a warning."

* * *

MR. FOSS directed the performance of "Griffelkin" which was staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the music center's opera department with settings by Robert O'Hearn and costumes and make-up by Leo Van Witsen.

Alastair Reid is responsible for the fine rhymed libretto and lighting and technical direction were by Tom DeGaietani.

We know a number of people who would like the prescription for the potion which Griffelkin sprinkled on the lions, statues and toys to bring them to life. The concoction also worked in reverse and could turn a human into a statue—most handy stuff!

* * *

THE MUSIC is delightful, not easy, and accompaniment calls for a 56-piece orchestra. The cast includes 23 principal roles and 32 to portray the various toys, children and devils.

Mr. Goldovsky in a brief before the opera speech stated that "Tanglewood is the place where the artists have their heart's desire" and "where unfamiliar territory can be explored." He concluded that "I don't think I've ever staged anything in Hell before — I think I did it from memory."

The settings were fantastic in their beauty with the flames from a pit forming a background for scenes in hell. Devils with appropriate tails greeted the "terrible morning" and recited their misdeeds of the night in report to spider-backed Devil's grandmother. Griffelkin had done "nothing at all" in the morning because it was his birthday and grandmother ordered a celebration with "quick, quick, light the fire, sweep the floor and wipe the cobwebs fr the table."

* * *

A DEVIL'S CHORUS was most effective.

But Griffelkin had a hard time in the world in spite of his bottle of dark magic. The children pulled his tail and when he threatened them they even refused to believe that a young devil existed until he brought the statue and the lions to life. The lions' duet was excellent and the postbox's solo was most clever. The dancing dolls and toys were delightful and all in all whimsy was in full sway.

But such a hard time did the three poor housewives have and the policeman and their complaint. "Exhausted," opens the final act.

The throes of a devil learning to cry as "something is happening, something is changing within my skin" are a bit on the pathetic side but all ends on a note of happiness as Griffelkin is welcomed into an earth family.

* * *

"GRIFFELKIN" was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Co. and given a coast-to-coast network performance on Nov. 6, 1955.

Monday and last night were its first stage performances anywhere. Our own pleasure in the whimsy of the music and theme and the fine musicianship of its composer was obviously shared by all in the Monday evening audience.

In a day when stage productions, both theater and opera, are given over largely to the various problems which mankind creates out of his own pure cussedness, it is a relief to meet some of the deviltry of a folk tale.

Opera: Lukas Foss Work

'Griffelkin' Staged at Berkshire Festival

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6 — Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," a fantasy opera which was commissioned and presented by the N. B. C. Television Opera Theatre last November, received its first stage performance Monday night. It was presented by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. The work is the department's major production of the season.

The opera itself, though, is not a major work. In fact, in listening to it, an adult had an uncomfortable feeling that he was not the best judge of its effectiveness. Although it has a score that is highly sophisticated in its instrumentation, it is essentially an entertainment for children.

•

It tells the story of Griffelkin, a devil who was sent into the world on his tenth birthday to turn the earth into hell. Instead, he falls in love, does a good deed, is tried by his fellow devils, found wanting and turned into a mortal child. In the world, his pranks include bringing stone lions to life, setting toys to dancing and turning a toyman into stone.

Much of the music was charming and delicate and it was nearly always clever. But much of it, too, was difficult to sing, and so the words were lost. And because of its delicacy of texture, much of the effect of the music was lost in a production that was perhaps a little too over-active.

•

The composer was in the pit, and he led with precision and lightness of touch. Passages that stood out for their particular charm were the music written to define the young devil's emotion when he first saw the sky, the rippling music written for the fountain to sing, the [illegible] music for the dolls and the chase music when the old gossips and a Keystone cop were chasing Griffelkin around the stage.

It is in the third act that Griffelkin first feels [illegible] grief, and there is music of considerable poignance here. In fact, it is at this point that the work comes more into the adult world. Here, too, the production achieved repose and the singing was at its best. But in the finale there was a return to some of the archness that made the first act seem almost too coy.

•

Robert O'Hearn designed the settings, and Leo Van Witsen designed the costumes. These visual effects were among the most happy parts of the production. There was inventiveness, too, in Boris Goldovsky's staging, especially in the ladder that was seen first leading up from hell and then as its top end appeared on earth as Griffelkin emerged.

The title role was sung by Mildred Allen, a 24-year-old soprano with a small but pretty voice, who also was small enough in stature, though she did not succeed very well in giving the illusion of being a boy. Regina Sarfaty was the devil's grandmother. Elain Quint was the girl, Abby-Maria Byers was the boy, Marjorie McClung was the mother, Ted Puffer sang the amusingly written part of the letterbox, and Malcolm Bernstein and Spelios Constantine were the two lions.

Mildred Allen as Griffelkin

GRIFFELKIN, opera in three acts by Lukas Foss; text by Alastair Reid; staged by Boris Goldovsky; conducted by the composer. At the Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall, Lenox, Mass.

Devil's Grandmother ..... Regina Sarfaty
Griffelkin ..... Mildred Allen
A Statue ..... Shirley Carter
A Letterbox ..... Ted Puffer
A Boy ..... Abby-Maria Byers
A Girl ..... Elaine Quint
The Mother ..... Marjorie McClung
Policeman ..... John Parella
Shopkeeper ..... Donald Henrickson

Spfld Union, Aug. 10.

'TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE' IS BIG SUCCESS

Over 9000 Persons Contribute $24,850 for New Record

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 9—More than 9000 people took a musical holiday today and spent it at Tanglewood, making the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" one of the most successful in the history of the Berkshire music festival. At intermission time it was stated that the gross take for the day was $24,850, a record. In 1954 some 10,000 people paid a gross of $24,066 and in 1955, when it rained, a total of 6637 persons paid a gross of $15,952.

This has been a perfect day with blue skies, a gentle breeze and a warm sun. When the gates opened at 3.30 there were hundreds waiting to get in and from then on there was a steady stream of visitors loaded with lunch boxes, blankets, pillows and the usual picnic paraphrenalia.

Continued On Page 5

Notable today was the tremendous number of teen-agers. It seemed doubtful if any camp within 50 miles had a youngster left in it. They all seemed to have a wonderful time, doing everything but listening to the music. Most of the time they were either seeking food or eating.

The Berkshire Music Center gave a quite complete view of its various ramifications. Boris Goldovsky, director of the opera department, and his assistants were particularly in evidence. First there were opera scenes in the formal gardens. These scenes were from "Pelleas and Melisande" by Debussy, finely sung by Elaine Quint and Harold Johnson; a scene from the third act of Prokofieff's "The Love of Three Oranges," staged with real imagination by James Lucas; an excerpt from "Mathis Die Maler" by Hindemith and finally the trio from the third act of "Die Rosenkavalier" admirably sung by Mary Jane Paul, Annabelle Bernard, Nancy Lee Williams and Malcom Bernstein. It was very, very hot in the formal gardens for there was no shade, but the audience stayed to the end, perhaps realizing that the singers were more uncomfortable than they.

Singers Cheered

Later, in the theater, there were scenes from "Hansel and Gretel," "The Masked Ball," "Eugene Onegin" and "La Boheme." Soprano Polyna Zagaretou of Boston and tenor Robert Nagy from Lorain, O., were cheered after their singing of the first act duet from "La Boheme."

While these scenes were going on in the theater, there was a fine concert by the student orchestra in the shed. We were fortunate enough to hear Joy Pottle, pianist, play the Franck "Symphonic variations for piano and orchestra" under the direction of Jean-Louis La Roux who hails from Montevideo.

Miss Pottle comes from Los Angeles and she is a pianist of unusual capabilities. Another fine soloist was Ayrton Pinto, violinist from Rio de Janeiro, who gave good account of himself in the Romanza from thhe Wieniawski concerto for violin and orchestra. Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, one of the finest of student conductors, was on the podium.

Not to be outdone by the operatic and orchestral forces, the Tanglewood choir, headed by Hugh Ross and assisted by James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke de Varon, put on a concert in front of the Manor House. It attracted a very large audience, one which was attentive and appreciative. We found particularly enjoyable the singing of "Coeurs Desoleux" by De Pres, conducted by Horance Fishback from North Dakota, and the "Beggar's Canon" by Offenbach, conducted by Miss De Varon.

Shed Filled

Every set in the huge shed was filled when the evening concert began. The conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra was Eleazar de Carvalho. He chose to open with the "Russian Easter" overture by Rimsky-Iorsakoff. This choice had sentimental cause. In 1946, Mr. De Carvalho arrived in the United States, unknown and speaking no English. He arrived at Tanglewood and sought out Serge Koussevitzky. He was told all places in the conducting department were filled. He begged for an audition and Koussevitzky gave him one. Without rehearsal or score, he conducted the Rimsky-Korsakoff opus. The result — he was accepted and for the next four years remained here as an assistant.

He gave an impressive reading of this colorful score and followed it with a dramatic and compelling performance of "Choros No. 10" by Villa-Lobos, during which he had the able assistance of the festival chorus. This young man is one of the most able interpreters of the works of Villa-Lobos for he understands the rhythmic qualities and colorations of the composer's music.

I think the huge audience in the shed and on the lawn had been waiting for the appearance of Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. Through the years, the "Pops" has built up an audience of its own, faithful and ever growing. Fiedler knows what his listeners want and he sees that they get it. Thus he opened his program with a stunning performance of the Respighi arrangements of Rossini's "La Boutique" and followed that up with Gershwin's "Piano Concerto" with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist. Mr. Sanroma has been an interpreter of Gershwin's music for many years and one heard tonight a lusty performance, but one in which the salient characteristics of the music were made known. The program proper closed with Ravel's "Bolero" a performance which gradually verged on the hysterical, but was mightily effective. There were plenty of encores and everyone went home happy after a musical holiday they will not soon forget.

[244]

Opera: Lukas Foss Work

'Griffelkin' Staged at Berkshire Festival

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6 — Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," a fantasy opera which was commissioned and presented by the N. B. C. Television Opera Theatre last November, received its first stage performance Monday night. It was presented by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. The work is the department's major production of the season.

The opera itself, though, is not a major work. In fact, in listening to it, an adult had an uncomfortable feeling that he was not the best judge of its effectiveness. Although it has a score that is highly sophisticated in its instrumentation, it is essentially an entertainment for children.

•

It tells the story of Griffelkin, a devil who was sent into the world on his tenth birthday to turn the earth into hell. Instead, he falls in love, does a good deed, is tried by his fellow devils, found wanting and turned into a mortal child. In the world, his pranks include bringing stone lions to life, setting toys to dancing and turning a toyman into stone.

Much of the music was charming and delicate and it was nearly always clever. But much of it, too, was difficult to sing, and so the words were lost. And because of its delicacy of texture, much of the effect of the music was lost in a production that was perhaps a little too over-active.

•

The composer was in the pit, and he led with precision and lightness of touch. Passages that stood out for their particular charm were the music written to define the young devil's emotion when he first saw the sky, the rippling music written for the house fountain to sing, the ballet music for the dolls and the chase music when three old gossips and a Keystone cop were chasing Griffelkin around the stage.

It is in the third act that Griffelkin first feels human grief, and there is music of considerable poignance here. In fact, it is at this point that the work comes more into the adult world. Here, too, the production achieved repose and the singing was at its best. But in the finale there was a return to some of the archness that made the first act seem almost too coy.

•

Robert O'Hearn designed the settings, and Leo Van Witsen designed the costumes. These visual effects were among the most happy parts of the production. There was inventiveness, too, in Boris Goldovsky's staging, especially in the ladder that was seen first leading up from hell and then as its top end appeared on earth as Griffelkin emerged.

The title role was sung by Mildred Allen, a 24-year-old soprano with a small but pretty voice, who also was small enough in stature, though she did not succeed very well in giving the illusion of being a boy. Regina Sarfaty was the devil's grandmother. Elain Quint was the girl, Abby-Maria Byers was the boy, Marjorie McClung was the mother, Ted Puffer sang the amusingly written part of the letterbox, and Malcolm Bernstein and Spelios Constantine were the two lions.

Mildred Allen as Griffelkin

GRIFFELKIN, opera in three acts by Lukas Foss; text by Alastair Reid; staged by Boris Goldovsky; conducted by the composer. At the Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall, Lenox, Mass.

Devil's Grandmother ..... Regina Sarfaty
Griffelkin ..... Mildred Allen
A Statue ..... Shirley Carter
A Letterbox ..... Ted Puffer
A Boy ..... Abby-Maria Byers
A Girl ..... Elaine Quint
The Mother ..... Marjorie McClung
Policeman ..... John Parella
Shopkeeper ..... Donald Henrickson

Sept. 16 Mus. Aug. 10.

'TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE' IS BIG SUCCESS

Over 9000 Persons Contribute $24,850 for New Record

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 9—More than 9000 people took a musical holiday today and spent it at Tanglewood, making the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" one of the most successful in the history of the Berkshire music festival. At intermission time it was stated that the gross take for the day was $24,850, a record. In 1954 some 10,000 people paid a gross of $24,066 and in 1955, when it rained, a total of 6637 persons paid a gross of $15,952.

This has been a perfect day with blue skies, a gentle breeze and a warm sun. When the gates opened at 3.30 there were hundreds waiting to get in and from then on there was a steady stream of visitors loaded with lunch boxes, blankets, pillows and the usual picnic paraphrenalia.

Continued On Page 5

Notable today was the tremendous number of teen-agers. It seemed doubtful if any camp within 50 miles had a youngster left in it. They all seemed to have a wonderful time, doing everything but listening to the music. Most of the time they were either seeking food or eating.

The Berkshire Music Center gave a quite complete view of its various ramifications. Boris Goldovsky, director of the opera department, and his assistants were particularly in evidence. First there were opera scenes in the formal gardens. These scenes were from "Pelleas and Melisande" by Debussy, finely sung by Elaine Quint and Harold Johnson; a scene from the third act of Prokofieff's "The Love of Three Oranges," staged with real imagination by James Lucas; an excerpt from "Mathis Die Maler" by Hindemith and finally the trio from the third act of "Die Rosenkavalier" admirably sung by Mary Jane Paul, Annabelle Bernard, Nancy Lee Williams and Malcom Bernstein. It was very, very hot in the formal gardens for there was no shade, but the audience stayed to the end, perhaps realizing that the singers were more uncomfortable than they.

Singers Cheered

Later, in the theater, there were scenes from "Hansel and Gretel," "The Masked Ball," "Eugene Onegin" and "La Boheme." Soprano Polyna Zagaretou of Boston and tenor Robert Nagy from Lorain, O., were cheered after their singing of the first act duet from "La Boheme."

While these scenes were going on in the theater, there was a fine concert by the student orchestra in the shed. We were fortunate enough to hear Joy Pottle, pianist, play the Franck "Symphonic variations for piano and orchestra" under the direction of Jean-Louis La Roux who hails from Montevideo.

Miss Pottle comes from Los Angeles and she is a pianist of unusual capabilities. Another fine soloist was Ayrton Pinto, violinist from Rio de Janeiro, who gave good account of himself in the Romanza from thhe Wieniawski concerto for violin and orchestra. Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, one of the finest of student conductors, was on the podium.

Not to be outdone by the operatic and orchestral forces, the Tanglewood choir, headed by Hugh Ross and assisted by James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke de Varon, put on a concert in front of the Manor House. It attracted a very large audience, one which was attentive and appreciative. We found particularly enjoyable the singing of "Coeurs Desoleux" by De Pres, conducted by Horance Fishback from North Dakota, and the "Beggar's Canon" by Offenbach, conducted by Miss De Varon.

Shed Filled

Every set in the huge shed was filled when the evening concert began. The conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra was Eleazar de Carvalho. He chose to open with the "Russian Easter" overture by Rimsky-Iorsakoff. This choice had sentimental cause. In 1946, Mr. De Carvalho arrived in the United States, unknown and speaking no English. He arrived at Tanglewood and sought out Serge Koussevitzky. He was told all places in the conducting department were filled. He begged for an audition and Koussevitzky gave him one. Without rehearsal or score, he conducted the Rimsky-Korsakoff opus. The result — he was accepted and for the next four years remained here as an assistant.

He gave an impressive reading of this colorful score and followed it with a dramatic and compelling performance of "Choros No. 10" by Villa-Lobos, during which he had the able assistance of the festival chorus. This young man is one of the most able interpreters of the works of Villa-Lobos for he understands the rhythmic qualities and colorations of the composer's music.

I think the huge audience in the shed and on the lawn had been waiting for the appearance of Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. Through the years, the "Pops" has built up an audience of its own, faithful and ever growing. Fiedler knows what his listeners want and he sees that they get it. Thus he opened his program with a stunning performance of the Respighi arrangements of Rossini's "La Boutique" and followed that up with Gershwin's "Piano Concerto" with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist. Mr. Sanroma has been an interpreter of Gershwin's music for many years and one heard tonight a lusty performance, but one in which the salient characteristics of the music were made known. The program proper closed with Ravel's "Bolero" a performance which gradually verged on the hysterical, but was mightily effective. There were plenty of encores and everyone went home happy after a musical holiday they will not soon forget.

[244]

Francescatti and Balsam Play Tanglewood Concert

By [illegible] ROSENFELD

THE [illegible] Wednesday evening [illegible] music concert of the [illegible]wood season was played last night in the Theater-Concert Hall by Arthur Balsam, pianist, and Zino Francescatti, violin.

The entirely French program consisted of the sonatas of Gabriel Faure, Maurice Ravel and Cesar Franck, and served to show succinctly the course of that country's music in the last three quarters of a century.

Strangely enough, the sonata of Faure antedated that of his older colleague and fellow-organist, Franck, by a decade. Faure's sonata was his first chamber work, written soon after he took off his uniform as soldier in the Franco-Prussian War; Franck's sonata was the last but one of his chamber works written at the close of his career, much as Ravel waited for an analagous time to devote himself to this combination.

* * *

A MORE satisfying performance would have been difficult to imagine. The two artists are so thoroughly imbued with perception of their material and so highly endowed with capabilities to express it that a more fortuitous circumstance can rarely take place.

The Ravel sonata is the least commonly played, probably, for two reasons: Fiendish difficulty and a not particularly ingratiating appeal. In the years directly after the first World War, American jazz had permeated French music so deeply that many Frenchmen writing music in those days either unconsciously fell in line or, at least, considered it the path to new musical development. It was then known as rag-time. Some Negro bands stayed on after the war and were welcomed in Parisian night spots. Josephine Baker was at the peak of her fame. Ravel was inoculated and this sonata is a prime exhibit of his essay in this area. The rhythms are directly derived from jazz and the scooping approach with which he slides into some notes is best realized on the violin.

* * *

THE FAURE and Franck are both replete with melody and ingenious expansion. The artists of the evening possibly exceeded the native fastidious elegance of these by their urgently dramatic rendition, but no one could really complain of that. Their tonal accomplishments were consistently of rare beauty and the execution of such movements as the Faure scherzo was a feat of galvanic virtuosity. Faure can be distinctly sentimental. Last night he was presented with all the best aspects of his music prominently emphasized.

Franck's sonata is one of the most popular works of its kind. The cyclic type of construction unifies and links the four movements for the pleasure of the scholar but its hold on popular ears derives from its invention and its effective tessitura. Franck knew just where on the instruments certain phrases would sound best. The piano chords in the opening movement with the suave supplications in the violin are Elysium to performers, and the cadenzas of the Fantasia are equally happy terrain.

* * *

THE ARTISTS were recalled time after time and were virtually begged for an encore but they wisely refrained. We cannot imagine any additional effort that would have sent us home more gratified with our memories of the evening and we cannot think of any morsel that would have fitted as an additional final coda to such a program. The evening had been full and complete and a bonus to the audience was no more in order than if an actor should step forward after one Shakespeare play and recite a soliloquy from another. This custom has been breached in all the other programs of this series and we were deeply and inwardly pleased that finally what, in our opinion, is the proper procedure was adhered to.

'Griffelkin' Is Given on TV ... May 1956
...iere

...of compan-
...to shed tears
...e kind.
...ra itself, its
Mr. Foss has
...the wide-eyed
...t, nor has he
...usic of con-
...For the most,
...lly accessible,
...tonic with a
...romatic, and
...port is ingeni-
But the tunes
...ers do not stick
...ither are they
...airborne. That
...scent of many
..., Copland, Me-
...nith, to name a
...ody, but it did
...at the melodic-
...re of the piece
the full tender-
...ect.
...Griffelkin" in its too long. The ...fairy tales for
...s in that their
...ssipates itself in
...; the new opera
Labored whimsy
...at all, and there
...where Mr. Foss
...eavy hand.
...elkin" is by no
in enchantment.
...irs and ensembles
...tic and beautifully
...en, I suspect, will
...k and NBC should
...oint to produce it
them. With all its grace, "Griffelkin"
. And it does have
...entation, it need
...dded, was excellent.
...hop in the title role
...was an utterly superb and twit-
...tering gamin, and Mary Kreste made the Devil-Grandmother a striking portrait. Rose Geringer as a girl, Andrew McKinley as a chatterbox mailbox and Lee
Cass as a policeman all contributed, by means of ringing tones, heavily to the enterprise.

There is no question—if opera on television gains a foothold,
Peter Herman Adler and Samuel Chotzinoff, director and producer of the NBC-TV Opera Theater, will demand a major share of the credit.

'Griffelkin' Slated for Berkshires

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

For its principal production of the summer, the Berkshire Music Center's unconventionally minded opera department will stage Lukas Foss's "Griffelkin" on Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 6 and 7, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. This three-act work, with a libretto by Alastair Reed, was commissioned by the National Broadcasting Company, and first telecast by the NBC-TV Opera Theater on Nov. 6, 1955.

Mr. Foss will conduct the Tanglewood performances of "Griffelkin," which will be its first stage representations outside of television. They will be staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the department. As usual, admission will be open only to contributing members of the Society of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Full information about the twenty-five or more programs in the Center's 1956 schedule may be obtained by writing to the Friends' office at Tanglewood.

But to his [illegible] learns that much of humanity is embroiled in a condition called love, which deviltry cannot penetrate. Slowly, he is converted to the view that affection and existence are one and the same, and in a moment of weakness he commits a good deed—he restores the health of a mother whose brood has befriended him. For this, Griffelkin is banished from hell and is also made to become an ordinary little boy. In short, he comes to understand that nothing in the nether-world offers to

'Tanglewood On Parade' Today

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held today at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The principal event is a concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston 'Pops' Orchestras at 8:15 p. m. in the Music Shed with Eleazar de Carvallo and Arthur Fiedler conducting. Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist in George Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

The Parade begins with a fanfare and a welcoming address at 5:45 p. m., followed by the simultaneous programs by departments of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 p. m. A chorus will sing at 7 p. m., during an interval set aside for picnic suppers on the lawn, and dancing will follow the evening concert. There will also be an outdoor performance of opera for holders of box and reserved seats for the main concert, and a program by the Tanglewood Study Group, both at 4 p. m.

TANGLEWOOD—Lenox, Mass.
LAST WEEK
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TONIGHT (6 to 11)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
Res. $3, $4, $5; Adm. $2.50
Festival Concerts—Fri. and Sat. Eves., Sun. Aft.
TICKET OFFICE • Phone Lenox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

apout.

NY Times May 6

OPERAS: Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," which was telecast last November by the N.B.C. Television Opera Theatre, will be the major opera production at this summer's Berkshire Festival. It will be given at Tanglewood, under the composer's direction, on Aug. 6 and 7. . . . Cherubini's "Medea," with Eileen Farrell in the title role, will be the opera at this year's festival at Caramoor in Katonah, N. Y. It will be presented on June 23. . . . Henry Purchell's "The Fairy Queen" will be presented on Saturday by the Lyric Theatre of the Rockland Foundation in the Clarkstown High School of New City, N. Y.

TANGLEWOOD—Lenox, Mass.
LAST WEEK
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TOM'W. AUG. 9 (6 to 11)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
Res. $3, $4, $5; Adm. $2.50
Festival Concerts—Fri. and Sat. Eves., Sun. Aft.
TICKET OFFICE • Phone Lenox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Tanglewood Tales

Composers' Program

The program for the composers' chamber music program in the Chamber Music Hall Friday afternoon at 4:30 follows:

Quintet for strings and piano.
Lothar Klein, Minneapolis, Minn.

Sonata for violin alone (1963).
Jose Serebrier, Montevideo, Uruguay
Midhat Serbagi, violin, Jamaica Plain.

Icons, for piano (1956).
Eino Rautavaara, Helsinki, Finland
Arlene Zallman, piano, New York, N.Y.

Sonata variations for violin and piano (1955) Michael Sahl, New York, N.Y.
Ayrton Pinto, violin, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.
Michael Sahl, piano, New York, N.Y.

String Quintet (1955).
Thomas Putsche, West Hartford, Conn.

Shed Program Saturday at 3

Saturday afternoon at 3 the Department 1 orchestra will give the following program in the Music Shed:

Nocturnes (Numbers 1 and 2) Debussy
Kenneth Schermerhorn, conductor, Schenectady, N.Y.

Die Meistersinger, Act III, Wotan's Farewell Wagner
Manfred Capell, bass-baritone, Berlin, Germany.
Seymour Lipkin, conductor.
*Intermission.

Suite from the Firebird Stravinsky
Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor.

The Ship of Death, second movement. Wilding-White
David Wooldridge, conductor, London, England, and the Tanglewood Choir.

*—At intermission, Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, and head of its composition department, will announce the season's awards and scholarships.

Chamber Music

Department 1 will give a chamber music program Sunday morning in the Theater-Concert Hall. It follows:

Trio in C Minor Brahms
Noriko Oka, Tokyo, Japan, violin.
Claude Kenneson, El Paso, Tex., 'cello.
Judies Yaeger, Riverdale, N.Y., piano.

Dover Beach for mezzo-soprano and string quartet Barber
Shirley Carte, Los Angeles, Calif., mezzo-soprano.
Nancy Cirillo, Brooklyn, N.Y., violin.
Laura Hochheimer, Vineland, N.J., violin.
Midhat Serbagi, Jamaica Plain, viola.
Edward Klein, Sharon, 'cello.

Octet Schubert
Arvid Lextrom, Poughkeepsi, N.Y., clarinet.
Ruth Moss, Newport News, Va., bassoon.
Edwin Thayer, Weymouth, French horn.
Betty Crossley, Grinnell, Iowa, violin.
W. Sanford Allen, Brooklyn, N.Y., violin.
Robert Glazer, Chicago, Ill., viola.
David Spinks, Albany, N.Y., 'cello.
David Bethe, Appleton, Wis., string bass.

R. S. T.

Tanglewood Gala Is Held Tonight

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala held for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will take place tonight with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Lenox.

TANGLEWOOD—Lenox, Mass.
LAST WEEK
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TOM'W. AUG. 9 (6 to 11)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
Res. $3, $4, $5; Adm. $2.50
FESTIVAL CONCERTS — FRI. AND SAT. EVES., SUN. AFT.
TICKET OFFICE • Phone Lenox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Springfield Union, Aug. 8, 1956.

Final Concerts Of Tanglewood Season Slated

Lenox, Aug. 7—The final concert of the Wednesday evening chamber music series in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be played Wednesday by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

Mr. Francescatti, who is making the second of two appearances at this summer's festival, is donating his services for the benefit of the revolving scholarship fund of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

The program of sonatas for violin and piano will include the Sonata No. 1 by Faure and the Sonatas by Ravel and Franck. Mr. Francescatti lives in nearby Monterey.

On Thursday is "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, with festivities commencing with a performance — for box holders and purchasers of reserved seats —of scenes from 20th century operas in the formal gardens at 4. Starting at 6 p. m., there will be simultaneous demonstrations by the student symphony orchestra, chorus, composition, and opera departments of the music school.

The evening concert features Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross.

On the second half of the program Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops Orchestra in a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque" arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini, Ravel's "Bolero," and the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist.

Remaining tickets for Wednesday's concert, for "Tanglewood on Parade," for the final weekend festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, and for the open rehearsal Saturday morning when Pierre Monteux will rehearse his Saturday concert of music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office. Telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawns will be on sale the day of each concert.

[245]

B. Eagle Aug. 9.

Music

Francescatti and Balsam Play Tanglewood Concert

By [illegible] ROSENFELD

THE [illegible] Wednesday evening [illegible] music concert of the [illegible]wood season was played last night in the Theater-Concert Hall by Arthur Balsam, pianist, and Zino Francescatti, violin.

The entirely French program consisted of the sonatas of Gabriel Faure, Maurice Ravel and Cesar Franck, and served to show succinctly the course of that country's music in the last three quarters of a century.

Strangely enough, the sonata of Faure antedated that of his older colleague and fellow-organist, Franck, by a decade. Faure's sonata was his first chamber work, written soon after he took off his uniform as soldier in the Franco-Prussian War; Franck's sonata was the last but one of his chamber works written at the close of his career, much as Ravel waited for an analagous time to devote himself to this combination.

* * *

A MORE satisfying performance would have been difficult to imagine. The two artists are so thoroughly imbued with perception of their material and so highly endowed with capabilities to express it that a more fortuitous circumstance can rarely take pface.

The Ravel sonata is the least commonly played, probably, for two reasons: Fiendish difficulty and a not particularly ingratiating appeal. In the years drectly after the first World War, American jazz had permeated French music so deeply that many Frenchmen writing music in those days either unconsciously fell in line or, at least, considered it the path to new musical development. It was then known as rag-time. Some Negro bands stayed on after the war and were welcomed in Parisian night spots. Josephine Baker was at the peak of her fame. Ravel was inoculated and this sonata is a prime exhibit of his essay in this area. The rhythms are directly derived from jazz and the scooping approach with which he slides into some notes is best realized on the violin.

* * *

THE FAURE and Franck are both replete with melody and ingenious expansion. The artists of the evening possibly exceeded the native fastidious elegance of these by their urgently dramatic rendition, but no one could really complain of that. Their tonal accomplishments were consistently of rare beauty and the execution of such movements as the Faure scherzo was a feat of galvanic virtuosity. Faure can be distinctly sentimental. Last night he was presented with all the best aspects of his music prominently emphasized.

Franck's sonata is one of the most popular works of its kind. The cyclic type of construction unifies and links the four movements for the pleasure of the scholar but its hold on popular ears derives from its invention and its effective tessitura. Franck knew just where on the instruments certain phrases would sound best. The piano chords in the opening movement with the suave supplications in the violin are Elysium to performers, and the cadenzas of the Fantasia are equally happy terrain.

* * *

THE ARTISTS were recalled time after time and were virtually begged for an encore but they wisely refrained. We cannot imagine any additional effort that would have sent us home more gratified with our memories of the evening and we cannot think of any morsel that would have fitted as an additional final coda to such a program. The evening had been full and complete and a bonus to the audience was no more in order than if an actor should step forward after one Shakespeare play and recite a soliloquy from another. This custom has been breached in all the other programs of this series and we were deeply and inwardly pleased that finally what, in our opinion, is the proper procedure was adhered to.

'Griffelkin' Is Given on TV For Its World Premiere

NY Herald Tribune Nov. 1955

By Jay S. Harrison

Lukas Foss' three-act opera, "Griffelkin," commissioned by the NBC-TV Opera Theater, received its world premiere by that royal organization yesterday afternoon at 4. The work, I imagine, is destined to be discussed and discussed again; for the opera is based on a fairy tale that accounts jointly for its obvious successes and equally manifest failures.

"Griffelkin"—though its composer and librettist, Alastair Reid, asserts it to be sewn with adult, philosophical implications—is a children's opera. Its story, its staging, its entire viewpoint, in fact, are geared in the direction of the young in age. And, while the young in spirit, too, may warm to its appeal, "Griffelkin's" intellectual apparatus seems essentially designed for an audience whose level of sophistication has not been tarnished by the facts of life.

The opera's tale, in a condensation that confessedly robs it of its spell, deals with a young devil, age ten, who receives as a birthday gift, the right to visit the human world. Before his departure from hell, however, he is cautioned that he must be nasty and horrid and mean, and he begins his pilgrimage in precisely that frame of mind. Armed with a vial of magic elixir, he arrives in New York, causes mute statues to sing, stone lions to bellow and stuffed toys to dance. Wreaking havoc is his pleasure and he wreaks it with a vengeance.

But to his chagrin, Griffelkin learns that much of humanity is embroiled in a condition called love, which deviltry cannot penetrate. Slowly, he is converted to the view that affection and existence are one and the same, and in a moment of weakness he commits a good deed—he restores the health of a mother whose brood has befriended him. For this, Griffelkin is banished from hell and is also made to become an ordinary little boy. In short, he comes to understand that nothing in the nether-world offers to a child the solace of companionship, the ability to shed tears and the desire to be kind.

As for the opera itself, its main defect is that Mr. Foss has not quite mirrored the wide-eyed naivete of the plot, nor has he supplied it with music of consistent interest. For the most, his idiom is easily accessible, being largely diatonic with a coating of the chromatic, and his orchestral support is ingenious to a fault. But the tunes provided the singers do not stick in the mind; neither are they blithe, crisp or airborne. That they are reminiscent of many men—Stravinsky, Copland, Menotti and Hindemith, to name a few—is no tragedy, but it did appear to me that the melodic-harmonic structure of the piece failed to suggest the full tenderness of the subject.

In addition, "Griffelkin" in its present state is too long. The danger of using fairy tales for music is obvious in that their basic conceit dissipates itself in a few moments; the new opera is no exception. Labored whimsy is no whimsy at all, and there are stretches where Mr. Foss works with a heavy hand.

Still, "Griffelkin" is by no means lacking in enchantment. Several of its airs and ensembles are wildly poetic and beautifully tooled. Children, I suspect, will adore the work and NBC should make it a point to produce it frequently for them. With all its lapses from grace, "Griffelkin" is a charmer. And it does have heart.

The presentation, it need scarcely be added, was excellent. Adelaide Bishop in the title role was an utterly superb and twittering gamin, and Mary Kreste made the Devil-Grandmother a striking portrait. Rose Geringer as a girl, Andrew McKinley as a chatterbox mailbox and Lee Cass as a policeman all contributed, by means of ringing tones, heavily to the enterprise.

There is no question—if opera on television gains a foothold, Peter Herman Adler and Samuel Chotzinoff, director and producer of the NBC-TV Opera Theater, will demand a major share of the credit.

about.

NY Times May 6

OPERAS: Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," which was telecast last November by the N.B.C. Television Opera Theatre, will be the major opera production at this summer's Berkshire Festival. It will be given at Tanglewood, under the composer's direction, on Aug. 6 and 7. . . . Cherubini's "Medea," with Eileen Farrell in the title role, will be the opera at this year's festival at Caramoor in Katonah, N. Y. It will be presented on June 23. . . . Henry Purchell's "The Fairy Queen" will be presented on Saturday by the Lyric Theatre of the Rockland Foundation in the Clarkstown High School of New City, N. Y.

'Tanglewood On Parade' Today

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held today at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The principal event is a concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops' Orchestras at 8:15 p. m. in the Music Shed with Eleazar de Carvallo and Arthur Fiedler conducting. Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist in George Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

The Parade begins with a fanfare and a welcoming address at 5:45 p. m., followed by three simultaneous programs by departments of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 p. m. A chorus will sing at 7 p. m., during an interval set aside for picnic suppers on the lawn, and dancing will follow the evening concert. There will also be an outdoor performance of opera for holders of box and reserved seats for the main concert, and a program by the Tanglewood Study Group, both at 4 p. m.

TANGLEWOOD—Lenox, Mass.
LAST WEEK
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TONIGHT (6 to 11)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
Res. $3, $4, $5; Adm. $2.50
Festival Concerts—Fri. and Sat. Eves., Sun. Aft.
TICKET OFFICE • Phone Lenox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

TANGLEWOOD—Lenox, Mass.
LAST WEEK
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TOM'W. AUG. 9 (6 to 11)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
Res. $3, $4, $5; Adm. $2.50
Festival Concerts—Fri. and Sat. Eves., Sun. Aft.
TICKET OFFICE • Phone Lenox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Tanglewood Tales

Composers' Program

The program for the composers' chamber music program in the Chamber Music Hall Friday afternoon at 4:30 follows:

Quintet for strings and piano.
Lothar Klein, Minneapolis, Minn.

Sonata for violin alone (1955).
Jose Serebrier, Montevideo, Uruguay
Midhat Serbagi, violin, Jamaica Plain.

Icons, for piano (1956).
Eino Rautavaara, Helsinki, Finland
Arlene Zallman, piano, New York, N.Y.

Sonata variations for violin and piano (1955)
Michael Sahl, New York, N.Y.
Ayrton Pinto, violin, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.
Michael Sahl—piano, New York, N.Y.

String Quintet (1955).
Thomas Putsche, West Hartford, Conn.

Shed Program Saturday at 3

Saturday afternoon at 3 the Department 1 orchestra will give the following program in the Music Shed:

Nocturnes (Numbers 1 and 2) Debussy
Kenneth Schermerhorn, conductor, Schenectady, N.Y.

Die Meistersinger, Act III, Wotan's Farewell Wagner
Manfred Capell, bass-baritone, Berlin, Germany.
Seymour Lipkin, conductor.
*Intermission.

Suite from the Firebird Stravinsky
Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor.

The Ship of Death, second movement. Wilding-White
David Wooldridge, conductor, London, England, and the Tanglewood Choir.

*—At intermission, Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, and head of its composition department, will announce the season's awards and scholarships.

Chamber Music

Department 1 will give a chamber music program Sunday morning in the Theater-Concert Hall. It follows:

Trio in C Minor Brahms
Noriko Oka, Tokyo, Japan, violin.
Claude Kenneson, El Paso, Tex., 'cello.
Judies Yaeger, Riverdale, N.Y., piano.

Dover Beach for mezzo-soprano and string quartet Barber
Shirley Carte, Los Angeles, Calif., mezzo-soprano.
Nancy Cirillo, Brooklyn, N.Y., violin.
Laura Hochheimer, Vineland, N.J., violin.
Midhat Serbagi, Jamaica Plain, viola.
Edward Klein, Sharon, 'cello.

Octet Schubert
Arvid Lextrom, Poughkeepsi, N.Y., clarinet.
Ruth Moss, Newport News, Va., bassoon.
Edwin Thayer, Weymouth, French horn.
Betty Crossley, Grinnell, Iowa, violin.
W. Sanford Allen, Brooklyn, N.Y., violin.
Robert Glazer, Chicago, Ill., viola.
David Spinks, Albany, N.Y., 'cello.
David Bethe, Appleton, Wis., string bass.

R. S. T.

Tanglewood Gala Is Held Tonight

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala held for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will take place tonight with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Lenox.

TANGLEWOOD—Lenox, Mass.
LAST WEEK
Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
TOM'W. AUG. 9 (6 to 11)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"
Res. $3, $4, $5; Adm. $2.50
FESTIVAL CONCERTS — FRI. AND SAT. EVES., SUN. AFT.
TICKET OFFICE • Phone Lenox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Springfield Union, Aug. 8, 1956.

20 THE SPRINGFIELD

Final Concerts Of Tanglewood Season Slated

Lenox, Aug. 7—The final concert of the Wednesday evening chamber music series in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be played Wednesday by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

Mr. Francescatti, who is making the second of two appearances at this summer's festival, is donating his services for the benefit of the revolving scholarship fund of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

The program of sonatas for violin and piano will include the Sonata No. 1 by Faure and the Sonatas by Ravel and Franck. Mr. Francescatti lives in nearby Monterey.

On Thursday is "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, with festivities commencing with a performance — for box holders and purchasers of reserved seats —of scenes from 20th century operas in the formal gardens at 4. Starting at 6 p. m., there will be simultaneous demonstrations by the student symphony orchestra, chorus, composition, and opera departments of the music school.

The evening concert features Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in, Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross.

On the second half of the program Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops Orchestra in a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque" arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini, Ravel's "Bolero," and the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist.

Remaining tickets for Wednesday's concert, for "Tanglewood on Parade," for the final weekend festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, and for the open rehearsal Saturday morning when Pierre Monteux will rehearse his Saturday concert of music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office. Telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawns will be on sale the day of each concert.

[245]

Opera: 'Griffelkin' Has Premiere on N.B.C.-TV

Fantasy Is Marked by Charm, Tenderness

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

THE N. B. C. Opera Theatre made another substantial contribution to television and to opera yesterday afternoon. It presented the world première of "Griffelkin," an opera by Lukas Foss with a libretto by Alistair Reid.

"Griffelkin" is a fantasy for children and adults. It has a good deal of charm and a touch of tenderness, both in the text and music, and is put together with affection and craftsmanship. The work easily could become popular in the nation's far-flung opera workshops.

•

The idea for "Griffelkin" was planted in Mr. Foss quite a few years ago, when he was 10. Commissioned to write an opera by the N. B. C. Opera Theatre several years ago, he sought a librettist and was referred to Mr. Reid, a teacher at Sarah Lawrence College. Since the composer was teaching at the University of California at Los Angeles, the collaborators did their work with the help of the mails. It took about sixty letters to get the libretto finished.

Griffelkin is the youngest of a brew of devils—a shy, unmalevolent devilkin, akin in spirit to the nonbelligerent Ferdinand the Bull. On his tenth birthday, Griffelkin gets a day in the world. Equipped with a magic vial, he is instructed to raise a little hell. The poor, little devil ends up by doing a good deed. His punishment is banishment to the world forever, and there minus his tail, horns and big ears he becomes a normal little boy.

Adelaide Bishop portrays the title role in "Griffelkin"

In the course of his bedeviling day on earth, Griffelkin encounters a statue, a letterbox, a couple of lions and a crowd of toys, all of which he brings to life with his magic. He also meets a girl and boy whose mother dies. With his last drop of magic fluid, Griffelkin restores the mother to life, thereby ruining his standing as a devil.

This "miracle play," as Mr. Foss says it might be called, begs for poetry and music. Mr. Reid has provided a literate libretto, and Mr. Foss has composed resourceful music. The latter knows all the forms and has filled his score with such things as a ballad, a waltz, a canon, duets, choruses and some arias.

The piece moves, and the orchestra is full of gay and fanciful comment, written with sureness of effect and telling transparency. In the second act, Mr. Foss achieves something more touching—a mood and an emotion that touch the heart.

But "Griffelkin" is not all that it could be. In the prologue and first act, it does not get off the ground, as if the magic liquid held it earthbound. In the first act, for example, Griffelkin asks for something stupendous to set off a parade of the toys, but he is answered with tame music.

Music by Foss Shows Resourcefulness

The N. B. C. Opera Theatre gave the piece a delightful production. Using all the flexibility that television makes possible, the expert staff assembled by Samuel Chotzinoff, producer, brought freshness and imagination to the work. Many of the players seen on the home screen were actors and dancers with the off-screen voices synchronized so well that one could not tell that two performers were doing the work of one.

•

Adelaide Bishop in the title role did all her acting and singing; she made Griffelkin an affecting little devil, and she sang attractively. Rose Geringer, as the little girl, and Oliver Andes, as her brother, were heart-warming in song and action. Andrew McKinley, as the voice of the letterbox; Mignon Dunn, as the voice of the statue; Paul Ukena and Chester Watson, as the voices of the lions; Lee Cass as a policeman; Mary Kreste as the devils' grandmother, and Alice Richmond, as the mother, did good work.

Kirk Browning's direction, Peter Herman Adler's conducting, Rouben Ter-Arutunian's sets and Robert Joffrey's choreography and staging were all admirable. The N. B. C. Opera continues to be the outstanding exception to television's indifferent attitude toward music.

. Alan J. Blau, on England and f Pittsfield; Col. Wilde and Mrs. Lenox; Miss s Marion Kemp Arthur W. Per-; Howard Bes-. and Mrs. Zino terey. Sokolsky, Ons; uski, Lakeville, Mrs. George E. , N.Y.; Mrs. yringham; Mrs. and Mrs. Julian Mrs. Robert C. itown; Dr. and Mul' lvr l,

Lawrence Selkowitz Is Music Producer For Opera Recording

Lawrence E. Selkowitz, a former Pittsfield resident, was Voice of America music producer for the recording of Lukas Foss' opera, "Gri[illegible]"

NY Herald Trib.

OCTOBER 30, 1955

An Opera Made for TV

JAY S. HARRISON

At eight, an age when most boys are impairing their parents' sanity, Lukas Foss was composing an opera based on a libretto by his mother. Next Sunday that work, "Griffelkin," brand new in every note and word, will receive its world premiere as the first presentation of the NBC-TV Opera Theater's seventh season. To act as consultant for the production, Mr. Foss, now thirty-three and an associate professor at U. C. L. A., recently arrived in town and found a spare moment to discuss his latest venture.

Collaboration by Mail

"Griffelkin," he began, "has been on my mind since I heard the story as a child. Of course, the trouble about writing an opera when you're eight is that by the time you start Act 2 you've outgrown Act 1 by several sizes. That's why my first version remained a fragment. I also made operatic attempts when I was eleven and again at fourteen, because with me setting words has always been a preoccupation. While I'm doing it I feel possessed—I take it as a kind of personal mission.

"Anyway, Peter Herman Adler, artistic director of the NBC Opera Theater, has had his eye on me since my 'Jumping Frog of Calaveras County' made a success. Luckily when he asked me for a work for his television series I mentioned the Griffelkin plot, and both he and I saw in it more than a simple children's fairy-tale. In fact, the two of us were sure that it could be lifted into the realm of adult fantasy. That's when he, on behalf of NBC, commissioned me to go ahead. When I happened to mention this to Hugh Ross, the choral conductor, he brought me together with the poet Alastair Reid—brought me together, that is, by correspondence."

Fifty letters later the initial draft of the libretto was completed and it was only then that composer and writer met for the first time. To hear Mr. Foss tell it, the United States mails are ideally suited for close collaboration. "Absolutely," he said. "In correspondence we treated each other with the natural respect that grows out of anonymity. We only began to have differences of opinion after we came face to face. Today we are very much on speaking terms." Mr. Reid, who was also present at our meeting, offered an aside: "On, shouting terms, he means."

"At any rate," continued Mr. Foss, "Alastair has been wonderful in taking the naive, little story and building it into something that is profound but not pretentious. It's not moralistic in a preachy way, but it does have a moral. No one can fail to see that."

A Child Devil

Actually, "Griffelkin" deals with a child-devil who, on his tenth birthday, receives a gift in the form of a trip to the Earth. Armed with a bottle of magic liquid he arrives in New York City where, on applying the elixir to the Statue of Liberty and the stone lions protecting the 42d St. Library, the former sings an aria and the latter roar a duet. Here, however, the story takes a serious turn. Griffelkin, who has set out to change the world into an image of Hell, finds his pursuit perverted by several sympathetic encounters with the human condition. He even commits a violation of his own devilhood by performing a good deed, whereupon he is straightway cut off from his home and his colleagues-in-evil. Griffelkin is then put on trial, found guilty and as punishment made to forego his devilish power and become a normal human being.

"The point," Mr. Foss remarked, "is that we take the wonders of our daily life for granted. Devils can't and don't. Through Griffelkin we get a fresh view of what a miracle something simple like a blue sky really is. Humanity changes him from a demon child to a happy one. I guess you'd say that my opera should be subtitled 'The Rake's Regress.'"

Problems of TV

As for the problems encountered in writing an opera for television, both Mr. Foss and Mr. Reid agreed that there were many but that they were in no way overwhelming. As Mr. Foss commented, "If an opera is good, it's good on TV or off. And don't forget, 'Griffelkin' was not only designed with TV in mind. It's written for the stage—if it works there it will work anywhere. The NBC production uses about eighty-one minutes of my music which runs to about 100 altogether. In other words, it's a full-length opera—my first."

At this point Mr. Reid, a teacher of literature at Sarah Lawrence College, took over the thread of Mr. Foss' narrative. "You see," he observed, "after realizing the immense ingenuity of the NBC television staff we stopped worrying about specific technical details. Those men—they can do anything. As a result, we were left to concentrate on the quality of the opera as a whole. We went after a simple clarity not for the sake of the medium on which it was to be shown but because the opera itself demands clarity; its magical quality, for example, had to be handled with extreme care.

Two Years' Hard Work

"Then, too, Lukas is very exacting as far as word arrangements go. Though my libretto is metrical and stanzaic all the lines were devised so as to be divisable into adaptable musical phrases. And if my text was not satisfactory to him, Lukas would frequently send me, in his own unpoetic words, the verbal rhythm he wanted in a certain passage and leave it to me to find a precise, though literate, duplicate. That, I assure you, is difficult. It took us a full two years of hard, hard work to bring 'Griffelkin' round to its present form."

So much for its background. In any case, "Griffelkin" should be well worth the attention of anyone who even remotely considers himself an opera fancier. Its composer, who came to this country via Germany and Paris at the age of fifteen, won a Pulitzer scholarship at twenty, became the official pianist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at twenty-one, was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship at twenty-three, the Prix de Rome at twenty-six and, at thirty, a position at U. C. L. A. formerly held by Arnold Schoenberg. That, moreover, is only a partial listing of the honors accorded him. If "Griffelkin" is in want of any further recommendations, they are not visible to the present writer.

Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (August 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer, Isadore Freed's Festival Overture, the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 2, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, August 9, with demonstrations at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4:00 p. m. At 8:15 p. m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Eleazar de Carvalho, Artistic Director and Permanent Conductor of the Brasil Symphony Orchestra and acting head this summer of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross. Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a. m. (August 11), which Pierre Monteux will conduct and for which a nominal charge of $1.00 is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m.; the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale the day of performance.

ZINO FRANCESCATTI, an outstanding attraction at the 1954 Berkshire Festival, and soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto this past Sunday, also donates his services to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer music school, in a chamber music recital (with Artur Balsam at the piano) of works by Faure, Ravel and Franck tomorrow, Wednesday, August 3, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre Concert Hall.

Francescatti, Pianist Balsam On Chamber Program Tonight

TANGLEWOOD—The final concert of the Wednesday evening chamber music series in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be played tonight by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam in the Theater Concert Hall.

Mr. Francescatti, who is making the second of two appearances at this summer's Festival, is donating his services for the benefit of the Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center. The program of sonatas for violin and piano will include the Sonata No. 1 by Faure and the Sonatas by Ravel and Franck.

Mr. Francescatti, who lives in nearby Monterey, first came to the United States in 1939 after great successes in Europe and South America. Ever since, he has been one of the most popular figures on the American concert stage, appearing annually in recital and with orchestra in most of our principal cities. He plays the famous "Hart" Stradivarius, dated 1727, which is one of the finest examples of the great violinmaker's art.

Tomorrow is Tanglewood on Parade, the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center. Festivities commence with a performance—for boxholders and purchasers of reserved seats—of scenes from 20th century operas in the formal gardens at 4 p.m. Starting at 6 p.m. there will be simultaneous demonstrations by the student symphony orchestra, chorus, composition, and opera departments of the music school. The evening concert features Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On the second half of the program Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops Orchestra. The Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin will be played by Jesus Maria Sanroma.

[246]

Berkshire Festival Concludes Final Concerts August 8-10-11-12

"Tanglewood on Parade" On Thursday Evening A Highlight

Four concerts during the coming week - a recital on Wednesday evening (August 8) in the intimate Theatre Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (August 12) by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed - will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade", the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (August 9) with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on August 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m.)

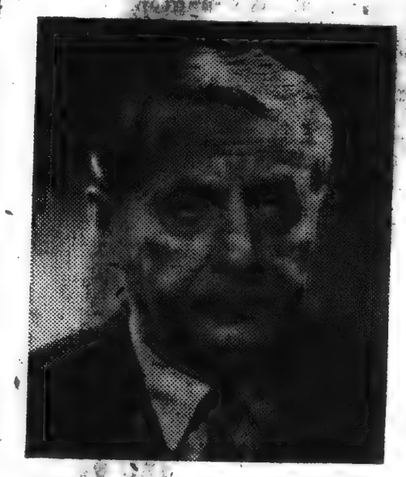
Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening (August 10) concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening (August 11); and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon (August 12) with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Margueriite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (August 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, August 9, with demonstrations at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4:00 p. m. At 8:15 p. m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Eleazar de Carvalho, Artistic Director and Permanent Conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and acting head this summer of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross. Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer or 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a. m. (August 11), which Pierre Monteux will conduct and for which a nominal charge of $1.00 is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m.; the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale the day of performance.



CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director for the past seven years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts concerts by the Symphony at the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts at Tanglewood, during the six-week season, July 4-August 12, 1956. Mr. Munch is also director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, now in its 14th session.

ZINO FRANCESCATTI, an outstanding attraction at the 1954 Berkshire Festival, and soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto this past Sunday, also donates his services to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer music school, in a chamber music recital (with Artur Balsam at the piano) of works by Faure, Ravel and Franck tomorrow, Wednesday, August 8, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre Concert Hall.

Francescatti, Pianist Balsam On Chamber Program Tonight

TANGLEWOOD—The final concert of the Wednesday evening chamber music series in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be played tonight by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Mr. Francescatti, who is making the second of two appearances at this summer's Festival, is donating his services for the benefit of the Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center. The program of sonatas for violin and piano will include the Sonata No. 1 by Faure and the Sonatas by Ravel and Franck.

Mr. Francescatti, who lives in nearby Monterey, first came to the United States in 1939 after great successes in Europe and South America. Ever since, he has been one of the most popular figures on the American concert stage, appearing annually in recital and with orchestra in most of our principal cities. He plays the famous "Hart" Stradivarius, dated 1727, which is one of the finest examples of the great violinmaker's art.

Tomorrow is Tanglewood on Parade, the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center. Festivities commence with a performance—for boxholders and purchasers of reserved seats—of scenes from 20th century operas in the formal gardens at 4 p.m. Starting at 6 p.m. there will be simultaneous demonstrations by the student symphony orchestra, chorus, composition, and opera departments of the music school. The evening concert features Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On the second half of the program Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops Orchestra. The Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin will be played by Jesus Maria Sanroma.

More Boxholders Are Listed for Tanglewood Benefit

Additional boxholders for Tanglewood on Parade tomorrow have been announced by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, chairman of the box committee.

They are Mr. and Mrs. Alvin G. Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Alan J. Blau, Mr. and Mrs. Simon England and Donald B. Miller of Pittsfield; Col. and Mrs. H. George Wilde and Mrs. Charles Bassett, Lenox; Miss Mabel Choate, Miss Marion Kemp and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Percival, Stockbridge; Howard Bessette, Sheffield; Mr. and Mrs. Zino Francescatti, Monterey.

Also, George Sokolsky, Otis; Mrs. Scoville Firuski, Lakeville, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. George E. Judd, Cannonsville, N.Y.; Mrs. Sidney Howard, Tyringham; Mrs. John Talbot, Mr. and Mrs. Julian K. Sprague and Mrs. Robert C. Sprague, Williamstown; Dr. and Mrs. William J. Mulligan, Brookline; and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Little Boar's Head, N.H.

Tickets Available

Box seat tickets, which may be purchased individually, still are available.

Grounds will open at 4 in the afternoon. Holders of box and reserved seats are invited to an opera by students of the Berkshire Music Center. At 5:45, simultaneous sessions of each of the center's departments will be in operation at various points on the grounds. The main concert will be at 8:15 in the Shed, when both the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestra will play.

Tanglewood on Parade is a benefit for the center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 14th year.

Lawrence Selkowitz Is Music Producer For Opera Recording

Lawrence E. Selkowitz, a former Pittsfield resident, was Voice of America music producer for the recording of Lukas Foss' opera, "Griffelkin," last weekend at Tanglewood. The Voice of America recorded the opera for use in overseas broadcasts. Interviews and commentaries of the opera and concerts will be in three languages in addition to English.

Mr. Selkowitz is the son of Mrs. Gussie Selkowitz of 19 Seymour St. and the late Peter Selkowitz.

Representing the foreign sections were Edward Vergara, Italian music commentator and music critic for the Italian service; Ivon Shidlof of the French service; and Edgar Hodge, representing the Latin-American section.

Harold Boxer, musical director and executive producer in charge of music production, is project coordinator.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047

AUG 10 1956

Zino Francescatti Pleases Huge Tanglewood Audience

Tchaikowsky, Schumann Highlight Sunday's Concert

Tchaikowsky's Violin Concerto and the Second Symphony of Robert Schmann highlighted the Berkshire Music Festival concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Sunday afternoon, August 6, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Charles Munch as conductor.

The program opened with a Symphonic Ode by Aaron Copland, and the composer, himself, took a bow with Dr Munch after its performance. To this reviewer, at least, the ode did not make itself felt musically until the last passage. Mr Copland, in the program notes, spoke about letting the music give out its own meaning without too much written explanation. This is an admirable idea, but in this case, more explanation would have helped.

Zino Francescatti was soloist in the violin concerto, a virtuoso whose technical and emotional achievement on Sunday was a delight to the ear. In the cadenza, his exquisite playing was particularly in evidence. Dr Munch muted the orchestra slightly throughout to give the soloist full expression, which gave the concerto a beautifully proportioned performance.

The program ended with Schubert's Second Symphony, a wonderfully joyous creation by that master of melody. The third movement with its gentle, yet sweeping rhythms, was especially well-performed.

By the huge crowds in attendance at Tanglewood, the musicianship of Dr Munch and the Boston Symphony are well-appreciated.

[246]

Musical Events In New England Of Wide Interest

"Tanglewood on Parade" in the program tonight in the Berkshire Music Festival near Lenox, Mass. This event with a full program, all departments of the Berkshire Music Center functioning simultaneously in programs, in various places on the grounds, will bring the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler in concert, along with the full Boston Symphony under Eleazar de Cavallo, young South American conductor. That concert will be in the Great Music Shed.

Final "Tanglewood" programs of 1956 will take place Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon in The Shed. Dr. Charles Munch, director of the Orchestra and of the Music Center, will conduct Friday night and Sunday afternoon; Pierra Monteux, one-time conductor of the Boston and, like Dr. Munch, long known here and in Europe music programs, will conduct the Saturday night concert. Maestro Monteux will lead some of the concerts when The Boston makes its European tour this month and next. Among engagements will be those in the Edinburgh Festival and in Russia. The orchestra will fly to Europe next week.

The combined Composers' Conference and Chamber Music Center will open its 11th annual session Sunday and continue through Aug. 26 on Bennington College campus, Bennington, Vt. These annual sessions were founded in 1946 by Alan Carter, now director and musical director of the Vermont State Symphony Orchestra, one of the first of its kind in the nation.

Among staff members this summer are Robert Bloom, oboeist, member of the Bach Aria Group and soloist with major recording orchestra; Earl Rogers of New York, tenor; Roger Goeb, composer and staff member for six years in Bennington and Theodore Songin, composer and critic. There will be a Chamber Music Center for amateurs. Among the Center's staff are Max Pollikoff, violinist; George Grossman, viola and Carl Stern, cellist. The Conference aims to give composers opportunity to hear their music played by experts. Amateur players have opportunity to join others in performance of chamber compositions.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

AUG 7 1956

Tanglewood 'On Parade' Thursday

The concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra which will climax this season's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities Thursday evening in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will bring back to Tanglewood the piano virtuoso, Jesus Maria Sanroma. With Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra, Mr. Sanroma will introduce into the Berkshire Festival repertoire the Piano Concerto in F by Gershwin.

For years Mr. Sanroma was official pianist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with Serge Koussevitzky conducting he played the American premieres of many outstanding contemporary works for piano and orchestra, among them Honegger's Concertino, Stravinsky's Capriccio, Piston's Capriccio, Ravel's G major Concerto, and the Hindemith Concerto which was written especially for him.

Carvalho And Fiedler

The Boston Pops portion of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert will feature also a Suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque," with music by Rossini orchestrated by Respighi, and Ravel's "Bolero," all conducted by Mr. Fiedler.

On the first half of the concert Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10, called "Rasga o Coracao," with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, head of the chorus department.

During the afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center.

DE CARVALHO TO LEAD BSO AT "TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"

Jewish Advocate — Thurs. Aug. 9

Eleazar de Carvalho, the artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra this evening, August 9, in the first half of the gala concert which will conclude this season's "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, the Choros No. 10 by Villa-Lobos.

Mr. de Carvalho has returned to Tanglewood this summer, after a five-year absence, as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center. Since his last guest-conducting appearance at the Berkshire Festival in 1951, he has conducted primarily in his own country and in Europe, especially in Paris, Brussels, London and Berlin. In addition to his post with the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, Mr. de Carvalho is general director of the Juventude Musical Brasileira (Brazilian Musical Youth), a society which he founded in 1952.

At the conclusion of the current season at the Berkshire Festival, Mr. de Carvalho will return to Brazil for three weeks with his orchestra. In September, with Herbert von Karajan and Karl Bohm, he will conduct the Berlin Philharmonic during the Festival of Berlin.

On the second half of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive "Tanglewood on Parade" appearance, playing a Suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque" arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini, Ravel's "Bolero" and the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist.

During the afternoon simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments — student symphony (Department I), chorus (Department II), original compositions (Department III), opera (Department IV), and the amateur division, or Tanglewood Study Group (Department V).

Tickets are now on sale at the box office at Tanglewood in Lenox. Reserved seats are $4 and $3, and unreserved general admission is $2.50. A special afternoon performance of scenes from 20th Century operas will be given in the formal gardens at 4 p.m. to which holders of box seats only ($5) will be admitted.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 94,124

AUG 7 1956

Final Events Starting At Tanglewood

Final events in the fifteenth annual Berkshire Music Festival will be held at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this week.

Thursday, the yearly gala, "Tanglewood On Parade", featuring work by the students at the Berkshire Music Center, and a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestra, will be held. Afternoon events begin at 4 o'clock, evening at 6.

The last three main concerts by the Boston Symphony begin Friday night at 8:30 o'clock, when Charles Munch will conduct Haydn's Symphony No. 102, Piston's Sixth Symphony, Strauss' "Son Juan" and Dukas' "Sorcerer's Apprentice."

Monteux on Saturday

Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra Saturday night in Freed's "Festival" Overture, Brahms' Third Sympony, Enesco's Suite For Orchestra, Opus 9, and Strauss "Rosenkavalier" Suite.

The final concert of the season will be Sunday afternoon at 2:30 when Mr. Munch conducts Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the third act of Wagner's "Meistersinger", with James Pease, Albert da Costa and Marguerite Willauer as soloists.

Parrot to Attend GOP Convention

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP)—A parrot which can say "Vote for Ike" has been granted special permission to travel by regular railway coach to the Republican National Convention in San Francisco.

The parrot, Mickey, 27 years old, is owned by city assessor and Mrs. Jake Neighbor. They will accompany their pet to the national convention.

News-Tribune (e)
WALTHAM, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 13,684

AUG 9 1956

—The Stroller—

An appeal to pet owners who are concluding their summer vacations was made today by Carlton E. Buttrick, president of the Animal Rescue League of Boston, in regard to pet abandonment. Mr. Buttrick urged the public who have unwanted animals, to contact their nearest animal humane organization so the unwanted pet may be humanely put to rest.

When an animal is left behind, it becomes a stray, and a neighborhood nuisance. In many instances an animal that has been abandoned, will prey on wild life as the only means of subsistence. It is not only careless but cruel to leave a pet behind—especially after it has enjoyed the friendship and companionship of a good home.

If an animal should stray from home just prior to the owners return trip home, Mr. Buttrick suggests the owner contact the police station in the immediate area where the animal was lost. In many instances an animal is reported as being found, and the police can in turn notify the owner of the described animal.

Should an animal be found, its finder is urged to make contact with the local police in the immediate area, or with the nearest humane organization. Such an animal might be a child's pet, and your co-operation will end needless worry, and further upset.

—o—

You will have your last chance the weekend of August 10 to 12, to enjoy the enchantment of the Berkshire Music Festival at romantic Tanglewood.

According to the Massachusetts Department of Commerce, the August 10th weekend performance will bring to a close the 14th successful season of the famous Berkshire Music Festival, now known throughout the world.

The enchanting combination of fine music and breathless rolling vistas of the Berkshire Hills has caused the Festival to be described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Make it a point to enjoy one or all three of the final programs by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Friday, at 8:30 P.M., the Boston Symphony will present a program of Haydn, Piston, Strauss and Dukas. Saturday, at 8:30 P. M., compositions by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Strauss will be featured. Sunday's program begins at 2:30 P. M. and will feature selections by Wagner.

Beautiful Tanglewood is located in Lenox on Route 7, in the heart of the Berkshire Hills. Main east-west Routes 2-9-20, all connect with Route 7.

[247]

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

AUG 6 1956

Three Composers' Works Are Played At Tanglewood

Sunday afternoon a throng of 10,837 music-lovers, their appetites whetted by near-perfect weather and a promise of well-ordered fare by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, converged on the Music Shed and the invitingly spacious grounds at Tanglewood for the twentieth program in the current Berkshire Festival Series.

Two romantic composers shared the program with one contemporary composer, Aaron Copland whose Symphonic Ode, commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitsky Memorial Foundation and dedicated to the memory of Natalie and Serge Koussevitsky, opened the program.

As an hors d'oeuvre Mr. Copland's Ode was given its rightful place; packed with interesting material which was overwhelmed by erractic and repetitous rhythmic figures, wandering melodic lines, even the harmonic effects were, unless instrumentally padded, pallid and merely dissonant; the percussion and brass instrumentation was deliberate and quite exciting, but one's interest tended to lag long before the clipped conclusion. Mr. Copland appeared on stage to receive with Mr. Munch the audience's approval and appreciation.

The piece de resistance of the afternoon was undoubtedly Zino Francescatti's playing of Tschaikowsky's violin concerto. A dedicated violinist since a small boy, Mr. Francescatti was resplendent in his deeply felt and technically perfect interpretation of this magnificently rich work. With his "Hart" Stradavarius he imparted a glowing singing tone to the nostalgic Andante; his bowing producing smooth-flowing phrases breathing gently with subtle changes, his virtuosity breathtaking at all times; the finale was necessarily brilliant and swift, the repartee between soloist and orchestra deftly handled. Mr. Munch led this superior orchestra in a perfect complement to the violinist's style and composer's intent, preserving a skillful and well-balanced unity.

The audience recalled Mr. Francescatti many times with vigorous and vociferous applause.

After such rich fare, Schumann's Symphony No. 2 was a bountiful but rather somber finish; however intermission tempered the contrast, and this commemorative performance was well-received. Mr. Munch and the orchestra reflected well the complex emotional and constructive gamut inherent in its fertility of melody and design, and were particularly expressive in the mobile and exultant finale.

The audience's impetuous response to this easily assimilated fare, must have been heart-warming to Mr. Munch and the orchestra personnel who labor long and devotedly to please most of their listeners most of the time. Especially gratifying is it to see a goodly profusion of well-mannered sub-teen and teen-age young people, with genuine interest in all phases of the Festival program reflected in their alert and absorbed young faces.

— M. deB. B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

AUG 8 1956

Chamber Series To End Tonight At Tanglewood

The final concert of the Wednesday evening chamber music series in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be played tonight by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam in the intimate 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox. Mr. Francescatti, who is making the second of two appearances at this summer's Festival, is donating his services for the benefit of the Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Smyphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. The program of sonatas for violin and piano will include the Sonata No. 1 by Faure and the Sonatas by Ravel and Franck.

Mr. Francescatti, who lives in nearby Monterey, first came to the United States in 1939 after great successes in Europe and South America. Ever since, he has been one of the most popular figures on the American concert stage, appearing annually in recital and with orchestra in most of our principal cities. He plays the famous "Hart" Stradivarius, dated 1727, which is one of the finest examples of the great violinmakers' art.

Tomorrow "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefits for the Berkshire Music Center, with festivities commencing with a performance—for box holders and purchasers of reserved seats of scenes from 20th century operas in the formal gardens at 4 p.m. Starting at 6 p.m. there will be simultaneous demonstrations by the student symphony orchestra, chorus, composition and opera departments of the music school. The evening concert features Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

AUG 9 1956

City of Boston's Official Blessing On Symphony Orchestra's Europe Tour

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will embark for Europe next week with the official blessing of the City of Boston. Trustees, conductor Charles Munch and members of the orchestra will gather in Mayor Hynes' office Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock for the ceremonial send-off.

Munch and 79 members of the orchestra will fly to Ireland Monday evening. The other 49 members of the company leave by boat Tuesday morning.

The first concert of the tour, to include 19 cities in 14 countries, will be given in Cork, Aug. 24. During the tour, sponsored by the State Department, the orchestra will play concerts behind the "Iron Curtain" in Leningrad, Moscow and Prague.

Pierre Monteux, former conductor of the Boston Symphony who will share the concerts of the tour with Munch, will be present at Monday's meeting.

Munch will be presented with an official City of Boston flag to be flown at all concerts; copies of a book, "Boston . . . America's Home Port," to be given to mayors of the cities visited by the orchestra; and an ebony, gold-encrusted baton, which the conductor will use on the tour, and then deposit in the Symphony Hall museum in Boston as a memento of the tour.

Cities to be visited include Dublin, Edinburgh, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Berne, Paris, Chartres and Leeds.

The final concert will be given in London before the Queen of England on Sept. 25. Orchestra members are scheduled to begin the return to Boston Sept. 27.

"Arden Hall," named after his excellency the governor, has been opened in Accra, Gold Coast, as its first modern hotel and banquet hall. It has "sky rooms" for open air dancing and all bedrooms are equipped with bath.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

AUG 7 1956

Brazil Musician Conducts Thursday At Tanglewood

Eleazar de Carvalho, the artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Thursday evening, in the first half of the gala concert which will conclude this season's "Tanglewood" on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, the Choros No. 10 by Villa-Lobos.

Mr. de Carvalho has returned to Tanglewood this summer, after a five-year absence, as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center. Since his last guest-conducting appearance at the Berkshire Festival in 1951, he has conducted primarily in his own country and in Europe, especially in Paris, Brussels, London and Berlin. In addition to his post with the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, Mr. de Carvalho is general director of the Juventude Musical Brasileira (Brazian Musical Youth), a society which he founded in 1952. Recognized as a public utility in Brazil, sponsored by the Ministry of Education and Culture, the society in 1955 brought the musical education of some 75,000 Brazilian youngsters under its supervision. At the conclusion of the current season at the Berkshire Festival, Mr. de Carvalho will return to Brazil for three weeks with his orchestra. In September, with Herbert von Karajan and Karl Bohm, he will conduct the Berlin Philharmonic during the Festival of Berlin.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

AUG 6 1956

Record Crowd At Tanglewood

A record crowd of 11,104 avid music lovers was bountifully rewarded Saturday night at a Koussevitsky Memorial concert in the Shed on the Tanglewood grounds. Leonard Berstein was the conductor of the evening and part of the year's largest assemblage was due strictly to his multi-faceted personality. He is without doubt the most exaggeratedly expressive conductor I have ever witnessed. The question would seem to be whether he is expressing the music or that most fascinating person, Mr. Bernstein.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and the exceptionally well trained festival chorus performed magnificently the "Kyrie and Gloria from the Mass in C Minor" of Mozart. The soloists, soprano-Phyllis Curtain, Contralto-Eunice Alberts and Tenor-John McCollum were quite adequate to the difficult arias, Miss Curtin by far the most outstanding. Mr. McCollum we could hardly hear as he was postiioned just about as far back as was possible, and Miss Alberts, though she was vocally equal to every note, has a very throaty quality to her voice which rendered her efforts somewhat less than pleasing. A soprano - contralto duet, "Agnus Dei" however accomplished much in blending and interpretive feeling. The chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon sang with great enthusiasm for the beautiful music and reached magnificent choral heights in phrasing and changes of volume. Much credit for their performance should go to these directors for their thoroughness of preparation.

Prokofieff's 5th Symphony which followed the intermission enabled Mr. Bernstein to display more histrionics, but the result, even so, was the performance of a symphony you would like to hear over again, to get to know like you do the Classical, for which, with Peter and the Wolf, Prokofieff is so well known.

The first movement pulled out all the stops for brasses and percussion, and was not particularly like other works of this composer but the second was reassuring and the bird had lot of slowly thumping double bass passages which were very interesting to listen to. We left before the end but not too soon to hear the thunderous applause which appraised Mr. Bernstein and the members of the Boston Symphony of the success of their efforts.—F.M.R.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 93,908

AUG 8 1956

1956 FESTIVAL PROGRAMS ARE NEARING CLOSE

Tonight Marks Final Chamber Concert at Tanglewood

The final concert of the Wednesday evening chamber music series in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be played tonight by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam in the intimate 1200-seat theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. Mr. Francescatti, who is making the second of two appearances at this summer's Festival, is donating his services for the benefit of the Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. The program of sonatas for violin and piano will include the Sonata No. 1 by Faure and the sonatas by Ravel and Franck.

Mr. Francescatti, who lives in nearby Monterey, first came to the United States in 1939 after great successes in Europe and South America. Ever since, he has been one of the most popular figures on the American concert stage, appearing annually in recital and with orchestra in most of our principal cities. He plays the famous "Hart" Stradivarius, dated 1727, which is one of the finest examples of the great violinmaker's art.

"Tanglewood on Parade"

Tomorrow is "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, with performance—for box holders and purchasers of reserved seats—of scenes from 20th century operas in the formal gardens at 4 p. m. Starting at 6 p. m. there will be simultaneous demonstrations by the student symphony orchestra, chorus, composition, and opera departments of the music school. The evening concert features Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross. On the second half of the program Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops Orchestra in a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque" arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini, Ravel's "Bolero," and the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist.

Remaining tickets for tonight's concert, for "Tanglewood on Parade" tomorrow, for the final week-end Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, and for the open rehearsal Saturday morning when Pierre Monteux will rehearse his Saturday concert of music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted —Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawns will be on sale the day of each concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Gl...
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485

AUG 9 1956

City of Boston's Official Blessing On Symphony Orchestra's Europe Tour

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will embark for Europe next week with the official blessing of the City of Boston. Trustees, conductor Charles Munch and members of the orchestra will gather in Mayor Hynes' office Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock for the ceremonial send-off.

Munch and 79 members of the orchestra will fly to Ireland Monday evening. The other 49 members of the company leave by boat Tuesday morning.

The first concert of the tour, to include 19 cities in 14 countries, will be given in Cork, Aug. 24. During the tour, sponsored by the State Department, the orchestra will play concerts behind the "Iron Curtain" in Leningrad, Moscow and Prague.

Pierre Monteux, former conductor of the Boston Symphony who will share the concerts of the tour with Munch, will be present at Monday's meeting.

Munch will be presented with an official City of Boston flag to be flown at all concerts; copies of a book, "Boston . . . America's Home Port," to be given to mayors of the cities visited by the orchestra; and an ebony, gold-encrusted baton, which the conductor will use on the tour, and then deposit in the Symphony Hall museum in Boston as a memento of the tour.

Cities to be visited include Dublin, Edinburgh, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm, Vienna, Stuttgart, Munich, Berne, Paris, Chartres and Leeds.

The final concert will be given in London before the Queen of England on Sept. 25. Orchestra members are scheduled to begin the return to Boston Sept. 27.

"Arden Hall," named after his excellency the governor, has been opened in Accra, Gold Coast, as its first modern hotel and banquet hall. It has "sky rooms" for open air dancing and all bedrooms are equipped with bath.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
AUG 6 1956

Zino Francescatti Tanglewood's Sunday Guest Performer

By TERE PASCONE
Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—Beaming with pleasure, Zino Francesatti, violinist, accepted the prolonged plaudits, the scattered cries of "Bravo", and three curtain calls following his performance of Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major, Op. 35.

That's how it was yesterday in Tanglewood at the Berkshire Festival concert attended by 10,837—the highest Sunday afternoon audience this season.

Yet despite this manifestation, we must report that Mr. Francescatti's interpretation was a disappointment. Not only was fire and lyricism lacking in the brilliant work, but many phrases were blurred and Mr. Francescatti's notes not as clean and crisp as they could have been.

* * *

EVEN THE accompaniment of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch seemed much too heavy for the soloist. From musical standards it was not Mr. Francescatti's day.

But there were moments when the French musician did reach heights of virtuosity and these helped to make up for the minus side of his performance: Mr. Francescatti was master as he leaped about from string to string in double-stops; his spicatto technique was equally effective, and he displayed admirable skill and musical ingenuity in the cadenza of the first movement.

The program opened with Copland's "Symphonic Ode," performed for the first time at Tanglewood. The piece was what one expected it to be—modern and dissonant — and with the Munch touch, it emerged as a dramatic gem, highlighted by a fascinating, magnetic irregular rhythmic beat.

* * *

THE AFTERNOON closed with Schumann's Symphony No. 2 in C major, Op. 61 and Mr. Munch, who has a special affinity for Schumann, conducted the Bostonians in a superb performance of the impressive work. With virility, confidence and understanding, he led the musicians in and out of every mood from the grave to the joyous; from darkness and hopelessness into music of exultation and triumph.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
AUG 8 1956

Hartford Man's Music Slated At Tanglewood

The Festival Overture by Isadore Freed, chairman of the composition and theory departments at Hartt College of Music, will have its first performance at Tanglewood Saturday by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Pierre Monteux who conducted the premiere with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

Dr. Freed composed it in 1945 at West Stockbridge, Mass., and it was performed ten times on the San Francisco orchestra's first transcontinental tour in 1947.

* * *

THE CONCERTS Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p. m. and Sunday at 2:30 in the Tanglewood Music Shed will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass.

Tonight violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam conclude the chamber music series in the theater-concert hall.

Tanglewood on Parade, scheduled Thursday, is the annual gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer School conducted by the Boston Symphony in connection with its Berkshire Festival. The program includes demonstrations by all student departments at 6 and a concert at 8:30 in which the Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho will lead the Boston Symphony and Arthur Fiedler the Boston Pops with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

* * *

WEEKEND PROGRAMS follow:

Friday: Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in Haydn's Symphony No. 102 in B flat, Piston's Symphony No. 6, Richard Strauss' "Don Juan," and Dukas' "L'apprenti sorcier."

Saturday: Beside Dr. Freed's work Pierre Monteux will conduct Brahms' Symphony No. 3 in F, Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, opus 9, and Strauss' Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier.

Sunday: Dr. Munch will conduct Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther and Marguerite Willauer as Eva. Three outstanding students of the opera department also will have vocal solo parts.

Free Press
MELROSE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,490
AUG 9 1956

Final Week End of Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox

You will have your last chance the weekend of August 10 to 12, to enjoy the enchantment of the Berkshire Music Festival at romantic Tanglewood.

According to the Massachusetts department of commerce, the August 10 weekend performance of the Berkshire Music Festival will bring to close the 14th successful season of the famous festival, now known throughout the world.

The enchanting combination of fine music and breathless rolling vistas of the Berkshire Hills has caused the Festival to be described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Make it a point to enjoy one or all three of the final programs by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Friday, 8:30 p.m., the Boston Symphony will present a program of Haydn, Piston, Strauss and Dukas. Saturday, at 8:30 p.m., compositions by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Strauss will be featured. Sundays' program begins at 2:30 p. m. and will feature selections by Wagner.

Beautiful Tanglewood is located in Lenox on Route 7, in the heart of the Berkshire Hills. Main est-west Routes 2-9-20, all connect with Route 7.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,944
AUG 8 1956

Selectmen Approve One-Day Sale of Beer For Tanglewood Event

STOCKBRIDGE—At their meeting Monday, the Selectmen issued the Boston Symphony Orchestra a permit for the sale of beer for one day at Tanglewood.

The permit is for use at tomorrow's "Tanglewood on Parade."

"Lee Days" start Friday for 2 days. See tomorrow's Eagle. —Adv. —9

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
AUG 9 1956

Tanglewood Plans

Final Weekend Schedule For Berkshire Festival

The three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held this evening.

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss, and Dukas on Friday evening. Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco, and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening; and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th anniversary season; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence late this afternoon with demonstrations at 6 o'clock by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4 o'clock. At 8:15 a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops, concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn.

Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Boston Symphony on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakov's "Russian Easter" Overture and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops on the second half of the program in music by Rossini, Ravel, and George Gershwin, with Jesús María Sanromá, pianist, making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Concerto in F.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 o'clock, which Pierre Monteux will conduct. A nominal charge is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Walter Piston, composer, and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On Friday evening Dr. Munch will conduct Mr. Piston's Symphony No. 6 in its Tanglewood premiere.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485
AUG 9 1956

Berkshires Tonight

The Berkshire Festival's annual showcase and benefit, "Tanglewood on Parade," will be held in Lenox tonight. The program, which includes concerts by the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops, under Arthur Fiedler, will benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's Summer music school.

Beginning at 6, the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center will show their wares. There will be performances of opera, chamber music, a lawn party and picnic supper.

A gala concert in the Music Shed at 8:15 will present the Boston Symphony under Eleazer de Carvalho and the Boston Pops under Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist in Gershwin's Concerto in F. Dancing on the lawn will conclude the fete.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 184,866
AUG 9 1956

Tanglewood Gala Is Held Tonight

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala held for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will take place tonight with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Lenox.

[249]

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
AUG 6 1956

Zino Francescatti Tanglewood's Sunday Guest Performer

By TERE PASCONE
Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—Beaming with pleasure, Zino Francesatti, violinist, accepted the prolonged plaudits, the scattered cries of "Bravo" and three curtain calls following his performance of Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D major, Op. 35.

That's how it was yesterday in Tanglewood at the Berkshire Festival concert attended by 10,837—the highest Sunday afternoon audience this season.

Yet despite this manifestation, we must report that Mr. Francescatti's interpretation was a disappointment. Not only were fire and lyricism lacking in the brilliant work, but many phrases were blurred and Mr. Francescatti's notes not as clean and crisp as they could have been.

* * *

EVEN THE accompaniment of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch seemed much too heavy for the soloist. From musical standards, it was not Mr. Francescatti's day.

But there were moments when the French musician did reach heights of virtuosity and these helped to make up for the minus side of his performance: Mr. Francescatti was master as he leaped about from string to string in double-stops; his spicatto technique was equally effective, and he displayed admirable skill and musical ingenuity in the cadenza of the first movement.

The program opened with Copland's "Symphonic Ode," performed for the first time at Tanglewood. The piece was what one expected it to be—modern and dissonant — and with the Munch touch, it emerged as a dramatic gem, highlighted by a fascinating, magnetic irregular rhythmic beat.

* * *

THE AFTERNOON closed with Schumann's Symphony No. 2 in C major, Op. 61 and Mr. Munch, who has a special affinity for Schumann, conducted the Bostonians in a superb performance of the impressive work. With virility, confidence and understanding, he led the musicians in and out of every mood from the grave to the joyous; from darkness and hopelessness into music of exultation and triumph.

Free Press
MELROSE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,490
AUG 9 1956

Final Week End of Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox

You will have your last chance the weekend of August 10 to 12, to enjoy the enchantment of the Berkshire Music Festival at romantic Tanglewood.

According to the Massachusetts department of commerce, the August 10 weekend performance of the Berkshire Music Festival will bring to close the 14th successful season of the famous festival, now known throughout the world.

The enchanting combination of fine music and breathless rolling vistas of the Berkshire Hills has caused the Festival to be described as "one of the great cultural institutions of our time."

Make it a point to enjoy one or all three of the final programs by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Friday, 8:30 p.m., the Boston Symphony will present a program of Haydn, Piston, Strauss and Dukas. Saturday, at 8:30 p.m., compositions by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Strauss will be featured. Sundays program begins at 2:30 p. m. and will feature selections by Wagner.

Beautiful Tanglewood is located in Lenox on Route 7, in the heart of the Berkshire Hills. Main est-west Routes 2-9-20, all connect with Route 7.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
AUG 8 1956

Hartford Man's Music Slated At Tanglewood

The Festival Overture by Isadore Freed, chairman of the composition and theory departments at Hartt College of Music, will have its first performance at Tanglewood Saturday by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Pierre Monteux who conducted the premiere with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

Dr. Freed composed it in 1945 at West Stockbridge, Mass., and it was performed ten times on the San Francisco orchestra's first transcontinental tour in 1947.

* * *

THE CONCERTS Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p. m. and Sunday at 2:30 in the Tanglewood Music Shed will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass.

Tonight violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam conclude the chamber music series in the theater-concert hall.

Tanglewood on Parade, scheduled Thursday, is the annual gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer School conducted by the Boston Symphony in connection with its Berkshire Festival. The program includes demonstrations by all student departments at 6 and a concert at 8:30 in which the Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho will lead the Boston Symphony and Arthur Fiedler the Boston Pops with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

* * *

WEEKEND PROGRAMS follow:

Friday: Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in Haydn's Symphony No. 102 in B flat, Piston's Symphony No. 6, Richard Strauss' "Don Juan," and Dukas' "L'apprenti sorcier."

Saturday: Beside Dr. Freed's work Pierre Monteux will conduct Brahms' Symphony No. 3 in F, Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, opus 9, and Strauss' Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier.

Sunday: Dr. Munch will conduct Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther and Marguerite Willauer as Eva. Three outstanding students of the opera department also will have vocal solo parts.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
AUG 8 1956

Selectmen Approve One-Day Sale of Beer For Tanglewood Event

STOCKBRIDGE—At their meeting Monday, the Selectmen issued the Boston Symphony Orchestra a permit for the sale of beer for one day at Tanglewood.

The permit is for use at tomorrow's "Tanglewood on Parade."

"Lee Days" start Friday for 2 days. See tomorrow's Eagle. —Adv. —9

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 131,485
AUG 9 1956

Berkshires Tonight

The Berkshire Festival's annual showcase and benefit, "Tanglewood on Parade," will be held in Lenox tonight. The program, which includes concerts by the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops, under Arthur Fiedler, will benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's Summer music school.

Beginning at 6, the various departments of the Berkshire Music Center will show their wares. There will be performances of opera, chamber music, a lawn party and picnic supper.

A gala concert in the Music Shed at 8:15 will present the Boston Symphony under Eleazer de Carvalho and the Boston Pops under Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist in Gershwin's Concerto in F. Dancing on the lawn will conclude the fete.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
AUG 9 1956

Tanglewood Plans

Final Weekend Schedule For Berkshire Festival

The three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held this evening.

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss, and Dukas on Friday evening. Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco, and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening; and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th anniversary season; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence late this afternoon with demonstrations at 6 o'clock by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4 o'clock. At 8:15 a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops, concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn.

Eleazar de Carvalho, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Boston Symphony on the first half of the program in Rimsky-Korsakov's "Russian Easter" Overture and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops on the second half of the program in music by Rossini, Ravel, and George Gershwin, with Jesús María Sanromá, pianist, making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Concerto in F.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 o'clock, which Pierre Monteux will conduct. A nominal charge is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Walter Piston, composer, and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On Friday evening Dr. Munch will conduct Mr. Piston's Symphony No. 6 in its Tanglewood premiere.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 184,866
AUG 9 1956

Tanglewood Gala Is Held Tonight

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala held for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will take place tonight with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed at Lenox.

[249]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

AUG 9 1956

Final Chamber Concert At Tanglewood Heard by 1,901

The final concert of the Wednesday evening chamber music series of the Berkshire Music festival was played last night. Violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam performed before an audience of 1,901 persons in the theater concert hall.

Perform Sonatas

The program of sonatas for violin and piano included the Sonata No. 1 by Faure and the Sonatas by Ravel and Franck.

This evening the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program, for the benefit of the Berkshire Music center, will be held. Demonstrations by Music center students will begin at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and the two-part concert in the big shed, featuring both the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops orchestras, will get under way at 8.15 o'clock.

Eleazar de Carvalho, the artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony orchestra in Rio de Janiero, will conduct the Boston Symphony in the first half of the concert. Scheduled to be heard are Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and the Chorus No. 10 by Villa-Lobos. The latter work will be performed with the assistance of the Festival chorus, under the direction of Hugh Ross.

Boston Pops Plays

On the second half of the program, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops will make their third consecutive "Tanglewood on Parade" appearance, playing a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantastique," arranged by Respighi from the music of Rossini, Ravel's "Bolero" and the Piano Concerto in F, by George Gershwin, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist.

Holders of box and reserve seat tickets have been invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens at 4 o'clock. Starting at 6 o'clock there will be simultaneous demonstrations by the student symphony orchestra, the chorus, composition and opera departments of the music school.

A lawn party and picnic supper will be held at 7 o'clock.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,047
AUG 10 1956

Music

Programs for the sixth and final Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are as follows: Friday evening, August 10 at 8:30 in the Music Shed, Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in music of Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas. Saturday evening, August 11, Pierre Monteux leads the orchestra in selections of Brahms, Freed, Enesco and Richard Strauss. Dr Munch will conclude the Festival on Sunday afternoon, August 12 at 2:30 with Beethoven's Eroica (Third) Symphony, and a concert version of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger", with solosits, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

On Saturday, August 11, at 11:30 a.m. the Connecticut Symphony Orchestra and Local 63 of the American Federation of Musicians will give a free Young People's Pops Concert at Fairfield University field. Admission is by tickets only, which are without charge and may be obtained from all Connecticut Symphony agencies, Boy Scout and Girl Scout camps and offices, churches and youth organizations. Or call Bridgeport FOrest 8-2586.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

AUG 7 1956

Lukas Foss Work Seen at Tanglewood

BY GEORGE [redacted]
Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — To recapture the wondrous world of childhood fantasy takes a master story teller in the manner of Hans Christian Anderson or the Grimm Brothers.

Fortunately, Lukas Foss, whose "Griffelkin" was given at Tanglewood last night, found happy inspiration in a little-known Grimm fairy tale. Its ingenuous charm and disarming qualities as an opera owe much to the original story. Commissioned by NBC for television and first seen via that medium last Fall, it had its world premiere as a stage performance in the Theater-Concert Hall last night with student singers and a student orchestra.

* * *

THE STORY tells of a little devil sent to earth "to do 24 hours of mischief and evil." After his arrival, though, he discovers many things to his liking. With each discovery he becomes more humane and more human in his reactions, even falls in love. After committing a good deed just before midnight, he is tried by his hell-companions and expelled from their domain and finally becomes a mortal, a little boy.

To this fanciful and fantastic situation Mr. Foss has appended a musical score that is situably light-textured and imaginative. It is not an easy score to sing or to enunciate in a manner that is intelligible to the audience. Last night a good majority of the lines were lost to the listeners because the singrs were more intnt on musical projection than on communication of the text.

Mildred Allen, as "Griffelkin" is arch and energetic but not nearly mischievous for the part. Regina Sarfaty as Griffelkin's grandmother proved herself an excellent singing actress, and in this large cast it would be unfair not to mention Ted Puffer as "Letterbox" and Malcolm Bernstein and Spelios Constantine as the two blase "Lions."

* * *

THE OPERA was produced and staged by Boris Goldovsky, who spoke briefly in front of the curtain, expressing the opinion that "artists have their heart's desire" at Tanglewood and the opportunity to create and produce many musical works that could not be given elsewhere.

With Mr. Foss conducting and Mr. Goldovsky on the production and this engaging opera had many delightful touches, superb costuming, excellent lighting, even though the singing was below the level expected from a student group at Tanglewood.

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 20,000

AUG 9 1956

DE CARVALHO TO LEAD BSO AT "TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"

Eleazar de Carvalho, the artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra this evening, August 9, in the first half of the gala concert which will conclude this season's "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. de Carvalho will conduct Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, the Choros No. 10 by Villa-Lobos.

Mr. de Carvalho has returned to Tanglewood this summer, after a five-year absence, as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center. Since his last guest-conducting appearance at the Berkshire Festival in 1951, he has conducted primarily in his own country and in Europe, especially in Paris, Brussels, London and Berlin. In addition to his post with the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, Mr. de Carvalho is general director of the Juventude Musical Brasileira (Brazilian Musical Youth), a society which he founded in 1952.

At the conclusion of the current season at the Berkshire Festival, Mr. de Carvalho will return to Brazil for three weeks with his orchestra. In September, with Herbert von Karajan and Karl Bohm, he will conduct the Berlin Philharmonic during the Festival of Berlin.

On the second half of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive "Tanglewood on Parade" appearance, playing a Suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque" arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini, Ravel's "Bolero" and the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist.

During the afternoon simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments — student symphony (Department I), chorus (Department II), original compositions (Department III), opera (Department IV), and the amateur division, or Tanglewood Study Group (Department V).

Tickets are now on sale at the box office at Tanglewood in Lenox. Reserved seats are $4 and $3, and unreserved general admission is $2.50. A special afternoon performance of scenes from 20th Century operas will be given in the formal gardens at 4 p.m. to which holders of box seats only ($5) will be admitted.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 8 1956

Final Concerts Of Tanglewood Season Slated

Lenox, Aug. 7—The final concert of the Wednesday evening chamber music series in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be played Wednesday by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

Mr. Francescatti, who is making the second of two appearances at this summer's festival, is donating his services for the benefit of the revolving scholarship fund of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

The program of sonatas for violin and piano will include the Sonata No. 1 by Faure and the Sonatas by Ravel and Franck. Mr. Francescatti lives in nearby Monterey.

On Thursday is "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, with festivities commencing with a performance — for box holders and purchasers of reserved seats —of scenes from 20th century operas in the formal gardens at 4. Starting at 6 p. m. there will be simultaneous demonstrations by the student symphony orchestra, chorus, composition, and opera departments of the music school.

The evening concert features Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross.

On the second half of the program Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops Orchestra in a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque" arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini, Ravel's "Bolero," and the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist.

Remaining tickets for Wednesday's concert, for "Tanglewood on Parade," for the final weekend festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, and for the open rehearsal Saturday morning when Pierre Monteux will rehearse his Saturday concert of music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office. Telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawns will be on sale the day of each concert.

[2]07]

'TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE':

10,000 at Berkshire

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 10.—That mid-Summer musical madness known as "Tanglewood on Parade" drew a crowd of more than 10,000 last night, a large number of them young people and campers in the vicinity. The weather was perfect and the atmosphere musical, to say the least.

As the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Centre (good for $20,000) it followed a familiar pattern with the three-ring circus of simultaneous performances by the student orchestra, opera, and composition departments at 6 p.m., a concert by the Tanglewood Choir at 7, and a gala concert by the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops in the Music Shed at 8:15.

For 7 Hours

For those who arrived early there were performances by the Tanglewood study group and scenes from operas by Debussy, Prokofieff, Hindemith, and Strauss, staged in the gardens.

The music went round and round for about seven hours, but no more so than in the Villa-Lobos choros No. 10, which Eleazar de Carvalho featured in his part of the shed program.

This somewhat unique South American rhythmic debauch, made the more exciting by the mumbo jumbo sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, caught the audience's fancy as the conductor incited the performers to rhythmic heights.

He had preceded it with Rimsky-Korsakov's overture, "The Russian Easter." This became a commemorative performance for Carvalho because it was this piece that persuaded Koussevitzky to invite him to join the staff of the centre in 1946 when he was completely unknown and could speak no English.

Full Flavor

While the full flavor of the music eluded him, the vigor of his conducting indicated the quality that caught Koussevitzky's attention. Needless to say the Villa-Lobos brought it into full flower.

Arthur Fiedler's appearance brought pleasure not only because of his efficient, dynamic brand of conducting but also because the "pops" spirit took over the crowd. He opened with Rossini-Respighi's "La Boutique Fantasque."

Then Jesus Maria Sanroma played Gershwin's Piano Concerto with relish and style as only he can play it and the crowd registered enthusiastic approval.

Ravel's Bolero came almost as an anti-climax except that it never can be one. As for the encores—they were typical of Fiedler in his inimitable way.

It was a festive evening.

Festival Closing At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will close the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. with concerts at 8:30 p. m. today and 2:30 p. m. tomorrow. Tonight's program under Pierre Monteux includes Isadore Freed's Festival Overture, Brahms' Third Symphony, Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9, and a Suite from Richard Strauss' 'Der Rosenkavalier."

Berthoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" will be performed tomorrow under Charles Munch's direction. James Pease, Albert Da Costa, Margaret Millauer, Rosalind Hupp, Robert Nagy and John McCurdy will be the soloists with the orchestra and the Berkshire Music Center's festival chorus trained by James Aliferis. The orchestra will also give a public rehearsal today at 10 a. m.

The Berkshire Music Center will give its last concerts of the season at Tanglewood this week end. At the last student orchestra concert at 3 p.m. today, Aaron Copland, the Center's assistant director, will announce scholarships and prize awards. The closing chamber music concert will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

N.Y. Herald Trib. Aug. 11

Berkshire Festival Season To Conclude This Week End

Lenox, Aug. 10—The 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will conclude at Tanglewood with concerts Saturday at 8.30 p. m. and Sunday at 2.30 p. m.

Pierre Monteux will be the guest conductor Saturday. His program will be the "Festival Overture" by Isadore Freed; Brahms' Third Symphony in F Major; the Suite for Orchestra, Opus 9, by the late Georges Enesco; and a Suite from the opera "Der Rosenkavalier" by Richard Strauss. The Freed and Enesco works will receive their first Tanglewood performances.

On Sunday, Charles Munch will conclude this summer's festival conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, and the opening and final scenes from Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by James Aliferis of the chorus faculty, and with vocal soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, Margaret Millauer as Eva, Rosalind Hupp as Magdalene, Robert Nagy as David, and John McCurdy as Pogner.

In addition to these two concerts, festival patrons are invited to attend the final open rehearsal Saturday morning at 10 when Pierre Monteux will rehearse his Freed-Brahms-Enesco-Strauss program. A nominal admission charge of $1 is made, with proceeds benefiting the Pension Fund of the orchestra.

This week end concludes also the seasonal activities of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. The music school has presented some 40 concerts and demonstrations of its orchestra, chamber music, chorus, opera, composition division and amateur study group departments in this, its 14th six-week session. At Saturday afternoon's final concert by the student symphony orchestra in the Music Shed at 3 p. m., Aaron Copland, in his capacity as assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, will announce scholarships and prize awards. Sunday morning at 10 a. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, this season's final program of chamber music will be played by students of the school's instrumental department. These two events are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who may attend by making a voluntary contribution in support of the school.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for the two final Shed concerts Saturday at 8.30 p. m. and Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. and reservations may be made by telephoning Lenox 600.

Springfield Union, Sat. Aug. 11

New York Journal-American
Fri., Aug. 10, 1956-9

Sheila Bond Again Plays Fay Fromkin

Sheila Bond, who created the role of Fay Fromkin in the original Broadway production of the Arthur Kober-Joshua Logan-Harold Rome musical, "Wish You Were Here," is performing this starring part at the Westbury Music Fair, Westbury, L. I., for two weeks.

Playing opposite Miss Bond is Herbert Banke as Chick Miller, with featured roles being performed by Joey Faye, Jackie Kannon, Ken Harvey, and Morris Miller.

Francine Bond, Sheila's sister, plays the part of Teddy Stern, the other man-hungry girl in this musical about a Summer camp in the Catskills.

Asheville Journal Aug. 9

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD — August 4 and 5
By A. C. S.

The annual concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky was given at Tanglewood Saturday evening before an audience of more than 11,000 persons. Leonard Berstein was guest conductor.

The Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor utilized the talents of three solo artists, Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor, all of whom were in excellent voice. The varied facets of the two selections from the monumental Mass were tellingly reflected, although one wondered from time to time whether the reading was a bit heavy-handed. Special mention should again be made in these columns of the exceptionally fine work done by the Festival Chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon.

Stimulated and uplifted by the Mozart, one could hardly foresee that more exciting moments were yet to come. From the opening notes of the Symphony No. 5 by Prokofieff, however, one could sense a growing tension. A powerful work, traditional in design but unconventional in treatment, it embodies an ominous, brooding spirit which permeates the atmosphere and is never entirely dispelled. Rythymic complexities and bold use of instrumental color, as well as daring manipulation of thematic material, create a spine-tingling effect. Mr. Bernstein had the genie fully controlled at every turn. It was a stunning performance. Even the phrenetic athleticism of the conductor could be overlooked in the face of such sensational results.

Zino Francescatti appeared Sunday afternoon as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto in D major. The warmth and opulence of tone usually associated with the playing of this artist was ever present. Possession of a tremendous technique made even the most demanding passages seem easy. A real feeling of sympatico between conductor and soloist was evident at all times and was indeed necessary in the whirlwind finale. Mr. Francescatti received a deserved ovation at the close.

Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, revised for the 75th Anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opened the program, and Charles Munch gave a vigorous performance of the Schumann Symphony No. 2 after the intermission.

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD — FRIDAY
By E. G. B.

The principal attraction of last Friday's concert at Tanglewood was the performance of the brilliant young girl pianist, Jocy de Oliveira, a Brazilian newcomer to the States. She played the Ravel piano concerto, with Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony orchestra in a program which also included the first movement of the suite La Kermesse by Henry Barraud; three dances from the ballet The Three-Cornered Hat by Manuel de Falla; and the uncut score of Stravinsky's Petrouchka.

Miss Oliveira made a striking appearance in a flaming red gown, and acquitted herself with the poise and authority of a seasoned performer. Her mastery of the technical, rhythmic, and interpretive difficulties of the concerto was complete. Not many pianists, even of an older generation, can surpass her individuality of style, imaginativeness, and wide range of color. Her reading of the cantabile movement was a deeply moving one.

Carvalho's leadership of the orchestra was vigorous and colorful, in an exciting program, which benefited by his Latin temperament. The Barraud did not furnish a fully auspicious start, for at times the rhythm seemed too heavy and the brasses to oprominent. This, however, was soon forgotten in the sweeping vitality of the rest of the program. In both the Falla and Stravinsky works the Brazilian conductor excelled in his ability to mold the complexities of the score into clear shapes. His vigor and forcefulness have an individual quality, he knows how to build climaxes, he makes much of tonal contrasts. His fortissimo passages are overwhelming. Of course the virtuosity of the orchestra should not go unmentioned. This was particularly apparent in the Ravel, though the whole program made great demands on the orchestra as individuals and as a group.

The prolonged shouting of "bravo" at the end of the concert left no doubt as to the response of the audience.

Come to Church

[23]

NY Times
Fri Aug. 10

Springfield Union
August 11

'ANNUAL SHEBANG' IS HELD IN LENOX

10,000 Attend Tanglewood on Parade and Aid Fund to Tune of $24,000

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9—Many words have been written about Tanglewood on Parade, but the most concise and well-written bit of prose about the event that has come to this writer's attention appears on the bulletin board of the Berkshire Music Center. The notice says:

"Tanglewood on Parade is an annual shebang to benefit the Berkshire Music Center. The proceeds go to the school, and all concerned contribute their services to this noble cause. You are urged to bring all the friends, parents, cousins and landladies who are willing to pay the tariff of $2.50 to get in, since they will, of course, recognize the dual pleasure of hearing the music and having the moral satisfaction of knowing they are helping a good cause."

The students must have gone to work. About 10,000 persons attended Thursday's parade, and it brought more than $24,000 to the school's fund.

Festivities started at 4 o'clock and, as always, it was a combination of circus, picnic, family gathering and holiday outing. Until the final concert in the Shed, it was all the students' doing.

Simultaneous Events

First there were, simultaneously, the Tanglewood study group in the Barn and a series of operatic excerpts in the formal gardens. Then, at 5:45 P. M., a fanfare and an address by Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

At 6 o'clock, simultaneously, there were the student orchestra directed by student conductors, scenes from several operas and new music by young composers working on the premises. At 7, a concert by the Tanglewood Choir. At 8:15, a concert in the Music Shed shared by the Boston Symphony under Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler. In the latter part of this concert, Jesus Maria Sanroma was soloist in the Gershwin Piano Concerto.

Strolling around the premises during the afternoon, one heard good things and bad things, but above all one heard the enthusiastic music-making of eager young musicians. Nearly all are talented, a few are about ready to step into active careers, and they did their best, with heart and soul. It was a most encouraging spectacle.

One of the youngsters all set and ready to go is 26-year-old Kenneth D. Schermerhorn of Syracuse, N. Y. He is a conductor and has been named this year's winner of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship. He also won it last year. This is the first time that a Koussevitzky scholarship winner has repeated his feat.

He conducted the school orchestra in Prokofieff's "Classical Symphony." His beat and mannerisms are a cross between a Koussevitzky jitter and a Bernstein shuffle. It is easy to see from where his stick technique derives.

Called Very Gifted

Mr. Schermerhorn is very gifted. His work has real personality, and he is able to communicate his ideas—and quite decided ideas they are. It remains to be seen whether he will develop into a virtuoso or a musician, but he has one priceless attribute that cannot be taught, and that is a degree of electricity that carries over the footlights.

At the night concert, Senhor de Carvalho led the Boston Symphony in energetic performances of Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter" Overture and the Villa-Lobos Choros No. 10. When the Brazilian conductor came out he glared at the music stand, grasped it in a strenuous one-hand lift and deposited it out of the way. The audience got the idea. Senhor de Carvalho wished to conduct without score.

He had introduced the Villa-Lobos work some years ago. It is slick and effective, with a choral background and full of carefully manicured exotic effects—a Brazilian primitive in white tie and tails, smoking imported Havanas and talking in an Oxford accent.

Mr. Fiedler's pieces with the "Pops" were the Rossini-Respighi "Boutique Fantasque" and Ravel's "Bolero," in addition to the Gershwin concerto. Mr. Sanroma played the solo part brilliantly—with an appropriately hard tone, technique to burn and a propulsive rhythmic quality. The applause probably could have been heard in Boston.

PISTON OPUS FEATURED AT TANGLEWOOD

Only 4295 at Opening Concert of Festival's Final Week End

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 10—The opening concert of this final week end of the Berkshire Music Festival drew only 4295 people in spite of the ideal weather conditions. It may be that a program of Haydn, Piston, Strauss and Dukas was responsible, for aside from the Piston Symphony, these works are thoroughly familiar to all who have an interest in symphonic music.

Superb Performances

Charles Munch was the conductor and provided two superb performances, those of the Piston's sixth symphony and the "Don Juan" of Richard Strauss.

The Piston opus was written for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Of the works commissioned for this event, Mr. Piston's symphony is far superior to any of those we have heard. It is the work of an expert craftsman. Its melodic content is compelling and there is throughout the work a sensitivity and awareness of beautiful sound that is rare in the music of many of our contemporary composers. Mr. Munch provided an equally sensitive interpretation, one in which contrasts were emphasized and the musical line allowed to flow without break. The work will be played many times during the European tour of the orchestra.

Strangely enough "Don Juan" has not been played at the Berkshire Music Festival before. Mr. Munch has a particular fancy for it. The performance was one of dazzling virtuosity; the interpretation was strong and affirmative and there was a fine sensitivity in those reflective passages which are melodically so beautiful.

The program opened with the "Symphony in B-Flat Major, No. 102," by Hayden. This is one of Haydn's rarest gems. It was given a rewarding performance, one which was both vital and tender, ethereal and earthy. The program concluded with a scherzo from "L'Apprenti Sorcier" by Dukas.

Tomorrow night Pierre Monteux will make his second appearance of the season in the following program: "Festival Overture" by Irving Freed; "Symphony No. 3 in F Major" by Brahms; "Suit for Orchestra" be Enesco, and the suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" by Richard Strauss.

Tanglewood on Parade Sets All-Time Record for Gross Gate Receipts at Benefit

Mahan

BRAZILIAN CONDUCTOR Eleazar deCarvalho, who headed the Music Center's student orchestra department this year, acknowledges the ovation accorded him and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed, after he directed the first part of last night's program. At the extreme left is Alfred Krips, who was concertmaster for the BSO last night in the absence of Richard Burgin, the associate conductor, who was excused for the evening.

Mahan

WINNING TEAM of pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma and conductor Arthur Fiedler takes a bow, acknowledging applause after Shed performance of George Gershwin's "Concerto in F." Mr. Fiedler led the Boston Pops Orchestra in second half of the gala program which wound up last night's benefit show.

Mahan

CHAMBER MUSIC composed by the young composers at Tanglewood attracted an overflow crowd to the Chamber Music Hall during the department demonstrations by the Berkshire Music Center. The department is headed by Aaron Copland and Goffredo Petrassi.

9,787 Pay $24,266 To Aid Music Center

By ALEXANDER D. HORNE

"Tanglewood on Parade" set two records last night, and very nearly smashed a third. The gross gate receipts of $24,266.50 was an all-time high, and the attendance figure of 9,787 was exceeded only by the 10,050 attendance of 1954.

44 Buses Counted

No one counted all the cars, thermos jugs, ice buckets, folding chairs and blankets brought, but the Tanglewood press office announced today that the total of 44 buses parked outside the gates during the program was five more than the previous record.

The gross from the tickets all will go to Tanglewood's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, along with proceeds from a refreshment stand next to the Tanglewood Music Store.

Previous High $24,066

Last night's was the 11th annual affair since "Tanglewood on Parade" evolved in 1946 from the earlier benefit programs for British and Russian war relief. Except for the 1954 program, which grossed the previous record high of $24,066, the gate figures last night were well above those of all other years.

Last year rain and the threat of Hurricane Connie held attendance to 6,637 and the gross to $15,952.

Last night the early-afternoon clouds parted to produce perfect weather for the seven-hour-long program.

It was the summer's most widely attended social event, the most elaborate mass picnic held here in years and a half-day excursion for hundreds of children from neighboring camps. It left the lawns of the former Tappan estate littered with debris of all kinds.

Works by 50 Composers

It was also a series of eight concerts in which the work of more than 50 composers was heard with one ear by the holiday-minded crowd. It began at 4 with a program of opera scenes in the formal gardens by Boris Goldovsky's Department IV students and a simultaneous program in the Barn by Inglof Dahl's Tanglewood Study Group. It ended at 11 with "The Stars and Stripes Forever," last of four enthusiastically received encores by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra.

At 5:45, a fanfare by Karl Kohn was sounded outside the Shed by a student group of seven brass players and a percussionist, with BSO trumpeter Roger Voisin conducting. Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Center, then welcomed the visitors, noting that the day's program showed the wide range of music presented each summer at Tanglewood.

Programs by the Music Center's orchestra, opera and composition departments were given simultaneously between 6 and 7, with the largest part of the listening audience seated in the Shed to hear the student orchestra with four conductors and two soloists. The largest part of the total attendance, of course, was out on the lawns eating, drinking and occasionally sampling the music.

Blanket-Hoppers Busy

At 7, Hugh Ross and the Tanglewood Choir began their program from the porch of the Main House while conductor Kenneth Schermerhorn and Prokofieff's "Classical Symphony" were winding up the student orchestra's Shed concert. By this time the goodies were disappearing rapidly into the mouths of the persons, and those who had brought none or too little were starting their blanket-hopping rounds.

Most of the box lunches brought by patrons of near-by hotels were consumed, and the more elaborate family spreads returned to the picnic baskets by 8:15, when the move into the Shed seats was complete.

The Boston Symphony and the Festival Chorus joined under conductor Eleazar de Carvalho for the first half of the gala concert. The Boston Pops, with conductor Fiedler and pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma, performed the second half.

'A Great Musical Feast'

In between, William Cox, president of the Music Center's Friends organization, spoke briefly before conducting the drawing of door prizes. Mr. Cox termed the evening's proceedings "virtually a great musical feast" and announced the preliminary figures of 10,000 attendance and a $24,181 gross.

Ushers then poured tickets from six boxes into a large basket on stage. Tickets for the 11 prizes were drawn from the basket by Miss Natasha de Leuchtenberg, a niece of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky of Lenox, who was chairman of the community committee for the program.

County Winners

The first four prizes drawn, including a bonus prize not previously announced, were won by Berkshire residents. Robert E. Coakley, 33 Draper Ave., won an RCA Victor "Mark VI" high-fidelity phonograph after the holder of the first ticket drawn failed to identify himself. The next prize, a pink General Electric refrigerator, was won by Miss Beth Bauer of Stockbridge, daughter of Red Lion Inn proprietor Byrne Bauer and Mrs. Bauer.

Marion Clark of Monterey won the extra prize, a magnum of champagne donated by Mrs. Koussevitzky in honor of the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary.

A pair of season tickets for the 1957 Festival concerts was won by Baroness Humbert de Viry of Shipton Court, Lenox.

Three "Evening in the Berkshires" prizes, comprising dinner for two in an area restaurant, theater or dance tickets, clothing, photographs and copies of the history of the Festival, John G. W. Mahanna's "Music Under the Moon," were won by a Stockbridge resident and two persons from New York State. They were Mrs. Sidney R. Smith of Larrywaug, Charles Platt of Brooklyn and Mrs. N.H. Badaines of Syracuse.

Gives Sterner Etching

A drypoint etching by Albert Sterner, donated by the Richmond artist's widow, was won by Rosemary McMahon of Agawam. Mrs. M. Polayes of New York won an anonymously donated children's wading pool, and Mrs. Robert B. Morris of Kenton, Ohio, a member of the Friends office staff at Tanglewood, won a selection of seven recordings by the Boston musicians.

The final prize, a basket of Berkshire food products, went to Jane Kennedy of the Cranwell School, Lenox.

The 105-man Boston Pops, which includes many of the BSO musicians, played four encores after the rousing finish of Maurice Ravel's "Bolero." Many of the lawn listeners came to the rear of the Shed to hear the encores, which were made inaudible further back by the organizational activities of camp counselors. Whistles were blowing and names being called all over the lawn as soon as the "Bolero" ended and the crowd began streaming toward the exits.

Two familiar faces were missing from the stage during the Shed concert. Joseph de Pasquale, first violist, had been attending his father's funeral in Philadelphia. Jean Cauhape played in his place.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor, who has been teaching extra classes in Mr. de Pasquale's absence, also was excused from playing. Alfred Krips, regularly concertmaster for the Boston Pops, led the strings in the BSO program as well.

Mahan

TOP WINNERS of the 11 door prizes awarded during intermission exchange congratulations, Robert E. Coakley, 33 Draper Ave., Pittsfield, who won the RCA Victor high fidelity phonograph, "The Mark IV," and Miss Beth Bauer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Byrn Bauer of Stockbridge, who won the General Electric pink 12 cubic foot refrigerator.

Music

Pops Goes The Audience

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

TANGLEWOOD went berserk yesterday as it plans to do once each year when it puts on the annual three-ring exhibition of all its activities. "Tanglewood on Parade" was a tremendously bustling bazaar from 4 in the afternoon until nearly 11 at night when the huge crowd finally headed for the parking lots.

Climax of the evening, the truly grand finale, was the gala concert given in the Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Eleazar de Carvalho was the conductor for the first half of the program and he played two works calculated to please an audience more or less full of picnic fare: Rimsky-Korsakoff's overture "The Russian Easter" and the "Choros No. 10" (Rasta o coracao) of his fellow-countryman, Heitor Villa-Lobos. This latter work enlists a chorus, supplied last night by the Berkshire Festival chorus, and trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Center. Carvalho magnanimously insisted that Ross share with him the many recalls the audience accorded the performance.

* * *

CARVALHO conducted this piece on his last appearance at Tanglewood, in 1951, and aroused the same excitement then as he achieved last night. The chorus has a short, incisive chant which it repeats many times, much in the manner of college football cheering sections, and our ignorance of Portuguese prompts the impression, indeed not disrespectfully, that they were singing "Coca-Cola, Ginger Ale."

But the climax of the evening came after intermission when the orchestra, discreetly pruned for heavy weather, welcomed Arthur Fiedler to the podium and thus became the "Boston Pops Orchestra."

* * *

ONLY the unfortunate blasé did not have the time of their lives. Fiedler read "La Boutique Fantasque" of Rossini-Respighi, then the Gershwin piano concerto in F, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist, to end the printed list with Ravel's "Bolero."

The "Boutique" was amusing and cute but too polite and was still not quite what the impatient audience expected of this part of the evening. The Gershwin and the Ravel were their meat, as were the added short pieces which are all but a part of the contract the audience understands when it buys a "Parade" ticket. Fiedler came through, and in grand style, ending, inevitably, with the "Stars and Stripes Forever" in which the entire brass section stands and points their bells, by some miracle, at every individual in the vast throng. But the wild frenzy in the auditorium out-noises the blare of the trumpets and trombones and the evening ends in some kind of an uproarious pandemonium from which all retire happy victors.

* * *

THE REAPPEARANCE at Tanglewood after many year's absence of Sanroma was a high point of the gala evening. He played with an easy confidence and a nonchalant bravado that exactly fits the piece and he made its spirit gay and infectious. His abandoned attack of the keyboard was the proper manner to express best the Gershwin idiom and he shared an ovation with Fiedler who had given him excellent collaboration.

Throughout the program there were opportunities for various soloists from within the orchestra. Acting concertmaster Alfred Krips acquitted himself most effectively in the violin solos which occur in the "Russian Easter" and, after intermission, Fiedler called upon flutist James Pappoutsakis, and trumpeter Armando Ghitalla, for deserved special distinction.

Festival Enters Final Weekend Tonight

TANGLEWOOD—The final weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this summer's Berkshire Festival will begin tonight at 8:30 when Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas in the great Music Shed.

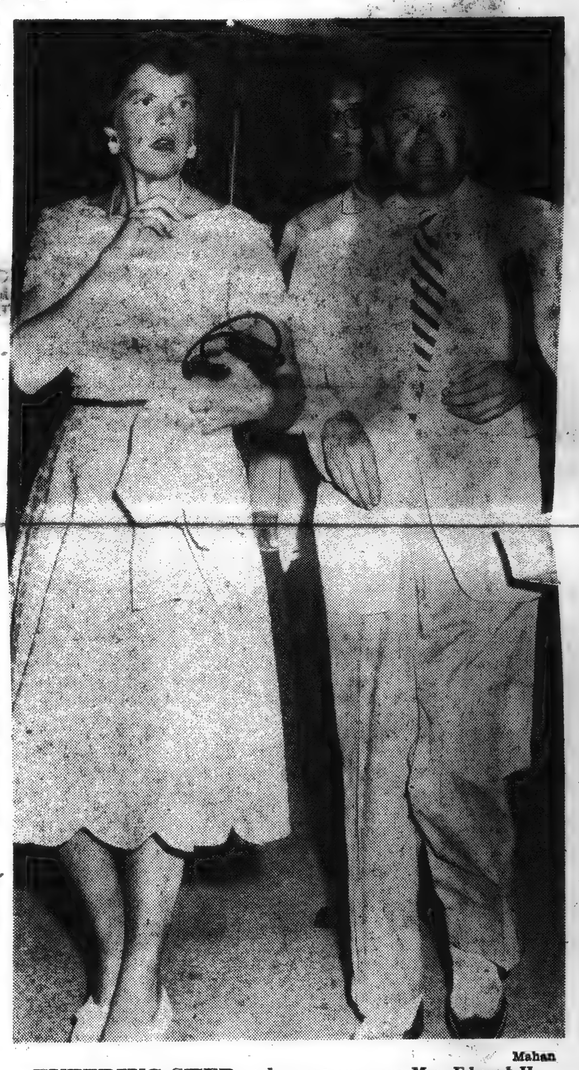
Another Premiere

The program consists of Haydn's Symphony No. 102 in B-Flat; Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in its Tanglewood premiere; Richard Strauss' Symphonic Poem "Don Juan"; and the orchestral scherzo "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" by Paul Dukas. The Piston Symphony was given its premiere last November in Boston by Dr. Munch and the orchestra, who then performed it in New York and elsewhere on tour. It will be performed extensively on the orchestra's European tour, which commences at the conclusion of the Berkshire Festival.

'Die Meistersinger' Sunday

In the remaining concerts tomorrow night at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Pierre Monteux and Charles Munch, respectively, will conduct. Mr. Monteux' Saturday evening program will include music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss; and on Sunday the 1956 Berkshire Festival will come to a close with performances of Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the opening and final scenes from Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by James Aliferis of the chorus faculty, and with vocal soloists, including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther and Marguerite Willauer as Eva; also, Rosalind Hupp as Magdelene, Robert Nagy as David, and John McCurdy as Pogner.

Remaining tickets for these three concerts, as well as the open rehearsal tomorrow morning at 10, which Pierre Monteux will conduct and for which a norminal admission charge of $1 is made for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office. Telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawns will be on sale the day of each concert.



Mahan

ENTERING SHED at box entrance are Mrs. Edward H. Cumpston Jr., Mr. Cumpston, at rear, and Simon England before the Tanglewood on Parade concert last night. The program was for the benefit of the Music Center.

Mahan

ALL DRESSED UP for the occasion, Noel Ferrand of Provincetown and Bronxville strolls under the canopy of the box section on his way to the blue section for the evening performance. A former student at the Music Center, Mr. Ferrand has been spending the week here witnessing the demonstrations of the students.

Mahan

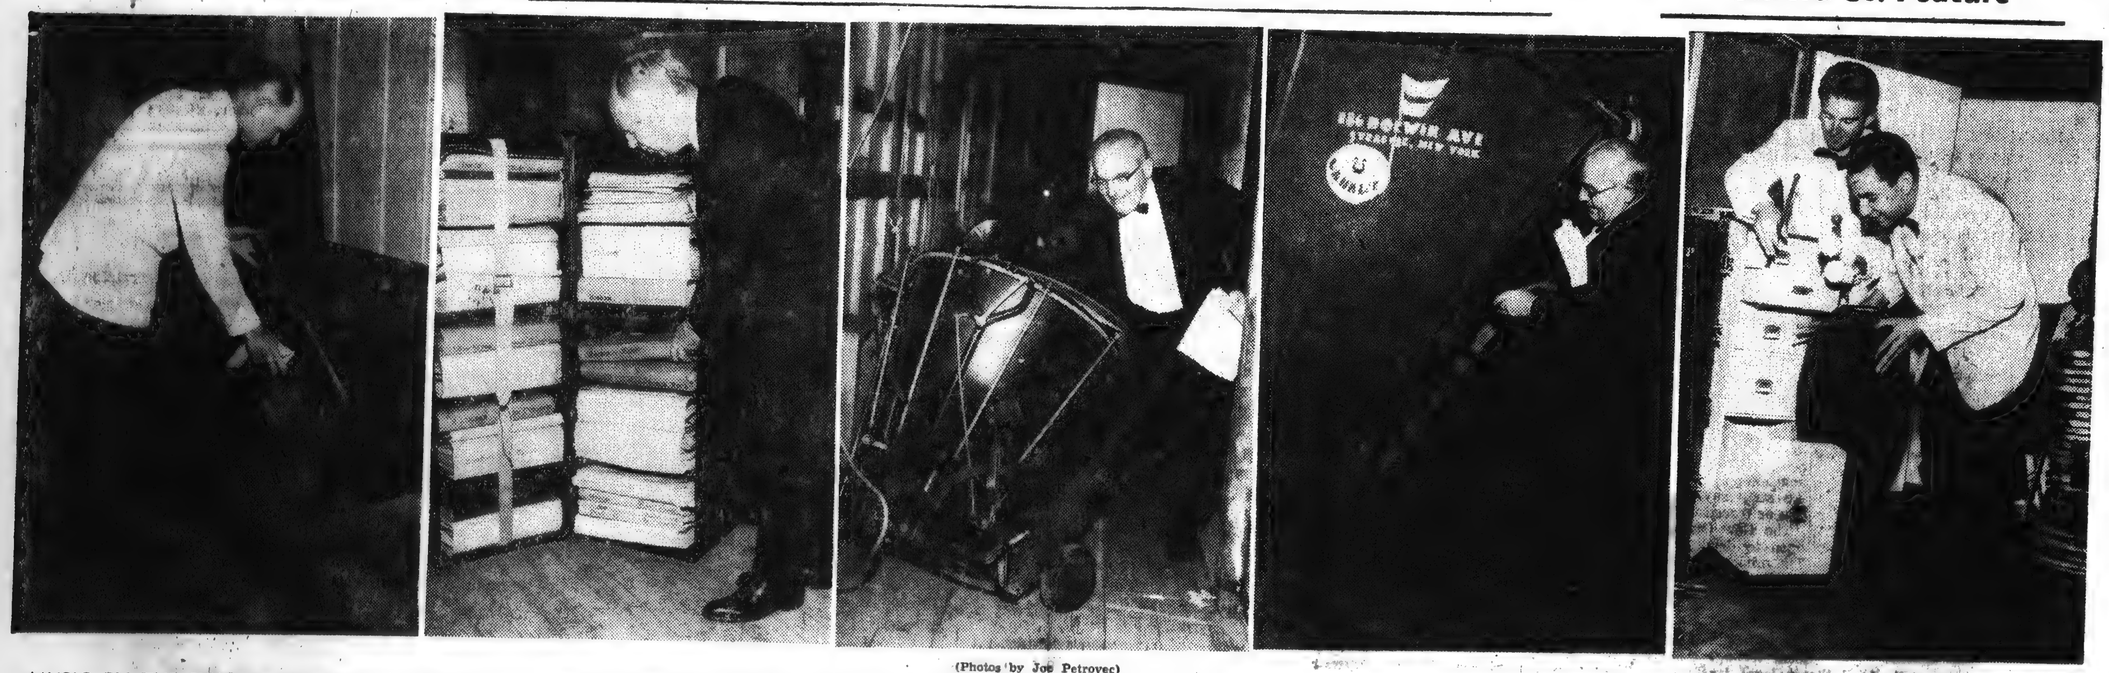
THE TANGLEWOOD CHOIR entertained during the picnic hour with a concert given on the main house porch. Among the student conductors was Barbara Utt of Warrensburg, Mo., who is leading the group here in Consilium's "Si de nouveau." Hugh Ross heads the department, assisted by James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke De Varon.

Today's Chuckle

Customer: "Have you anything for gray hair?"

Druggist: "Nothing but the greatest respect."

On This Page Tomorrow
Chinese Print Shop
Oxford St. Feature



(Photos by Joe Petrovec)

MUSIC BY THE TON — The Boston Symphony's forthcoming concert tour behind the Iron Curtain involves transporting of eight tons of musical instruments, music, clothing and personal effects. New, specially designed luggage simplifies the big moving job. Left to right are scenes as the Symphony prepares for travel: Cellist Karl Zeise gingerly places his intrument in its traveling case; Leslie Rogers, Symphony librarian since 1912, checks his music trunk; Harvey Genereux wrestles with one of the big tympani and then tackles the huge case containing a harp, and finally, Arthur Charles Press and Harold Farberman load their instruments into the specially-designed trunk for percussion instruments. Twenty-five special wardrobe trunks for musicians clothes replace the 100 formerly used.

Hub Symphony Never Lost A Chord

By PAUL GANLEY

Some 100 dignified men once hastily changed clothes in broad daylight while grinning policemen shooed spectators away.

It was an unscheduled performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Dressing room space was limited at the theater, so the musicians had to don their evening clothes on the very public back lawn.

The orchestra's heavy luggage served as makeshift dressing room walls.

It wasn't the first time the orchestra's tons of luggage figured in unprogrammed adventures. And it will happen again.

When the orchestra leaves on its European tour this summer the luggage goes along.

Everything from toothbrushes to tubas are loaded in some 80 containers.

The fun begins in Europe.

The eight tons of equipment must be unpacked for every performance. A few hours later it must be repacked and bundled off for shipment for another concert in another city or nation.

The packing and unpacking is relatively easy, according to Stage Manager Harvey Genereux.

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood closes Aug. 12. The luggage will be loaded on the Nieuw Amsterdam here Aug. 14.

"Plenty of time," Genereux says.

It takes only one hour to pack. That includes all the instruments, sheets of music and a few odds and ends.

The odds and ends include two church bells weighing 250 and 150 pounds.

No instrument has ever been lost—permanently—during all the packing and repacking.

Chances are more in favor of the orchestra gaining a few instruments as it voyages across Europe and plays in tional travel, the orchestra recently learned it will have to move by train in Russia on this tour.

They had originally hoped to fly to Leningrad and Moscow. Plans were changed when it developed baggage equipment at Red airports would have difficulty handling the heavy luggage.

The large amount of luggage has always posed a problem for the orchestra.

In trips to nearby New York a few years ago the orchestra had to lug some 100 personal trunks and many other pieces of baggage.

Now, for the European jaunt, the pieces of orchestral luggage total about 80, not counting some personal bags.

This saves money. Truckers charge by the number of pieces carried rather than by weight.

Maintenance Supt. Edward E. Charron at Symphony Hall is the man credited with the improvement.

He designed a new wardrobe trunk capable of holding the clothes of four musicians. There are 25 of these trunks, which take the place of the 100 individual trunks formerly used by musicians.

These trunks proved their

Thus, violins and violas are mixed together in each of the three string trunks.

The brass wardrobe trunks each carry two French horns, two trombones, a tuba and a number of trumpets.

Some of the trunks and instrument cases also hold clothing.

The cello cases are especially handy. The cello goes in one side while the other side is a complete wardrobe trunk. It can hold four suits, plenty of shirts and other clothing. It even has compartments at the bottom.

Clothes also can be hung in the harp case.

The giant bass case is large enough for a man to hide in.

Orchestra men won't have to worry about one of their biggest traveling problems on this tour. The 75 music stands, weighting 1,000 pounds, can be left in Boston.

European agents have assured the orchestra that sufficient music stands will be available at all halls on this trip.

However, the conductor's stand will definitely be taken on the tour.

It's vital because conductors become used to a stand of a certain height, width and size.

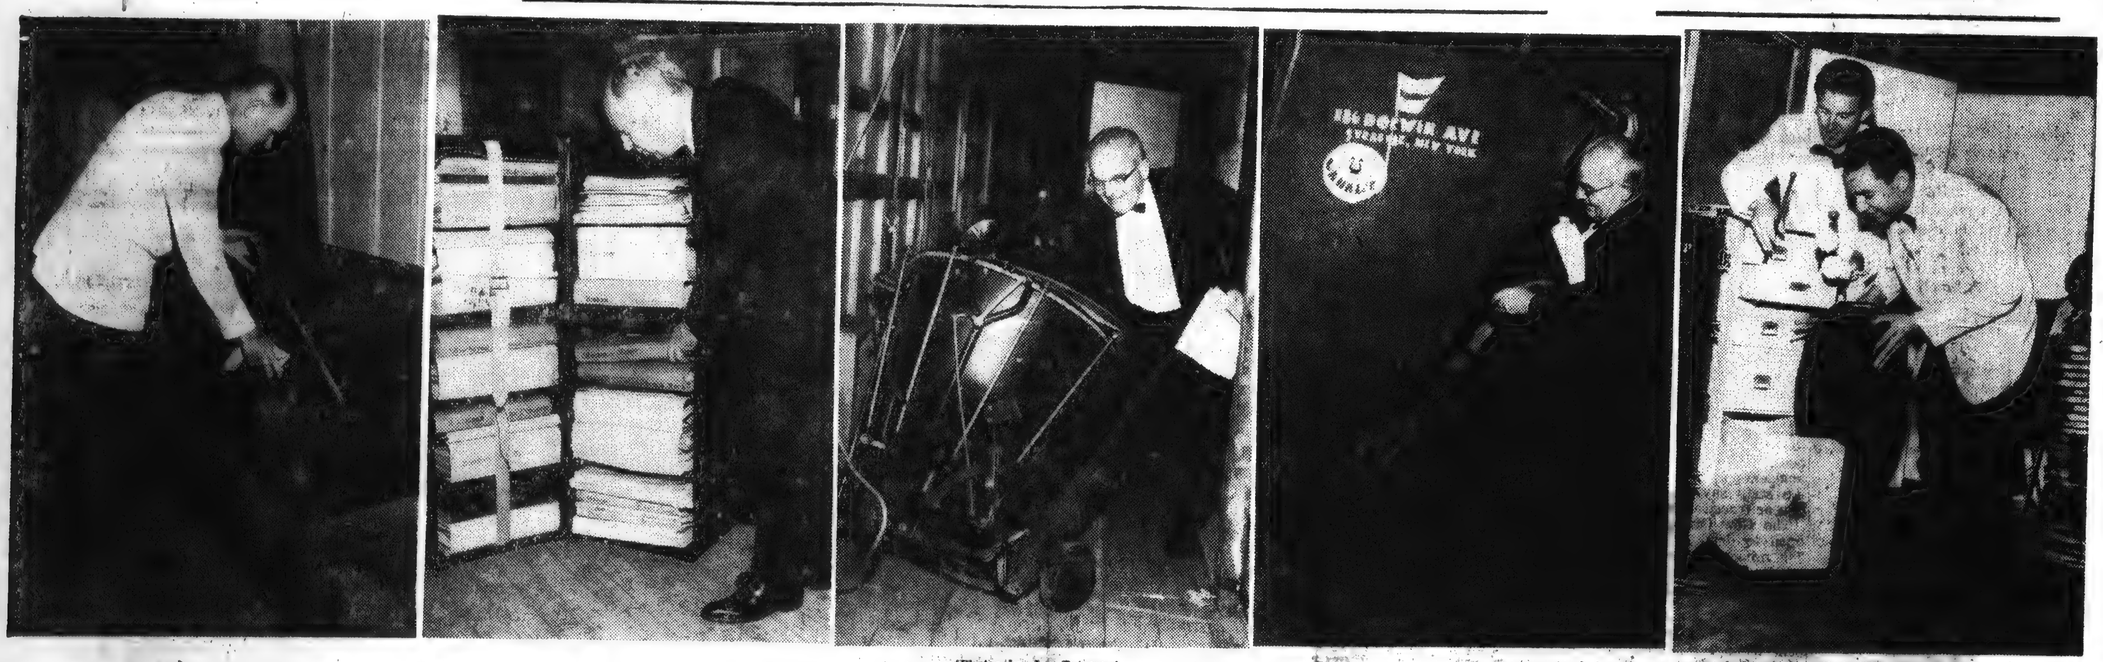
An energetic conductor, his

Today's Chuckle

Customer: "Have you anything for gray hair?"

Druggist: "Nothing but the greatest respect."

On This Page Tomorrow
Chinese Print Shop
Oxford St. Feature



(Photos by Joe Petrovec)

MUSIC BY THE TON — The Boston Symphony's forthcoming concert tour behind the Iron Curtain involves transporting of eight tons of musical instruments, music, clothing and personal effects. New, specially designed luggage simplifies the big moving job. Left to right are scenes as the Symphony prepares for travel: Cellist Karl Zeise gingerly places his intrument in its traveling case; Leslie Rogers, Symphony librarian since 1912, checks his music trunk; Harvey Genereux wrestles with one of the big tympani and then tackles the huge case containing a harp, and finally, Arthur Charles Press and Harold Farberman load their instruments into the specially-designed trunk for percussion instruments. Twenty-five special wardrobe trunks for musicians clothes replace the 100 formerly used.

Hub Symphony Never Lost A Chord

By PAUL GANLEY

Some 100 dignified men once hastily changed clothes in broad daylight while grinning policemen shooed spectators away.

It was an unscheduled performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Dressing room space was limited at the theater, so the musicians had to don their evening clothes on the very public back lawn.

The orchestra's heavy luggage served as makeshift dressing room walls.

It wasn't the first time the orchestra's tons of luggage figured in unprogrammed advehtures. And it will happen again.

When the orchestra leaves on its European tour this summer the luggage goes along.

Everything from tooth-brushes to tubas are loaded in some 80 containers.

The fun begins in Europe.

The eight tons of equipment must be unpacked for every performance. A few hours later it must be repacked and bundled off for shipment for another concert in another city or nation.

The packing and unpacking is relatively easy, according to Stage Manager Harvey Genereux.

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood closes Aug. 12. The luggage will be loaded on the Nieuw Amsterdam here Aug. 14.

"Plenty of time," Genereux says.

It takes only one hour to pack. That includes all the instruments, sheets of music and a few odds and ends.

The odds and ends include two church bells weighing 250 and 150 pounds.

No instrument has ever been lost—permanently—during all the packing and repacking.

Chances are more in favor of the orchestra gaining a few instruments as it voyages across Europe and plays in other orchestra's home halls.

It happened once when a "forgotten" violin was picked up after a concert in Washington.

A frantic exchange of letters followed and the red-faced Boston Symphony shipped it back to Washington and its owner in a hurry.

The biggest danger is that of the more than $200,000 worth of luggage getting separated from the orchestra in transit.

On the orchestra's first European tour in 1952, a baggage truck became snarled in a bicycle race.

The truck ran a rather poor race and a London concert was delayed two hours.

The equipment might be late, but it arrives in good condition.

The baggage is sturdy and well-padded inside to prevent damage to instruments. It is suitable for either air or train travel.

It has to be rugged to stand the rigors of European tour. The old-fashioned construction of some of the concert halls on the continent leads to problems.

Stairs are frequently narrow and winding.

Once in Metz all the trunks had to be carried up two flights of steep stairs—a rough job.

Orchestra men made the job easier when it was time to leave the hall. They merrily slid the trunks down the two flights of stairs in toboggan style.

As a sidelight on international travel, the orchestra recently learned it will have to move by train in Russia on this tour.

They had originally hoped to fly to Leningrad and Moscow. Plans were changed when it developed baggage equipment at Red airports would have difficulty handling the heavy luggage.

The large amount of luggage has always posed a problem for the orchestra.

In trips to nearby New York a few years ago the orchestra had to lug some 100 personal trunks and many other pieces of baggage.

Now, for the European jaunt, the pieces of orchestral luggage total about 80, not counting some personal bags.

This saves money. Truckers charge by the number of pieces carried rather than by weight.

Maintenance Supt. Edward E. Charron at Symphony Hall is the man credited with the improvement.

He designed a new wardrobe trunk capable of holding the clothes of four musicians. There are 25 of these trunks, which take the place of the 100 individual trunks formerly used by musicians.

These trunks proved their value on the orchestra's first European tour and since have been copied by the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra.

The instruments also are packed in trunks. If a trunk gets lost the orchestra still will be able to play.

Each trunk carries an assortment of instruments — enough to preserve the balance of the orchestra.

Thus, violins and violas are mixed together in each of the three string trunks.

The brass wardrobe trunks each carry two French horns, two trombones, a tuba and a number of trumpets.

Some of the trunks and instrument cases also hold clothing.

The cello cases are especially handy. The cello goes in one side while the other side is a complete wardrobe trunk. It can hold four suits, plenty of shirts and other clothing. It even has compartments at the bottom.

Clothes also can be hung in the harp case.

The giant bass case is large enough for a man to hide in.

Orchestra men won't have to worry about one of their biggest traveling problems on this tour. The 75 music stands, weighting 1,000 pounds, can be left in Boston.

European agents have assured the orchestra that sufficient music stands will be available at all halls on this trip.

However, the conductor's stand will definitely be taken on the tour.

It's vital because conductors become used to a stand of a certain height, width and size.

An energetic conductor, his mind concentrated on the music, could be thrown off pace by having to balance on a strange stand.

The orchestra on this trip will be the first in the world to crack the Iron Curtain and play inside Russia.

They're hoping no disillusioned Muscovite tries to stow away in that man-sized bass case. It could happen!

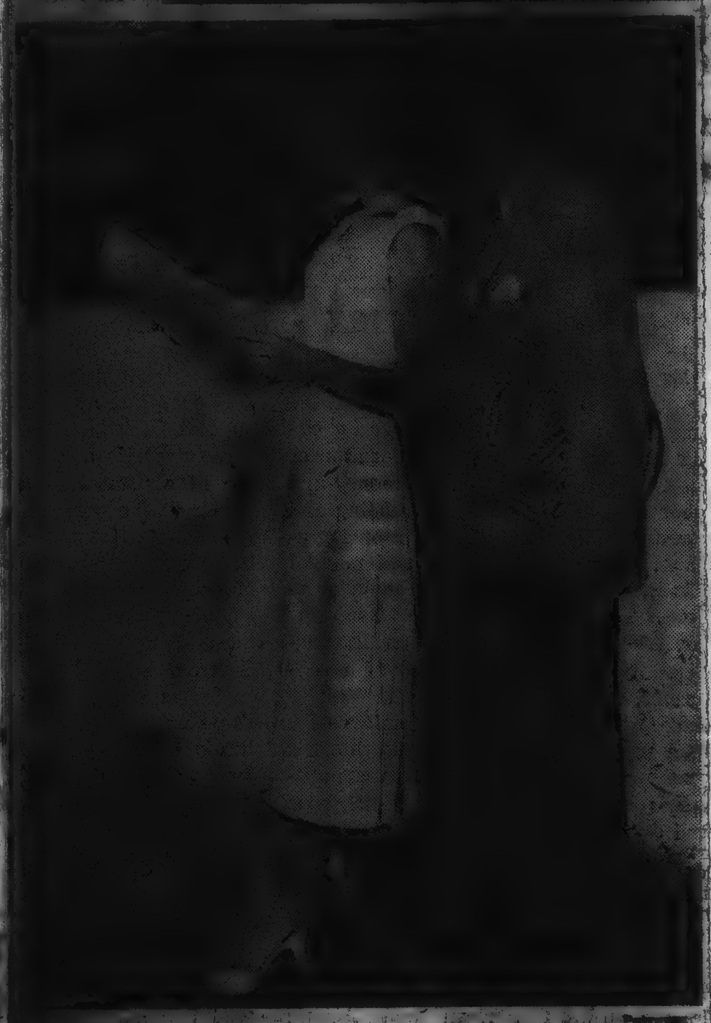
172 West Street—Dial 7396

The

Cave at West Stockbridge last weekend. The South Lee troop of eight members led by Scoutmaster Peter Gajewski spent two hours in the marble tunnel on Tom Ball Mountain and on Saturday an Explorer Troop of six of Lynnbrook, L.I., visited it neither knowing the other was there.

News of the visit of the Long Island Scouts was received Wednes-

$45 Suits
$50 Su
$65



Petrowec

HUSBAND AND WIFE, who will appear on tonight's program in concert version of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" at the Music Shed, Marguerite Willauer, who sings the role of Eva, and the Boston Symphony's first horn player, James Stagliano, look over the score of the work to be played by the BSO with Charles Munch conducting.

Curtain To Fall Tomorrow On 1956 Berkshire Festival

TANGLEWOOD—The 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will conclude with concerts tonight at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 with Pierre Monteux and Dr. Charles Munch conducting.

Despite last night's smallest crowd of the shed season, when only 4,295 persons were in the audience, the attendance tonight and tomorrow afternoon may inch toward 10,000 for a single concert, but the overall attendance last season of 136,600 will not be matched this season.

Monteux's Program

Mr. Monteux's program will be the "Festival Overture," by Isadore Freed; Brahms' Third Symphony in F major; the Suite for Orchestra, Opus 9, by the late Georges Enesco; and a Suite from the opera "Der Rosenkavalier" by Richard Strauss. The Freed and Enesco works will receive their first Tanglewood performances.

Tommorow afternoon Dr. Munch will conclude this summer's Festival conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, and the opening and final scenes from Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by James Aliferis of the chorus faculty, and with vocal soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Wather, Marguerite Willaier as Eva, Roslinda Hupp as Magdalene, Robert Nagy as David, and John McCurdy as Pogner.

Both Mr. Pease and Mr. Da Costa sang earlier this season in the concert presentation of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure" which Dr. Munch conducted in July. Miss Willauer is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston and was a student in the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center in 1950, 1951 and 1953. She has sung with the New England Opera Theater in Boston and appeared with Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston on several occasions. During this summer she has been singing leading soprano roles with the Pittsburgh Opera Company. In private life she is the wife of James Stagliano, the Boston Symphony's first horn player.

Grenadiers Perform Tonight In Menands, N.Y.

Mayor Harvey E. Lake will be guest of honor tonight in Menands, N.Y. at the fifth annual drum corps competition sponsored by the Empire State Grenadiers, with drum and bugle corps of the Rensselaer County American Legion.

The competition will start at 8 at Hawkins Stadium. Drum corps from four states and Canada will take part. The host corps will stage an exhibition. A crowd of 7,000 is expected, according to Anthony Cubello, general chairman.

The Empire State Grenadiers have won the drum corps competition at the Pittsfield Firemen's Muster here for the past six years.

Scholarship Awards Presented To Tanglewood Music Students

TANGLEWOOD—Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, today presented scholarship awards and cash prizes to outstanding students who attended the 1956 session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony. The presentation took place during the intermission of the final concert presented by the student symphony this season. The winners of the awards were chosen from the 350 students enrolled this year from 30 states and 18 foreign countries. An audience of more than 2,000 people attended the concert.

Piatigorsky Prize

On the basis of conspicuous talent, general cooperation and the promise of outstanding careers, the Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, valued at $300, was divided between two student cellists: David Spinks of Albany, N.Y., and Janet McCarron of Haverford, Pa. Mr. Spinks, 21, is a graduate of the University of Miami and has attended the New England Conservatory in Boston. Miss McCarron, 19, is a graduate of Haverford High School; she attended the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music from 1953-1956.

The High Fidelity magazine scholarship, awarded for the first time in 1955, goes this year to Nancy Cirillo, 20, of Brooklyn, N.Y. This award, $300 in value, is given to an outstanding student at the Berkshire Music Center. Miss Cirillo, who has been active in chamber music ensembles at Tanglewood, is attending the Mannes College of Music in New York City. She has served as concertmaster at three of the six concerts presented by the student orchestra during the summer, and she was soloist with the orchestra in a performance of Lalo's Symphonie Espagnole on July 12.

Koussevitsky Award

The Serge Koussevitzky Composition prize, value $250, given by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in honor of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for a work composed at Tanglewood this season, goes to two outstanding students of composition, Robert Lombardo of Hartford, Conn., and Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo, Japan. To win the prize, both students composed pieces for two flutes and piano. Mr. Lombardo, 24, is a graduate of the Weaver School in Hartford, and he received his B.M. and M.M. from the Hartt College of Music in Hartford. Mr. Ichiyanagi, who has spent four consecutive summers at the Berkshire Music Center, attended Aoyama Gakuin School in Tokyo and the University of Minnesota. He is presently studying at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, value $300, awarded by a former Tanglewood student to "a student, present or past, chosen from the composition department, for a work to be specified by the faculty," goes to former student Mark Bucci of New York City. Mr. Bucci is commissioned to write a 20-minute opera which will be presented by the associate division of the opera department at Tanglewood in the summer of 1957. Mr. Bucci is the composer of a number of operas, including "The Moor," "Midas" and "The [illegible]" which was produced recently on television. He studied at the Berkshire Music Center in 1949 with Aaron Copland.

Graduate Indebtedness

Regina Sarfaty, 21, of New York City is this year's winner of the Florence Easton Scholarship, a gift of Margaret Lee Crofts. This award, value $250, which cancels a student's indebtedness to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, goes to a young soprano who has studied at the Berkshire Music Center for the past three summers. Miss Sarfaty received a B.S. degree from the Juilliard School of Music in New York in 1956. This summer at the Music Center she sang one of the leading roles in the stage premiere of Lukas Foss' opera, "Griffelkin."

Two other scholarships which cancel their winners' indebtedness to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund for tuition advanced by this fund are awarded to students Jules Hirsh of Brooklyn, N.Y., and to Virginia Babikian of Everett. To Mr. Hirsh, who has been a student at the Music Center for the past seven summers (1950-1956), goes the Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, value $150. Mr. Hirsh is personnel manager of the student symphony and plays string bass in the orchestra. Miss Babikian, a graduate of Westminster Choir College, wins the Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, value $150. She attended the New School of Music in Philadelphia and is now a Minister of Music at River Oaks Baptist Church in Houston, Texas.

County Memorial

The Koussevitsky Memorial Scholarship is being awarded to the same student conductor who won it last year. This award, value $500, given by residents of Berkshire County in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, goes to Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, 26, of Schenectady, N.Y. Mr. Schermerhorn, who first came to the Music Center as a trumpet player in 1950, was a conducting student of Leonard Bernstein at Tanglewood last year. This summer he has studied as an orchestral conductor under Eleazar de Carvalho, the Brazilian conductor. During both seasons Mr. Schermerhorn led the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center in weekly concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. At today's concert he led the symphony in Debussy's Nocturnes I and II.

A prize of $75 donated by the Koussevitsky Music Foundation goes to Brazilian violinist Ayrton Pinto, 22. Mr. Pinto received his B.A. degree from the Brazilian Conservatory in 1952 and his M.A. from the New England Conservatory in 1955. On July 26, Mr. Pinto appeared as violin soloist in a performance of Wieniawski's Violin Concerto in D major with the student orchestra. He has shared the duties of concertmaser with Nancy Cirillo.

Two singers in the choral department of the Music Center share the Jennie Fela Memorial Scholarship, value $150, which cancels a student's indebtedness to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Barbara Utt, 23, of Warrensburg, Mo., and Richard Donohue of Middletown, Conn., divide this award.

Two awards of $200 value each comprise the Ann M. Gannett Scholarships, intended for living expenses for two former GIs. The winners this year are Norman Schmidt, 27, of Dayton, Ohio, and André Come, 21, of Newton.

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux. Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox.

8:40—"Point of No Return." Williamstown Summer Theater.

8:45—"The Good Fairy." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Seven Year Itch." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival Becket.

Tomorrow

2:30 p.m.—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed, Tanglewood.

3:30 p.m.—Tudor and Elizabethan music. South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music.

7:00 p.m.—"The Seven Year Itch." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

8:30 p.m.—Steffen Zacharias' Theater Club. "A Phoenix Too Frequent." Avaloch, Lenox.

8:40 p.m.—Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

Malcolm Bernstein To Sing Bach Aria At Local Church

GREAT BARRINGTON — Bass-baritone Malcolm Bernstein of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, has chosen an aria from Bach's "St. John Passion" for his solo at the 10 o'clock service at the First Congregational Church tomorrow.

Mr. Bernstein, a resident of Baltimore, is a third-year student of opera dramatics. He has sung both with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and in many of the productions of the Music Center's opera department.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

AUG 7 1956

Weather is surely a witch—At Tanglewood this season there has been a falling off of attendance for the heavily programmed weekends. Some blamed the programs. Some blamed too much Boston Symphony. Came the last weekend with enchanting weather when people didn't have to wear their minks inside and wrap blankets around them outside and they had their old time pressure size audience. Who wants to sit in chill and torment to hear even the greatest of music beautifully played?

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 11 1956

OPERA

AMATO OPERA THEATRE—159 Bleecker St. GR 7-2844. Adm. free. Reservations must be made in advance at theatre or by mail (enclose stamped self-addressed envelope). Fri.-Sun. Aug. 10-12 & 17-19 & Tues. Aug. 14—"Rigoletto."

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Thru Aug. 12 — Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel. 600. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Music Shed. Fri. Sat. 8:30, Sun. 2:30, $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm. to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. Info. on accommodations from Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass. . . . Thurs. Aug. 9—Tanglewood on Parade. Festivities begin 6 p.m. Concert 8:15 p.m. Eleazar de Carvalho conducts first half of program. Rimsky-Korsakoff's, "Russian Easter Overture"; Villa-Lobos, Chorus No. 10; 2nd half of program Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianist. Gershwin, Piano Concerto in F; Rossini, "La Boutique Fantasque," Ravel, "Bolero." (Tickets $2.50-$5). . . . Fri. Aug. 10—Charles Munch cond. Haydn, Symphony No. 102 in B-flat; Piston, Symphony No. 6; Strauss, Don Juan; Dukas, L'Apprenti Sorcier. . . . Sat. Aug. 11—Pierre Monteux cond. Freed, Festival Overture; Brahms, Symphony No. 3 in F; Enesco, Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9; Strauss, Suite from Der Rosenkavalier. . . . Sun. Aug. 12—Charles Munch cond. Soloists: James Pease, Albert Da Costa, Robert Nagy, John McCurdy. Beethoven, Symphony No. 3 in E, "Eroica;" Wagner, Opening and final scenes from Act III of "Die Meistersinger."

What's Going On?

Tonight

8:30—Tanglewood: Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting.

8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final performance, "Point of No Return."

8:40—Sharon (Conn.) Playhouse. Final performance, "The Importance of Being Earnest."

8:45—Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge. Final performance, "The Good Fairy."

8:45—Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse. "The Seven Year Itch."

9:00—Jacob's Pillow, near Lee. San Francisco Ballet.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events in Berkshire for the next five weeks, see the Berkshire Summer Calendar in the second section of today's Eagle.

Berkshire Week

[255]

Petrovec

HUSBAND AND WIFE. who will appear on tonight's program in concert version of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" at the Music Shed, Marguerite Willauer, who sings the role of Eva, and the Boston Symphony's first horn player, James Stagliano, look over the score of the work to be played by the BSO with Charles Munch conducting.

Curtain To Fall Tomorrow On 1956 Berkshire Festival

TANGLEWOOD—The 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will conclude with concerts tonight at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 with Pierre Monteux and Dr. Charles Munch conducting.

Despite last night's smallest crowd of the Shed season, when only 4,295 persons were in the audience, the attendance tonight and tomorrow afternoon may inch toward 10,000 for a single concert, but the over-all attendance last season of 136,000 will not be matched this season.

Monteux's Program

Mr. Monteux's program will be the "Festival Overture," by Isadore Freed; Brahms' Third Symphony in F major; the Suite for Orchestra, Opus 9, by the late Georges Enesco; and a Suite from the opera "Der Rosenkavalier" by Richard Strauss. The Freed and Enesco works will receive their first Tanglewood performances.

Tommorow afternoon Dr. Munch will conclude this summer's Festival conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, and the opening and final scenes from Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by James Aliferis of the chorus faculty, and with vocal soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Wather, Marguerite Willauer as Eva, Rosalinda Hupp as Magdalene, Robert Nagy as David, and John McCurdy as Pogner.

Both Mr. Pease and Mr. Da Costa sang earlier this season in the concert presentation of the first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure" which Dr. Munch conducted in July. Miss Willauer is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston and was a student in the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center in 1950, 1951 and 1953. She has sung with the New England Opera Theater in Boston and appeared with Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston on several occasions. During this summer she has been singing leading soprano roles with the Pittsburgh Opera Company. In private life, she is the wife of James Stagliano, the Boston Symphony's first horn player.

Grenadiers Perform Tonight In Menands, N.Y.

Mayor Harvey E. Lake will be a guest of honor tonight in Menands, N.Y., at the fifth annual drum corps competition sponsored by the Empire State Grenadiers, official drum and bugle corps of the Rensselaer County American Legion.

The competition will start at 8 at Hawkins Stadium. Drum corps from four states and Canada will take part. The host corps will stage an exhibition. A crowd of 7,500 is expected, according to John Guba Jr. general chairman.

The Empire State Grenadiers have won the drum corps competion at the Pittsfield Firemen's Muster here for the past six years.

Scholarship Awards Presented To Tanglewood Music Students

TANGLEWOOD—Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, today presented scholarship awards and cash prizes to outstanding students who attended the 1956 session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony. The presentation took place during the intermission of the final concert presented by the student symphony this season. The winners of the awards were chosen from the 350 students enrolled this year from 30 states and 18 foreign countries. An audience of more than 2,000 people attended the concert.

Piatigorsky Prize

On the basis of conspicuous talent, general cooperation and the promise of outstanding careers, the Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, valued at $300, was divided between two student cellists: David Spinks of Albany, N.Y., and Janet McCarron of Havertown, Pa. Mr. Spinks, 21, is a graduate of the University of Miami and has attended the New England Conservatory in Boston. Miss McCarron, 19, is a graduate of Haverford High School; she attended the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music from 1953-1956.

The High Fidelity magazine scholarship, awarded for the first time in 1955, goes this year to Nancy Cirillo, 20, of Brooklyn, N.Y. This award, $300 in value, is given to an outstanding student at the Berkshire Music Center. Miss Cirillo, who has been active in chamber music ensembles at Tanglewood, is attending the Mannes College of Music in New York City. She has served as concertmaster at three of the six concerts presented by the student orchestra during the summer, and she was soloist with the orchestra in a performance of Lalo's Symphonie Espagnole on July 12.

Koussevitzky Award

The Serge Koussevitzky Composition prize, value $250, given by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in honor of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for a work composed at Tanglewood this season, goes to two outstanding students of composition, Robert Lombardo of Hartford, Conn., and Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo, Japan. To win the prize, both students composed pieces for two flutes and piano. Mr. Lombardo, 24, is a graduate of the Weaver School in Hartford, and he received his B.M. and M.M. from the Hartt College of Music in Hartford. Mr. Ichiyanagi, who has spent four consecutive summers at the Berkshire Music Center, attended Aoyama Gakuin School in Tokyo and the University of Minnesota. He is presently studying at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, value $300, awarded by a former Tanglewood student to "a student, present or past, chosen from the composition department, for a work to be specified by the faculty," goes to former student Mark Bucci of New York City. Mr. Bucci is commissioned to write a 20-minute opera which will be presented by the associate division of the opera department at Tanglewood in the summer of 1957. Mr. Bucci is the composer of a number of operas, including "The Boor," "Midas" and "The Dress," which was produced recently on television. He studied at the Berkshire Music Center in 1949 with Aaron Copland.

Cancels Indebtedness

Regina Sarfaty, 21, of New York City is this year's winner of the Florence Easton Scholarship, a gift of Margaret Lee Crofts. This award, value $250, which cancels a student's indebtedness to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, goes to a young soprano who has studied at the Berkshire Music Center for the past three summers. Miss Sarfaty received a B.S. degree from the Juilliard School of Music in New York in 1956. This summer at the Music Center she sang one of the leading roles in the stage premiere of Lukas Foss' opera, "Griffelkin."

Two other scholarships which cancel their winners' indebtedness to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund for tuition advanced by this fund are awarded to students Jules Hirsh of Brooklyn, N.Y., and to Virginia Babikian of Everett. To Mr. Hirsh, who has been a student at the Music Center for the past seven summers (1950-1956), goes the Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, value $150. Mr. Hirsh is personnel manager of the student symphony and plays string bass in the orchestra. Miss Babikian, a graduate of Westminster Choir College, wins the Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, value $150. She attended the New School of Music in Philadelphia and is now a Minister of Music at River Oaks Baptist Church in Houston, Texas.

County Memorial

The Koussevitsky Memorial Scholarship is being awarded to the same student conductor who won it last year. This award, value $500, given by residents of Berkshire County in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, goes to Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, 26, of Schenectady, N.Y. Mr. Schermerhorn, who first came to the Music Center as a trumpet player in 1950, was a conducting student of Leonard Bernstein at Tanglewood last year. This summer he has studied as an orchestral conductor under Eleazar de Carvalho, the Brazilian conductor. During both seasons Mr. Schermerhorn led the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center in weekly concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. At today's concert he led the symphony in Debussy's Nocturnes I and H.

A prize of $75 donated by the Koussevitsky Music Foundation goes to Brazilian violinist Ayrton Pinto, 22. Mr. Pinto received his B.A. degree from the Brazilian Conservatory in 1952 and his M.A. from the New England Conservatory in 1955. On July 26, Mr. Pinto appeared as violin soloist in a performance of Wieniawski's Violin Concerto in D major with the student orchestra. He has shared the duties of concertmaser with Nancy Cirillo.

Two singers in the choral department of the Music Center share the Jennie Fels Memorial Scholarship, value $150, which cancels a student's indebtedness to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Barbara Utt, 23, of Warrensburg, Mo., and Richard Donohue of Middletown, Conn., divide this award.

Two awards of $200 value each comprise the Ann M. Gannett Scholarships, intended for living expenses for two former GIs. The winners this year are Norman Schmidt, 27, of Dayton, Ohio, and André Come, 21, of Newton.

What's Going On?

Tonight

8:30—Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting.

8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final performance, "Point of No Return."

8:40—Sharon (Conn.) Playhouse. Final performance, "The Importance of Being Earnest."

8:45—Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge. Final performance, "The Good Fairy."

8:45—Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse. "The Seven Year Itch."

9:00—Jacob's Pillow, near Lee. San Francisco Ballet.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events in Berkshire for the next five weeks, see the Berkshire Summer Calendar in the second section of today's Eagle,

Berkshire Week

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux. Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox.

8:40—"Point of No Return." Williamstown Summer Theater.

8:45—"The Good Fairy." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Seven Year Itch." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—San Francisco Ballet. Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival Becket.

Tomorrow

2:30 p.m.—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed, Tanglewood.

3:30 p.m.—Tudor and Elizabethan music. South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music.

7:00 p.m.—"The Seven Year Itch." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

8:30 p.m.—Steffen Zacharias' Theater Club. "A Phoenix Too Frequent." Avaloch, Lenox.

8:40 p.m.—Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

Malcolm Bernstein To Sing Bach Aria At Local Church

GREAT BARRINGTON — Bass-baritone Malcolm Bernstein of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, has chosen an aria from Bach's "St. John Passion" for his solo at the 10 o'clock service at the First Congregational Church tomorrow.

Mr. Bernstein, a resident of Baltimore, is a third-year student of opera dramatics. He has sung both with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and in many of the productions of the Music Center's opera department.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

AUG 7 1956

Weather is surely a witch—At Tanglewood this season there has been a falling off of attendance for the heavily programmed weekends. Some blamed the programs. Some blamed too much Boston Symphony. Came the last weekend with enchanting weather when people didn't have to wear their minks inside and wrap blankets around them outside and they had their old time pressure size audience. Who wants to sit in chill and torment to hear even the greatest of music beautifully played?

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 11 1956

OPERA

AMATO OPERA THEATRE—159 Bleecker St. GR 7-2844. Adm. free. Reservations must be made in advance at theatre or by mail (enclose stamped self-addressed envelope). Fri.-Sun. Aug. 10-12 & 17-19 & Tues. Aug. 14—"Rigoletto."

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Thru Aug. 12 — Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel. 600. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Music Shed. Fri. Sat. 8:30. Sun. 2:30. $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm. to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. Info on accommodations from Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass. Thurs. Aug. 9—Tanglewood on Parade. Festivities begin 6 p.m. Concert 8:15 p.m. Eleazar de Carvalho conducts first half of program. Rimsky-Korsakoff's, "Russian Easter Overture"; Villa-Lobos, Chorus No. 10; 2nd half of program Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianist. Gershwin, Piano Concerto in F; Rossini, "La Boutique Fantasque," Ravel, "Bolero." (Tickets $2.50-$5). Fri. Aug. 10—Charles Munch cond. Haydn, Symphony No. 102 in B-flat; Piston, Symphony No. 6; Strauss, Don Juan; Dukas, L'Apprenti Sorcier. Sat. Aug. 11—Pierre Monteux cond. Freed, Festival Overture; Brahms, Symphony No. 3 in F; Enesco, Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9; Strauss, Suite from Der Rosenkavalier. Sun. Aug. 12—Charles Munch cond. Soloists: James Pease, Albert Da Costa, Robert Nagy, John McCurdy. Beethoven, Symphony No. 3 in E, "Eroica;" Wagner, Opening and final scenes from Act III of "Die Meistersinger."

Berkshire Summer Calendar

Music, From Classic to Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

Sunday

August 12

Tanglewood

10:00—Dept. 1 Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. (Friends)

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch. Music Shed.

Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") — Beethoven
"Die Meistersinger," Act 3 (opening and final scene) Chorus and Soloists: James Pease, Albert da Costa, Marguerite Willauer — Wagner

New York Pro Musica Antiqua

3:30—Tudor and Elizabethan music
(At South Mountain Temple of Chamber Music, Pittsfield.)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:40—Modern Jazz Quartet and Chris Connors

Avalon

8:30—Steffen Zachariae' Theater Club. "A Phoenix Too Frequent" and "Adventures in the Skin Trade."

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Dorothy Eustis, pianist, assisting artist.

Quartet in D Major (K. 575) — Mozart
Piano Quintet No. 2 — Dohnanyi
Quartet No. 1, Op. 7 — Bartok

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00. Final per- "The Seven-Year Itch."

Berkshire Week in Review

The Weatherman Smiles

THE HEALTH of Berkshire County's second-biggest industry remained a major topic of speculation this week as the summer tourist trade, riding a tide of fine weather, finally moved into high gear almost everywhere except at Tanglewood.

Even at Tanglewood the picture was confusingly spotty. Thursday's annual "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities drew an attendance of 9,787 and an all-time-high box office gross of $24,266 for the Berkshire Music Center. But the following night's Boston Symphony concert, despite ideal weather, played to an audience of only 4,295, one of the smallest on record for a Shed performance. With only two days remaining in Tanglewood's 1956 season, it was obvious that last year's record total attendance of 136,087 could not be matched.

Elsewhere in Central and Southern Berkshire, however, the trade was brisk. The week was ushered in with the season's heavy deluge of visitors, who kept information booth personnel on the jump and filled up virtually every available hotel, motel and tourist-home room in the area. At the Pittsfield Chamber of Commerce booth, which was forced to use its "emergency" list of accommodations for the first time this summer, the weekend trade was termed "stupendous." Northeast Airlines turned away a large number of New York passengers for want of space, and police called Berkshire highway traffic of near-record proportions.

Unhappily, the same sunny weather that was helping to cull tourist dollars was in danger of proving costly for Berkshire farmers, who were facing semi-drought conditions that intensified the crop delays already imposed by a late spring and chilly June. Weekend weather forecasts offered scant hope of substantial relief.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749
AUG 9 1956

PERSONAL POSTCARD

BOSTON SYMPHONY:

All set for the long haul across Europe? Tell your hosts, here and there, that this is a good city to visit and we'd be glad to show them around.

BOSTON COMMON

Camera Angles: Smell Out Those Musicians

By William Tague

AS EVERYONE who reads The Eagle knows, the Berkshire air is flavored with music in the summertime. By following your nose to the source of the fragrance, you'll probably smell out good subjects for pictures. Musicians are the cause of it and they are a species often characterized by oblivion to everything but their own playing. They are therefore, susceptible to easy capture alive, on film.

The chief hunting grounds for this species of fair game are the great primeval forests and jungles at Tanglewood, South Mountain Temple of Music and Music Barn. Wild musicians may also be bagged in such lesser preserves as Park Square in Pittsfield, where concerts are given on Thursday nights, and at square dances, wedding receptions or other events garnished by music.

Is It Posted?

Before you start shooting, it is important to find out whether the land is posted. This is usually a matter of common sense. For example, no unauthorized photographer would walk to the stage during a concert at Tanglewood and start taking flash pictures.

Common sense tells you that such behavior would cause a disturbance and the photographer would be tossed out on his ear. Natural-light pictures taken with discretion from the audience are permissible at Tanglewood and elsewhere, but flash pictures are definitely out.

Unless you are sitting in a front row and have a telephoto lens it is usually a waste of time trying to take photos during a performance anyway. The best approach is to attend rehearsals, especially if the group is small and the rehearsal is being conducted outdoors.

Musicians practicing in solitude are even better. In the case of the individual, you should get his permission to take pictures. When a group is involved, ask permission of someone in charge.

Such problems of hunting regulations are greatly minimized or nonexistent at informal, outdoor band concerts and other musical events where the audience may be engaged in something besides listening to the music.

Once you've gotten into shooting range, keep your eyes open. Constantly watch for musicians with interesting faces or facial expressions. Men with beards, long hair, or gaunt, ascetic features are picture-worthy targets, as are men wearing expressions of rapture, excitement, pain or disgust.

Look sharply also for oddities such as little players of big tubas and big players of little piccolos.

Compositions of faces, hands and instruments in a group of musicians are worth trying, too. And don't forget the conductor. Chances are good that he'll have a distinctive face. Even if he doesn't, the violent patterns formed by his hands, arms and body during a heated moment may furnish the best picture of the day.

Fiddling at wedding reception in Tyringham

Choice Face

Occasionally, a choice face in the band may escape capture by your camera because it is tucked away in the middle of the group out of range. The face might be a wild-eyed Bohemian type or one of unusual serenity which you cannot resist photographing.

If the face has sufficient pictorial interest to stand on its own merits then ask its owner to pose for a picture after the performance. If it was an unusual expression that came over the face while the music was going on, then don't try to recapture the same expression after the music has ended. Topographical features of a face can be reproduced easily, but fleeting expressions fade when the stimulus causing them has been removed.

The photo accompanying this column combines an inherently interesting face with a pleasant, natural expression. Unposed, the picture was taken at a wedding reception held outdoors in Tyringham. The violinist was roving among the guests, playing as he roved. A Rolleiflex camera and Super-XX film were the weapons that captured him.

NY Herald Tribune
Sunday, August 12

MUSIC

Berkshire Festival

By PAUL HENRY LANG

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11.—The 1956 season of the Berkshire Festival is drawing to its close, but admirers of the Boston Symphony still throng the magnificent grounds of Tanglewood. And though the afternoon showers somewhat diminished their number, there were close to 6,000 patrons at the Friday night concert which opened the last week end.

The high point of the concert was the brilliant performance of Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, composed to commemorate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Boston Symphony. When I first heard it on the occasion of the Bostonians' New York concert last December, I found the symphony to be an engrossing work by a mature mind. Friday night upon hearing it anew, I was struck by the solidity of its construction, the judicious contrasts in mood, tone and procedure offered by the individual movements which at the same time constitute a rounded entity.

Finale Praised

This solidness is strengthened by the finale, usually the stumbling block for latter-day symphonists and consequently a deterrent to a "happy ending." The last movement of this symphony is a real finale which unmistakably caps the work in a spirit of farewell. "Turn out the lights and send them home," was the feeling of the classical symphonic finale. "Open the gates of heaven," was the romantic composer's model. Mr. Piston has no desire for Apocalyptic revelation. He writes straightforward music, and the ending was indeed a happy one.

The performance was not only excellent and enjoyable, but it gave the listener the warm conviction that he was listening to a repertory piece. The conductor had a large share in this success. Mr. Munch conducted in a manner that bespoke not only technical competence and security with this difficult score, but his performance exuded faith in, and appreciation of the work. The orchestra was glorious.

"Don Juan" Rousing

Strauss' "Don Juan" was played to the hilt, and I would not be surprised if its rousing climaxes could be heard in Pittsfield. Mr. Munch did not spare himself and manipulated this extraordinary body of musicians at will. The concert began with Haydn's lordly Symphony in E Flat, No. 102, which also had its nice moments, especially the spirited finale. But this semi-outdoor shed is not a grateful locale for such music, and much of its delicate grandeur was lost.

The final piece, Dukas' "Sorcerer's Apprentice," should be reserved for Promenade Concerts or similar occasions where one listens with one ear only while watching something more interesting.

Acoustic Tricks

There can be no question that certain modifications are imposed upon music by performance in the Tanglewood Shed. The shell is very resonant and plays all sorts of acoustic tricks. The sound of triangles, cymbals and other percussion instruments is twice as brilliant as in the concert hall and spreads like bird-shot. The brasses, too, are a bit overbrilliant. Curiously, the kettledrums — unless playing high notes loudly—are dull and hollow; they hurt the Haydn Symphony considerably. When the orchestra is driven to a climax one has the feeling of impending pandemonium. Yet some of the delicate passages sounded absolutely exquisite.

Toward the end of the slow movement of the Piston symphony where the solo cello is gradually joined by woodwinds, and in the final section of "Don Juan" where the frenzied outbursts end with a sudden pause followed by pianissimo chords, the effect was overwhelming. Precious few are the orchestras that can duplicate this feat when players with tired wrists and puffed lips can unfold a chord of such ethereal lightness with such utter precision. And Mr. Munch made sure that the preceding pause was a long and dramatic one.

All of this is to say that the Boston Symphony simply played in its accustomed manner, which is superlative.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 12, 1956. MUSIC

CONCERT AND OPERA PROGRAMS FOR THE WEEK

HOMEGOING: Thirty-six members of the Boston Symphony were born abroad, and when the orchestra heads for Europe this week twenty-five of them will have a chance to visit their homelands. Einar Hansen, the only Dane in the orchestra, will be the first to see his native land. Next will be the three Russians, Victor Manusevitch, Vladimir Resnikoff and Manuel Zung. When the orchestra gets to Prague, Louis Berger and Josef Zimbler will be back on familiar ground. Ditto with Irving Frankel and Ernst Panenka in Vienna. Alfred Krips will be in the land of his birth when the orchestra gets to Munich. But the real homecoming will take place when the orchestra gets to France on Sept. 19. Not only is France the homeland of both Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, the two conductors, but it is also the homeland of no fewer than [illegible] members of the orchestra.

Whitestone

James Pease, bass, sings in all-Wagner program at season's final concert at Tanglewood today.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; James Pease, bass; Alfredo De Costa, tenor; Marguerite Willmer, soprano; Rosalind Hupp, Robert Nagy, John McCurdy and the Berkshire Festival Singers. (Final concert of season.)

Symphony No. 9 ..... Beethoven
Opening and final scene from Act 3 of Die Meistersinger ..... Wagner

Berkshire Music Barn

TONIGHT, 8:40 P. M., Modern Jazz Quartet with Chris Connor, singer.

NEXT SUNDAY, 8:40 P. M., Dizzy Gillespie and his Band.

PITTSFIELD

TODAY, 3:30 P. M., South Mountain. New York Pro Musica Antiqua in a program of Tudor and Elizabethan music. Conductor, Noah Greenberg.

SATURDAY, 3:30 P. M., South Mountain. Claremont String Quartet.
Quartet, Op. 39, No. 1 ..... Boccherini
Quartet, Op. 70 ..... Toch
Quartet, Op. 51, No. 1 ..... Brahms

NEXT SUNDAY, 3:30 P. M., South Mountain. New York Pro Musica Antiqua in a program of sacred and secular works by Monteverdi.

Music

Berkshire Eagle, Aug. 11

Munch Scores in Last Lap

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST program of the concluding trio of concerts for this season at Tanglewood was played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch in the great Shed last night. An audience not notable for size 4,295 gave Munch one of the greatest ovations he ever received in these concerts.

The audience excitement was steadily built up in the last half of the program which consisted of two works which had much in common in terms of content and the time of their conception. Richard Strauss wrote his "Don Juan" in 1889 when he was 25; Paul Dukas his "The Apprentice Sorcerer" in 1897 when he was 32.

* * *

BOTH WORKS are single movements. Strauss calls his a tone poem; Dukas his a scherzo. There was a faction in those days who thought that the symphony as an art form had been exhausted. That they were wrong could be proved by going no farther afield than to the main work on last night's program — Walter Piston's sixth symphony. However, Strauss and Dukas were of the party who devoted themselves in orchestral works almost exclusively to dramatic realizations of famous stories.

Dukas here used Goethe's mordant ballad; its ironic rhythm, brilliant instrumental writing and furious animation were vehicles upon which Munch and the orchestra rode to a glorious climax. Strauss applied his music to the story, not of Byron, but of Nicholas Lenau, an early 19th century poet, who as a young man of 30 gave up his pursuit of a vocation (first law, then medicine) to come to Ohio — of all places — to stake out a homestead in 1832. He stayed but a year.

* * *

THE TONE-POEM is dedicated to Strauss's "dear friend and fellow student, Ludwig Thuille," a name now entirely forgotten except for the irrelevant connotation that he was a teacher of the late musical benefactress, Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, and his piano quintet was used on the first program ever played in the now famous Temple of Music on South Mountain, with Mrs. Coolidge herself at the piano.

* * *

LENAU'S "DON" was not quite the frivolous individual created by his predecessor, Byron, but still there are strains of the pessimistic Weltschmerz which Strauss wove into his highly romantic music. Concertmaster Richard Burgin, viola soloist Joseph de Pasquale and oboist Ralph Gomberg, made the most of their ample opportunities, just as in the preceding Piston symphony cello soloist Samuel Mayes distinguished himself in the fertile slow movement.

Piston was in the hall last night and was called to the stage after the orchestra's vivid reading of his last symphony, and was recalled many times. This was one of the works commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston orchestra and was first played in Symphony Hall last season. It is in four conventional divisions and the movement's legends lucidly convey the spirit of each section; fluendo expressivo, leggerissimo vivace, adagio sereno, and allegro energico.

* * *

THE LAST three movements are instantly appealing in their distinctive characters. The scherzo is a whirlwind of vivacity played by dampered strings against prudently subdued wind, the adagio a deeply searching piece, and the finale a gay obstreperous gambol.

Only the first movement remains fairly obtuse at first hearing. The various idioms are discernible but the orchestration is continually so busy that it takes a keen ear to distinguish the contrapuntal vagaries. This is certainly one of Piston's most compact and concise compositions and its use on the program of the orchestra's forthcoming European tours will undoubtedly bring added honor to the fraternity of American composers.

Munch opened his program with a loving, warm reading of Haydn's Symphony No. 102, in B-flat major. Such straightforward music could not be farther removed from the programmatic works of the final half of the program but it is an adornment in any sequence and the performance was thoroughly enchanting.

Boston Symphony Players Will Visit Native Soil

Twenty-five foreign-born members of the 105-man Boston Symphony Orchestra will be revisiting their homelands during the course of the five-week tour of Europe, which will commence immediately at the conclusion, today, of the orchestra's concerts at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox.

By far the largest group of returning natives will be the 16 French-born members of the orchestra, who are looking forward to the concerts in Paris on September 19 and 20, and in the Cathedral at Chartres on September 21. Included in this group are Emil Korn and (born in Colmar), Norbert Lauga (born in Aix-les-Bains), Pierre Mayor (born in Paris) and Roger Shermont (born in Paris), violinists Albert Yves Bernard (born in Seine) and Jean Cauhape (born in Toulouse) are French-born violinists. Leon Marjollet (born in Chalons-sur-Marne) and Alfred Zighera (born in Paris) are native French cellists. The bass section includes Georges Moleux, principal bass (born in Boulogne-sur-Mer), Gaston Dufresne (born in Lille) and Henri Girard (born in Montlhery). Other French-born Boston Symphony players are Jean Devergie (born in Marseille), oboe; Louis Speyer (born in Paris), English horn; Roger Voisin, principal trumpet (born in Angers); Marcel Lafosse (born in Marly-le-Roi), trumpet; and Bernard Zighera (born in Paris), harp.

Both Charles Munch, the orchestra's Music Director, and Pierre Monteux, the guest conductor, are French-born, Dr. Munch in Strasbourgand Mr. Monteux in Paris. Each will conduct a concert in Paris.

Three Russian - born violinists have been polishing up their Russian for the orchestra's concerts in Leningrad on September 5 and 6, and Moscow on September 8 and 9. They are Victor Manusevitch (born in Alexandrovsk), Vladimir Resnikoff (born in Novgorod), and Manuel Zung (born in Grodno).

Two cellists, Louis Berger (born in Prague) and Josef Zimbler (born in Pilsen), have been briefing their colleagues about the best restaurants and hotels in Prague, where the orchestra will play on September 11.

The concert in Vienna on September 12 will find Irving Frankel (born in Lemberg), bass, and Ernst Panenka (born in Vienna), bassoon, acting as guides for the other men as they go sight-seeing in this famous musical capital.

The two remaining foreign-born players whose homelands will be visited are violinists Alfred Krips (born in Berlin) and Einar Hansen (born in Copenhagen). The orchestra will play in Copenhagen on August 31, immediately after its final performance at the Edinburgh Festival, and Stuttgart and Munich in Germany will hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra on September 13 and 14. Eleven other members of the orchestra are foreign-born, but their countries are not included on the itinerary for this year's tour.

Helen Keller Life Inspires Ballet

A major new work, inspired by incidents in the life of Helen Keller, will be introduced by Pauline Koner during the Ninth American Dance Festival at Connecticut College, New London, Conn. next week. Miss Koner and her dance company will open the four-day festival, Aug. 16-19 at Palmer Auditorium.

NY Herald Tribune
Sunday, Aug. 12

MUSIC

Berkshire Festival

By PAUL HENRY LANG

LENNOX, Mass., Aug. 11.—The 1956 season of the Berkshire Festival is drawing to its close, but admirers of the Boston Symphony still throng the magnificent grounds at Tanglewood. And though the afternoon showers somewhat diminished their number, there were close to 6,000 patrons at the Friday night concert which opened the last week end.

The high point of the concert was the brilliant performance of Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, composed to commemorate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Boston Symphony. When I first heard it on the occasion of the Bostonians' New York concert last December I found the symphony to be an engrossing work by a mature mind. Friday night upon hearing it anew I was struck by the solidity of its construction, the judicious contrasts in mood, tone and procedure offered by the individual movements which at the same time constitute a rounded entity.

Finale Praised

This wholeness is strengthened by the finale, usually the stumbling block for latter-day symphonies and consequently a deterrent to a "happy ending." The last movement of this symphony is a real finale which unmistakably caps the work in a spirit of farewell. "Turn out the lights and send them home," was the feeling of the classical symphonic finale. "Open the gates of heaven," was the romantic composer's model. Mr. Piston has no desire for Apocalyptic revelation. He writes straightforward music, and the ending was indeed a happy one.

The performance was not only excellent and enjoyable, but it gave the listener the warm conviction that he was listening to a repertory piece. The conductor had a large share in this success. Mr. Munch conducted in a manner that bespoke not only technical competence and security with this difficult score, but his performance exuded faith in, and appreciation of the work. The orchestra was glorious.

"Don Juan" Rousing

Strauss' "Don Juan" was played to the hilt, and I would not be surprised if its rousing climaxes could be heard in Pittsfield Mr. Munch did not spare himself and manipulated this extraordinary body of musicians at will. The concert began with Haydn's lordly Symphony in B Flat, No. 102, which also had its nice moments, especially the spirited finale. But this semi-outdoor shed is not a graceful locale for such music, and much of its delicate grandeur was lost.

The final piece, Dukas' "Sorcerer's Apprentice," should be reserved for Promenade Concerts or similar occasions where one listens with one ear only while watching something more interesting.

Acoustic Tricks

There can be no question that certain modifications are imposed upon music by performance in the Tanglewood Shed. The shell is very resonant and plays all sorts of acoustic tricks. The sound of triangles, cymbals and other percussion instruments is twice as brilliant as in the concert hall and spreads like bird-shot. The brasses, too, are a bit overbrilliant. Curiously, the kettledrums — unless playing high notes loudly—are dull and hollow; they hurt the Haydn Symphony considerably. When the orchestra is driven to a climax one has the feeling of impending pandemonium. Yet some of the delicate passages sounded absolutely exquisite.

Toward the end of the slow movement of the Piston symphony where the solo cello is gradually joined by woodwinds, and in the final section of "Don Juan" where the frenzied outbursts end with a sudden pause followed by pianissimo chords, the effect was overwhelming. Precious few are the orchestras that can duplicate this feat when players with tired wrists and puffed lips can unfold a chord of such ethereal lightness with such utter precision. And Mr. Munch made sure that the preceding pause was a long and dramatic one.

All of this is to say that the Boston Symphony simply played in its accustomed manner, which is superlative.

CONCERT AND OPERA PROGRAMS FOR THE WEEK

HOMEGOING: Thirty-six members of the Boston Symphony were born abroad, and when the orchestra heads for Europe this week twenty-five of them will have a chance to visit their homelands. Einar Hansen, the only Dane in the orchestra, will be the first to see his native land. Next will be the three Russians, Victor Manusevitch, Vladimir Resnikoff and Manuel Zung. When the orchestra gets to Prague, Louis Berger and Josef Zimbler will be back on familiar ground. Ditto with Irving Frankel and Ernst Panenka in Vienna. Alfred Krips will be in the land of his birth when the orchestra gets to Munich. But the real homecoming will take place when the orchestra gets to France on Sept. 19. Not only is France the homeland of both Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, the two conductors, but it is also the homeland of no fewer than sixteen members of the orchestra.

Wh testone

James Pease, bass, sings in all-Wagner program at season's final concert at Tanglewood today.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; James Pease, bass; Albert Da Costa, tenor; Marguerite Willauer, soprano; Rosalind Hupp, Robert Nagy, John McCurdy and the Berkshire Festival Chorus. (Final concert of season.)
Symphony No. 3 .....Beethoven
Opening and final scene from Act 3 of Die Meistersinger .....Wagner

Berkshire Music Barn

TONIGHT, 8:40 P. M., Modern Jazz Quartet with Cass Connor, singer.
NEXT SUNDAY, 8:40 P. M., Dizzy Gillespie and His Band.

PITTSFIELD

TODAY, 3:30 P. M., South Mountain. New York Pro Musica Antiqua in a program of Tudor and Elizabethan music. Conductor, Noah Greenberg.
SATURDAY, 3:30 P. M., South Mountain. Claremont String Quartet:
Quartet, Op. 39, No. 1 .....Boccherini
Quartet, Op. 70 .....Haydn
Quartet, Op. 51, No. 1 .....Brahms
NEXT SUNDAY, 3:30 P. M., South Mountain. New York Pro Musica presenting a program of sacred and secular music by Monteverdi.

Berkshire Eagle Aug. 11

Music

Munch Scores in Last Lap

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST program of the concluding trio of concerts for this season at Tanglewood was played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch in the great Shed last night. An audience not notable for size 4,295 gave Munch one of the greatest ovations he ever received in these concerts.

The audience excitement was steadily built up in the last half of the program which consisted of two works which had much in common in terms of content and the time of their conception. Richard Strauss wrote his "Don Juan" in 1889 when he was 25; Paul Dukas his "The Apprentice Sorcerer" in 1897 when he was 32.

* * *

BOTH WORKS are single movements. Strauss calls his a tone poem; Dukas his a scherzo. There was a faction in those days who thought that the symphony as an art form had been exhausted. That they were wrong could be proved by going no farther afield than to the main work on last night's program — Walter Piston's sixth symphony. However, Strauss and Dukas were of the party who devoted themselves in orchestral works almost exclusively to dramatic realizations of famous stories.

Dukas here used Goethe's mordant ballad; its ironic rhythm, brilliant instrumental writing and furious animation were vehicles upon which Munch and the orchestra rode to a glorious climax. Strauss applied his music to the story, not of Byron, but of Nicholas Lenau, an early 19th century poet, who as a young man of 30 gave up his pursuit of a vocation (first law, then medicine) to come to Ohio — of all places — to stake out a homestead in 1832. He stayed but a year.

* * *

THE TONE-POEM is dedicated to Strauss's "dear friend and fellow student, Ludwig Thuille," a name now entirely forgotten except for the irrelevant connotation that he was a teacher of the late musical benefactress, Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, and his piano quintet was used on the first program ever played in the now famous Temple of Music on South Mountain, with Mrs. Coolidge herself at the piano.

* * *

LENAU'S "DON" was not quite the frivolous individual created by his predecessor, Byron, but still there are strains of the pessimistic Weltschmerz which Strauss wove into his highly romantic music. Concertmaster Richard Burgin, viola soloist Joseph de Pasquale and oboist Ralph Gomberg, made the most of their ample opportunities, just as in the preceding Piston symphony cello soloist Samuel Mayes distinguished himself in the fertile slow movement.

Piston was in the hall last night and was called to the stage after the orchestra's vivid reading of his last symphony, and was recalled many times. This was one of the works commissioned for the 75th anniversary of the Boston orchestra and was first played in Symphony Hall last season. It is in four conventional divisions and the movement's legends lucidly convey the spirit of each section; fluendo expressivo, leggerissimo vivace, adagio sereno, and allegro energico.

* * *

THE LAST three movements are instantly appealing in their distinctive characters. The scherzo is a whirlwind of vivacity played by dampered strings against prudently subdued wind, the adagio a deeply searching mood, and the finale a gay obstreperous gambol.

Only the first movement remains fairly obtuse at first hearing. The various idioms are discernible but the orchestration is continually so busy that it takes a keen ear to distinguish the contrapuntal vagaries. This is certainly one of Piston's most compact and concise compositions and its use on the program of the orchestra's forthcoming European tours will undoubtedly bring added honor to the fraternity of American composers.

Munch opened his program with a loving, warm reading of Haydn's Symphony No. 102, in B-flat major. Such straightforward music could not be farther removed from the programmatic works of the final half of the program but it is an adornment in any sequence and the performance was thoroughly enchanting.

Boston Symphony Players Will Visit Native Soil

Twenty-five foreign-born members of the 105-man Boston Symphony Orchestra will be revisiting their homelands during the course of the five-week tour of Europe, which will commence immediately at the conclusion, today, of the orchestra's concerts at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox.

By far the largest group of returning natives will be the 16 French-born members of the orchestra, who are looking forward to the concerts in Paris on September 19 and 20, and in the Cathedral at Chartres on September 21. Included in this group are Emil Kornsand (born in Colmar), Norbert Lauga (born in Aix-les-Bains), Pierre Mayor (born in Paris) and Roger Shermont (born in Paris), violinists Albert Yves Bernard (born in Seine) and Jean Cauhape (born in Toulouse) are French-born violinists. Leon Marjollet (born in Chalons-sur-Marne) and Alfred Zighera (born in Paris) are native French cellists. The bass section includes Georges Moleux, principal bass (born in Boulogne-sur-Mer), Gaston Dufresne (born in Lille) and Henri Girard (born in Montlhery). Other French-born Boston Symphony players are Jean Devergie (born in Marseille), oboe; Louis Speyer (born in Paris), English horn; Roger Voisin, principal trumpet (born in Angers); Marcel Lafosse (born in Marly-le-Roi), trumpet; and Bernard Zighera (born in Paris), harp.

Both Charles Munch, the orchestra's Music Director, and Pierre Monteux, the guest conductor, are French-born, Dr. Munch in Strasbourgand Mr. Monteux in Paris. Each will conduct a concert in Paris.

Three Russian - born violinists have been polishing up their Russian for the orchestra's concerts in Leningrad on September 5 and 6, and Moscow on September 8 and 9. They are Victor Manusevitch (born in Alexandrovsk), Vladimir Resnikoff (born in Novgorod), and Manuel Zung (born in Grodno).

Two cellists, Louis Berger (born in Prague) and Josef Zimbler (born in Pilsen), have been briefing their colleagues about the best restaurants and hotels in Prague, where the orchestra will play on September 11.

The concert in Vienna on September 12 will find Irving Frankel (born in Lemberg), bass, and Ernst Panenka (born in Vienna), bassoon, acting as guides for the other men as they go sight-seeing in this famous musical capital.

The two remaining foreign-born players whose homelands will be visited are violinists Alfred Krips (born in Berlin) and Einar Hansen (born in Copenhagen). The orchestra will play in Copenhagen on August 31, immediately after its final performance at the Edinburgh Festival, and Stuttgart and Munich in Germany will hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra on September 13 and 14. Eleven other members of the orchestra are foreign-born, but their countries are not included on the itinerary for this year's tour.

Helen Keller Life Inspires Ballet

A major new work, inspired by incidents in the life of Helen Keller, will be introduced by Pauline Koner during the Ninth American Dance Festival at Connecticut College, New London, Conn. next week. Miss Koner and her dance company will open the four-day festival, Aug. 16-19 at Palmer Auditorium.

Music Here This Week

Goldman Band

Guggenheim Memorial Concerts, Richard Franko Goldman conducting, Central and Prospect Parks, 8:30.

Tonight, Central Park. March from "Cleopatra," Mancinelli; "Merry Wives of Windsor" Overture, Nicolai; Eight Russian Folksongs, Liadov; The Runaway Trumpet, Burke-R. Smith (cornet solo, James Burke); Molly, on the Shore, Shepherd's Hey, Grainger. Music by Johann Strauss: Waltzes, Wine, Woman and Song and Emperor; Persian March, Perpetuum Mobile; Waltzes, Artist's Life and Liebeslieder.

Monday, Central Park, Commando March, Barber; Outdoor Overture, Copland; Alla Marcia, Sibelius; Pan Americana, Herbert; "Carmen" excerpts, Bizet; Dances from "Prince Igor," Borodin; March, E. F. G., Leidzen; "Masaniello" Overture, Auber; Pasquinade, Gottschalk; Athletic Festival March, Prokofiev; Marches: Liberty Bell, Sousa; Stepping Along, E. F. Goldman.

Wednesday, Central Park. Cortege from "Mlada," Rimsky-Korsakov; Symphony from "The Fairy Queen," Purcell; Trauersymphonie, Wagner; Band Suite No. 1, Holst; Roman Carnival Overture, Berlioz; March, Lads of Wamphrey, Grainger; Concert Waltz, E. F. Goldman (cornet solo, James Burke); Farandole from "L'Arlesienne," Bizet; March of the Little Fauns, Pierne; Marches: Our Flirtations, Sousa; The Gold Bug, Herbert, Jubilee, E. F. Goldman.

Thursday, Prospect Park, and Friday, Central Park (closing concerts). March, University, E. F. Goldman; Military Overture, Mendelssohn; Zadok the Priest, Handel, Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring, Bach; New World Symphony, finale, Dvorak; Toccata Marziale, Vaughan Williams; The Magic Trumpet, Burke (cornet solo, James Burke); March of Night, Bennett; Pavane, Gould; Soliloquy, Persichetti; Molly on the Shore, Grainger; Light Cavalry Overture, Suppe; Marches, Spirit of Peace, Fanfare, Iowa, Goldman.

Other Concerts

Jane Mansfield, pianist, and Patricia Walker, contralto, Brooklyn Museum, today, 2.

Music by Schumann, Dvorak, Thomson, Liszt, Villa-Lobos, Verdi, Sektberg and Tyson.

Chamber Orchestra, Otto Lehmann conducting, Washington Square Park, Monday 9.

Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, Mozart; Opera, "The Maid as Mistress," Pergolesi (in concert form with Adelaide Bishop, soprano; William Wolff, bass-baritone, and George W. Kluge, actor), Symphony No. 5, in B flat, Schubert. (In case of rain this program will be given Tuesday.)

NBC Symphony Orchestra, Julius Grossman conducting, East River Park Amphitheater, Tuesday, 8:30.

Soloists, Almita Hym[illegible], Thomas Carey, baritone; Ge[illegible], pianist. "Freischuetz" Ov[illegible] Poeme, Chausson; "Masquer[illegible]chaturian; Piano Con[illegible] (first movement), Beetho[illegible] Prologue, Leoncavalo[illegible] and Wolfe.

Downtown Ma[illegible] Concert Band, George [illegible], conducting, Battery Park, Tuesday, noon.

Music by Sousa, [illegible], Grang-Kiser, Klohr, [illegible], Bennett, Youmans, Migelon, [illegible] and Berlin.

Columbia University Summer Session Band, [illegible], conducting, Low Library Steps, Columbia University, Tuesday, 7.

Soloist, William [illegible]. Music by Grundman, [illegible], Bayers, Morrissey, Rodgers and Alford.

New York Concert Band, Hunter Wiley conducting, Morningside Park, Wednesday, 7:30.

Union Theological Seminary Summer School Chorus, Elaine Brown conducting, James Chapel, Claremont Ave. and 121st St., Wednesday, 8.

Honegger's "King David."

Calypso Program, Carnegie Recital Hall, Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Aug. 17, 18, 19, 8:30 (also Saturday at 11:30).

Massie Patterson Carib Singers and Dancers.

Recorded Music, Bryant Park, Monday through Friday, noon.

Opera

Amato Opera Theater "Rigoletto," 159 Bleecker St.; today, Friday, Saturday, next Sunday, 4:15.

Opera Workshop, P. S. 75, 735 West End Ave. "L'Elisir d'Amore," Wednesday, 8; "Aida," Thursday, 7:45.

Berkshire Festival

Last Concert, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., today, 2:30.

Symphony No. 3, "Eroica," Beethoven; "Die Meistersinger," first and last scenes, Act III, Wagner. Soloists, Marguerite Willauer, Albert Da Costa, James Pease, Rosalind Hupp, Robert Nagy, John McCurdy; Berkshire Festival Chorus trained by James Afferis.

NY Herald Tribune
Sun. Aug. 12.

Emergency Fund Marks 25th Anniversary

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The Musicians Emergency Fund will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary with a dinner on Tuesday, Oct. 30, at the Sheraton-Astor Hotel. Formed to furnish work for musicians who were in temporary difficulties during the hard times of the early 1930s, it has in recent years concentrated particularly on bringing musical therapy into government hospitals through its auxiliary, the Hospitalized Veterans Service. It has also helped many young musicians to launch careers, providing $4,000,000 of employment during its first quarter-century.

Harvey W. Higley, Administrator of Veterans Affairs for the Veterans Administration, will be the guest of honor at the dinner. Mme. Yolanda Merolrion, executive director, is one of the Fund's original founders; Mrs. Lytle Hull is president and Fritz Kreisler the chairman of the board. The musical therapy program is now operating in forty-one hospitals in six states and thirteen hospitals in England.

* * *

In the Berkshires

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox ends today, but this region of western Massachusetts will continue to be a focal point of summer music in New England for the rest of August. At the Music Barn near Tanglewood there will be jazz concerts tonight and the next three Sundays, plus lectures, discussions and informal programs throughout the three weeks. South Mountain's Temple of Music near Pittsfield offers two series; one on early music by the New York Pro Musica Antiqua on four Sunday afternoons, beginning today with a Tudor and Elizabethan program, and three more concerts in the South Mountain Association's Saturday afternoon series, by the Claremont String Quartet Aug. 18, Robert Goldsand, pianist, Aug. 25, and the Trio Concertante Sept. 1.

The New York Pro Musica Antiqua will also give two concerts in the American Shakespeare Festival Theater at Stratford, Conn., on Monday nights, Aug. 20 and 27. The programs will be devoted to Elizabethan music and to Claudio Monteverdi's sacred and religious works.

NY Herald Tribune

At Tanglewood Today

Marguerite Willauer, soprano, and her husband James Stagliano, solo French horn player of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Miss Willauer will appear as a soloist with the Boston Symphony in the closing Berkshire Festival concert this afternoon, at 2.30 in the Music Shed—a concert performance of the opening and final scenes from Wagner's opera "Die Meistersinger".

Springfield Sunday Republican
August 12, 1956

Exhibitions of Sculpture Shown in the Berkshires

Display of 33 Pieces by 21 Artists at Lenox Library Sponsored by Sculpture Workshop; Items by Peter Abate at Tanglewood Reception Hall

By WAYNE C. SMITH

About every type of art expressionism has its place in the exposition of the arts which has developed in the Berkshires without any special or central planning. This past week, and continuing this week, sculpture has its place in the sun through the exhibitions presented at the Lenox Library, the reception hall at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield and the Tyringham Galleries in Tyringham.

One of these exhibitions was the sixth annual display of sculpture in the lovely garden of the Lenox Library, which is sponsored by the Sculpture Workshop, a school of sculpture located in Lenox, which is directed by Franc Epping. The show, which closed Friday night, was on view for 10 days.

Conservative Sculpture

This exhibition was open to all sculptors in the area and this year it included 33 pieces of sculpture by 21 artists. The work was generally on the conservative side, and was lacking in those radical departures from traditional bases. There were, however, a number of items which were advanced explorations of the heritages of the medium.

One of these was Homer Gunn's "Flurry" in redwood in which he has successfully incorporated the feeling of movement, and sense of time, in a work also showed of time, in a work also admirable in its sculptural qualities. Robin Spry-Campbell also showed a venturesome spirit in his "Young Lovers" and the "Trio No. 2" which consisted of three organic forms linked together in chain fashion.

Miss Epping was notably represented with an exquisitely modtorso, carved from ashwood, and an interesting "Double-Portrait" in which the profile of a girl is pictured on one side and that of a man on the other. Will Howitt had on display an expressionistic adaptation of a head and Cary Musgrave was included with a genre "Family Portrait" and an ethnic "Old Man and Woman."

Fred Lancone and Ethel Merlis, whose work is more fully covered through one-man shows at the Tyringham Galleries, were notably represented here in "Awakening" and "Morning," respectively.

At Tanglewood

This past week the exhibition presented in Tanglewood's reception hall included a group of sculptures by Peter Abate, who established a summer school of sculpture at the Berkshire Museum this year. The exhibition was particularly important because this artist is a winner of the coveted Prix de Rome and is the head of the department of sculpture at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

The sculptures in the exhibition did not fully represent the wide scope of this artist's work but this is being remedied through more comprehensive presentation of his sculpture which goes on view at the Berkshire Museum today.

In the Tanglewood show were included a number of elongated figures which are within the traditions of Lehmbruck. There were also a couple of finely executed portraits and while "Maternity" was a fine work within the traditions of the ancient Near traditions of the ancient Near East the artist was seen at his best in "Meditation" with its encircling composition. "Modern Atlas" was also interesting for its contemporary adaptation of the mythical theme.

At the Lenox Library there also [illegible] exhibition this past week [illegible] group of water colors by Thomas Blagden of Lakeville, Conn., which cannot but impress with their beautiful colorations and the interesting treatment of subjects which varies from impressionistic realism to organic abstraction. A number are from the artist's trip to Mexico last year.

PIERRE MONTEUX IS GIVEN OVATION AT TANGLEWOOD

Conductor, 81, Leads Boston Symphony in Brahms' Third, Other Works

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 11—The 81-year old Pierre Monteux was on the podium tonight and he seemed at the zenith of his powers. He led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of the Third Symphony of Johannes Brahms that was an eloquent and communicative evocation of the music. He did this without resort to dramatics; indeed the strength of this performance lay in its emphasis on pure lyricism. It drew a sincere ovation from the 9733 persons present.

The program opened with a stunning performance of a festival overture by Isadore Freed, now a member of the Hartt College of Music faculty in Hartford. While it is neither great nor profound music, it retains its festive spirit throughout and serves its purpose well as an opener. Mr. Monteux gave the first performance of this overture in San Francisco in 1946. The work is based on five distinct bits of thematic material, each of which forms an episode.

PIERRE MONTEUX

(Continued From Page 1A)

New to our ears was the "Suite for Orchestra, Op. 9" by Georges Enesco. It is the first of three suites written in 1903. The music lacks the passion and vitality of the Romanian rhapsodies, but it does have a certain personal appeal because of its pleasant melodic material. It opens with the strings playing in unison and eventually the timpani is introduced.

The tempo is slow and is maintained in the second movement, as minuet. The brasses are predominant in the final movement which is characterized by rhythmic changes. It is all pleasant music but it has lain at peace so long that the need for revival is obscure.

Music of Strauss

The program closed with a suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" by Richard Strauss. The program did not note who made this arrangement. There is exquisite music in "Der Rosenkavalier"; music which denotes the disillusionment and resignation of a woman who loses her lover; music which catches the festive spirit of Vienna in its waltzes and love music as poignant and beautiful as was ever written. Mr. Monteux provided an interpretation which must be the result of long experience with this opera. It was detailed as to mood, rich in tone and marvelously light and gay in the waltz episodes. The audience was entranced and loth to let conductor and orchestra leave.

Tomorrow afternoon, Charles Munch will conclude the Berkshire Music Festival with a concert devoted to Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony and the quintet and final scene from Richard Wagner's "Die Meistersinger." Soloists will be Marguerite Willauer, as Eva; Albert Da Costa as Walther; James Pease as Hans Sachs; Rosalind Hupp as Magdalene; Robert Nagy as David; and John McCurdy as Pogner. The final three singers have been members of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department this season.

In Wagner Program at Tanglewood Today

Charles Munch (seated, center), music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, chats with three of the soloists who will appear in extended excerpts in concert form from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" on the concluding program of the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this afternoon. Left to right: Albert Da Costa, tenor, who will sing the role of Walther von Stolzing; Marguerite Willauer, soprano, who will sing Eva; and James Pease, bass, who will sing Hans Sachs

Berkshire Music Festival In Finale This Afternoon

Charles Munch to Conduct Boston Symphony in Beethoven's 'Eroica'; Soloists and Chorus in Wagner's 'Die Meistersinger,' Act Three

Lenox, Aug. 11—Another overflow crowd is expected at Tanglewood tomorrow afternoon (Sunday, Aug. 12) when the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will draw to a close with a concert in the great Music Shed conducted by Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director. For this concluding concert Dr. Munch has scheduled two mighty monuments from the symphonic and operatic repertories: Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, and the opening and final scenes from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

Talented Soloists

Assisting in the Wagner scenes, which will be performed at Tanglewood for the first time, will be the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by James Aliferis of the chorus faculty, and the following vocal soloists: James Pease as Hans Sachs; Albert Da Costa as Walther von Stolzing; Marguerite Willauer as Eva; Rosalind Hupp as Magdalene; John McCurdy as Pogner; and Robert Nagy as David.

After tomorrow's performance, the next time Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony will be in Oslo, Norway, on Sept. 1, during the orchestra's six-week tour of 13 countries in Europe. The "Eroica" will also be performed in Stockholm, Helsinki, Leningrad, Moscow, Prague, Chartres and London.

The scenes from "Die Meistersinger" will bring to this summer's Festival audiences extended excerpts from one of the Wagner music dramas for the second time this season. On July 21 the first act of "Die Walkure" was given under Dr. Munch's direction with Margaret Harshaw as Sieglinde, Albert Da Costa as Siegmund, and James Pease as Hunding. Mr. Da Costa, who then made his Tanglewood debut, was greeted with widespread enthusiasm by both audience and critics. He is a young American tenor from Amsterdam, N. Y., who made his debut in a leading role at the Metropolitan Opera last season in the same role he will sing Sunday afternoon—Walther in "Die Meistersinger."

Pease and Willauer

Mr. Pease, leading bass of the Hamburg Opera Company for the past three seasons, is a native of Indianapolis who received much of his training in the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center in the 1940's, and he has been on its faculty in the concluding weeks of this session. Miss Willauer, who is the wife of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's solo French horn player, James Stagliano, comes to Tanglewood Sunday from Pittsburgh, where she has been singing leading soprano roles with the Pittsburgh Operetta Company this summer.

The other three soloists, Miss Hupp and Messrs. McCurdy and Nagy, are all students in the opera department at the Berkshire Music Center this summer who have been selected by Dr. Munch for this singular honor.

Miss Hupp, who studied at the Cincinnati College of Music, the New England Conservatory in Boston and at Boston University, lives in Chillicothe, O. Mr. McCurdy, who works as a die model-maker for automotive tooling, lives in Detroit where he attended Wayne University. Mr. McCurdy, or Lorain, O., has studied at the Cleveland Institute of Music and recently won a Metropolitan audition.

Reserved tickets for tomorrow afternoon's concert are still on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and telephone reservations may be made by telephoning Lenox (Mass.) 600.

Scholarships and Prizes Assigned at Tanglewood

Kenneth D. Schermerhorn Repeats as Student Conductor Award Winner at Music Center

Lenox, Aug. 11—Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, today presented scholarship awards and cash prizes to outstanding students who attended the 1956 session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony. The presentation took place during the intermission of the final concert presented by the student symphony this season.

The winners of the awards were chosen from the 350 students enrolled this year from 30 states and 18 foreign countries.

Top Awards

On the basis of conspicuous talent, general co-operation and the promise of outstanding careers, the Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, value $300, was divided between two student cellists: David Spinks of Albany, N. Y., and Janet McCarron of Haverstown, Pa.

The High Fidelity Magazine Scholarship, awarded for the first time in 1955, goes this year to Nancy Cirillo, 20, of Brooklyn, N. Y. This award, $300 in value, is given to an outstanding student at the Berkshire Music Center. Miss Cirillo has served as concertmaster at three of the six concerts presented by the student orchestra during the summer, and was soloist with the orchestra in a performance of Lalo's Symphonie Espagnola on July 12.

The Serge Koussevitsky Composition prize, value $250, given by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in honor of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for a work composed at Tanglewood this season, goes to two outstanding students of composition, Robert Lombardo of Hartford, Conn., and Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo, Japan. To win the prize, both students composed pieces for two flutes and piano.

Hartt Graduate

Lombardo, 24, is a graduate of Weaver High School in Hartford, and he received his B.M. and M.M. from the Hartt College of Music in Hartford. Ichiyangi, who has spent four consecutive summers at the Berkshire Music Center, attended Aoyamakuil School in Tokyo and the University of Minnesota. He is presently studying at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, value $300, awarded by a former Tanglewood student to "a student, present or past, chosen from the composition department, for a work to be specified by the faculty," goes to former student Mark Bucci, of New York City. Bucci is commissioned to write a twenty-minute opera which will be presented by the associate division of the opera department at Tanglewood in the summer of 1957.

Regina Sarfaty of New York City, age 21, is this year's winner of the Florence Easton Scholarship, a gift of Margaret Lee Crofts. This award, value $250, which cancels a student's indebtedness to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, goes to a young soprano who has studied at the Berkshire Music Center for the past three summers. Two other scholarships, each worth $150, which cancel their winners' indebtedness to the scholarship fund for tuition advanced by this fund are awarded to students Jules Hirsh of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Virginia Babikian of Everett, Mass.

Koussevitzky Prize

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship is being awarded to the same student conductor who won it last year. This award, value $500, given by residents of Berkshire County in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, goes to Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, 26, of Schenectady, N. Y. Mr. Schermerhorn, who first came to the Music Center as a trumpet player in 1950, was a conducting student of Leonard Bernstein at Tanglewood last year. This summer he has studied as an orchestral conductor under Eleazar de Carvalho, the eminent Brazilian conductor.

During both seasons Schermerhorn led the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center in weekly concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. At today's concert he led the symphony in Debussy's Nocturnes I and II.

In addition to the awards announced today, 18 awards and scholarships made at the beginning of the season have enabled young musicians to come to the Music Center for the 1956 session.

Second Thoughts On Music

Foss' Opera 'Griffelkin' Presented at Tanglewood

German Fairy Story Set to Music Has Imaginative Stage Settings; Rudolf Serkin Soloist in Schumann Works; DeCarvalho Conducts

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 11—The performance of the opera "Griffelkin" by Lukas Foss was the principal item of general interest at the Berkshire Festival this past week. The opera, written initially for TV, was given its first stage performance under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, director of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department.

"Griffelkin" is a little German fairy story dealing with a young devil who was sent from Hell to earth for 24 hours. During that time he does a deal of mischief but while doing it he falls in love, does a kind deed and so invites the wrath of the other devils. He is tried by them and sentenced to return to earth as a human, a little boy.

Setting Imaginative

Mr. Foss' music sounds deceptively easy, but it is very difficult. The student orchestra under his direction played very well and the cast contained some of the best voices in the department. Petite Mildred Allen was Griffelkin and a very fine one. The opera was sung in English, but although the music has sparkle and grace most of the time, the tessitura lies high and words were difficult to understand.

Interest therefore lay in the action which Mr. Goldovsky had devised with a wealth of imagination and ingenuity. The settings were also imaginative, particularly in the first act which revealed Hell's Nursery. Smoke and flames came from below and it was all quite fearsome.

The opera seems particularly designed for children, even though that was not Mr. Foss' intent. Whether it will have other performances in this country remains to be seen. It is too difficult for the average Opera Workshop and not of a stature to be effective in the large opera houses. Studying this work must have been extremely interesting for the students, but, in the long run, would it not have been preferable to study works they might later use. However, the spirit of the Berkshire Music Center is to bring to its students the familiar, the unfamiliar and the very new.

Serkin Plays

Rudolf Serkin, pianist, paid his respects to Robert Schuman's 100th anniversary of his death by including in his chamber music recital the "Symphonic Etudes" and "Carnaval." Between these, he played with the Boston Symphony Wood Wind Quartet, Moart's "Quintet for Piano and Woodwinds." There was much very loud playing heard during the recital, for Serkin was tense and dramatic in his solo works.

However, one seldom hears more beautifully proportioned performances than he gave the Schumann works. In the Mozart Quintet he was at ease and evidently enjoying himself. The five musicians gave a performance that it would be difficult to equal. This work and the "Carnaval" were the highlights of the recital. The latter was played with imagination and charm, elegantly phrased and dynamically satisfying.

Shed Concerts

Eleazar de Carvalho, the Brazilian conductor and former pupil of Serge Koussevitzky, has had a fine success here this season. His work with the student orchestra has been commendable and last week he conducted the Boston orchestra in a well chosen and well studied program. It opened with "La Kermesse" from the ballet of that name by the French composer Barraud and this was followed by dances from "The Three Cornered Hat" by de Falla; Ravel's piano concerto and Stravinsky's "Petrouchka." Soloist in the concerto was his wife, Jocy de Livera, a handsome young woman with nimble fingers and fine rhythmic sense.

Unfortunately she did not have the strength to cut through the heavy accompaniment of the orchestra and the concerto therefore lacked forcefulness. Mr. de Carvalho was particularly successful in his reading of the three dances from "The Three Cornered Hat." The performance was vital, highly colored and rhythically exciting. These characteristics were also noted in his reading of "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky.

The annual commemorative concert for Serge Koussevitzky was led by Leonard Bernstein his favorite pupil and protege. Mr. Bernstein had chosen two works long associated with the founder of the Berkshire Music Festival, the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's "Mass in C minor" and Prokofieffs fifth symphony, which Koussevitzky introduced in this country. Soloists in the mass were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto and John McCollum, tenor. They sang well under Bernstein's inspired direction.

The Festival Chorus gave fine account of the music and the orchestra played its best for Bernstein. It was evident that Bernstein had given much thought to the interpretation of the Prokofieff symphony, perhaps his best. It was handsomely proportioned, vivid in color and rhythmically strong.

Charles Munch returned to the podium last Sunday, opening his program with a "Symphonic Ode" by Aaron Copland. Written for the 50th anniversary of the Boston Symphony, it had been revised for the 75th anniversary. To the average listener it must have sounded like a study in heroics. It is highly theatrical, but it says little.

Zino Francescatti gave a magnificent account of Tchaikowsky's violin concerto. His large, warm tone and technical facility combined to sweep away all difficulties. It was a first rank performance in which he was ably abetted by Mr. Munch and the orchestra. Another tribute to Schumann was the performance of his Symphony No. 2 in C major. It was a most admirable performance. Mr. Munch retained much of the grade and delicacy of the music, but invested it with a blood and muscle. At its close the audience gave the participants a standing ovation, something rather rare here.

Scholarship Winner

Kenneth Schermerhorn (right) of Schenectady, N. Y., is the winner this year of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship awarded to the outstanding conductor who is studying at the Music Center. Mr. Schermerhorn is shown with Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky (center) and Eleazar de Carvalho (left), the noted Brazilian conductor who is head of the student orchestra this summer.

[26?—

SCOUTING the prairie at Tanglewood for signs of Indians, this small boy probably feels disappointed at seeing only music lovers in his binoculars.

THE END of concert approaching, a patron of the lawn at Tanglewood starts picking up his blanket. A blanket is standard equipment for lawn listeners.

TANGLED at Tanglewood, these knees make a composition more suggestive of a wrestling match than a concert. Nevertheless, their owners are undoubtedly true music lovers who have never wrestled with anybody. The composition also illustrates the current great popularity of shorts.

TOUCHING UP with powder and compact, a Tanglewood-goer executes the job in the comfort of a folding chair. It is interesting to observe the little things that people do while listening to music.

APRIL 2, 1

Here ... WORKS SET ... GLEWOOD

... 75th ...

... by ... orchestra ... versary ... festival this season will be per... orchestra's ... Berkshire Music ... festival next ... summer.

The Berkshire ... festival, at ... Tanglewood, near ... Mass., ... will be held Friday ... Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 to ... 12.

The commissioned works to be heard are Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra, No. ... "Elegy ... Stravinsky's "Symphonie Funebre et Triomphale" and Koussevitzky's ... phonic Ode ... Symphony.

Seven of the ... will be conducted ... Charles ... Munch, ... Bernstein, ... Monteux, ... Goldovsky ... Sanzogno.

... Trio, ... Quintet, ... Club, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists; Boris Goldovsky and Lukas Foss, pianists; Margaret Harshaw and Mr. Serkin.

... David Lloyd tenor, ... appearing in ... Messiah" ... Mass.; Margaret ... Albert Da... Pease, ... pro... will ... con... ween ... age to ... man, ... ering ... Trio, ... Brass Quintet, ... Club, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists; Boris Goldovsky and Lukas Foss, pianists; Margaret Harshaw and Mr. Serkin.

... Adolf ... mann ... sett, ... Violin ... veira, ... Con... tti and ... be heard in ... Brahms Concerto for Violin ... Cello ... Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 221,954
APR 29 1956

'Secret Marriage' Is Civic MM '56 Opera

With word of cancellation of the Charles L. Wagner Company tour, due to Mr. Wagner's passing, Civic Morning Musicals, Inc., announces booking of the Goldovsky Opera Theater in "The Secret Marriage" for the night of Dec. 3 next in Central High School. The opera, regarded among the finest examples of Italian comic opera, is Domenico Cimarosa's masterpiece. It will be sung in English, and will be directed by Boris Goldovsky. The latter, known as the dean of commentators for Metropolitan Opera News on the Air from fall to spring on Saturday afternoons, as for his opera direction in the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., summers, also is an author and lecturer-pianist.

"The Goldovsky Opera Theater has no "star" system, as such. Instead, the young singers, American-trained, are indistinguishable singing-actors in closely-knit ensembles. The texts of the operas are translated in a manner to appeal to intelligent audiences and the plots have what is known as heightened dramatic validity. The new production of the Cimarosa opera features the new English version by Boris Goldovsky with settings by Barbara Lawthers and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

Sunday, June 17, has been designated as "Angel Night" at Finger Lakes Lyric Circus by Producer Walter Davis. At this performance, the public, press and Lyric Circus "angels" will have first opportunity to view the latest of Rodgers and Hammerstein's musicals, "The King and I," in the Lyric's new red and white tent near Skaneateles.

The fifth anniversary season will open in the Lyric on June 26 with a sold-out performance of "The King and I" for the benefit of the Khwanis Club of ... Geddes. This marks the ... year in a row for such a ... attraction, ... by R. & ... on the best-selling novel ... Anna and the ... of Siam" ... described as ... original and beautiful excursion into the rich splendors of the Far East."

Among the ... in addition to ... Ballet, ... a Happy Tune," ... Lovers," "We Kiss ... dow," "Something Wonderful" and "Getting to Know You."

The Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood, Mass., from July 2 to August 12 in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi will serve as guest teacher of composition.

Blackwell, Okla.
Journal-Tribune

May 15, 1956

Receives Scholarship In Tanglewood Center

TONKAWA — Jack Ratterree, Tonkawa student at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, Pa., has received a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., according to word received here by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ratterree, ... West Grand.

The ... center is a ... week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra. It was established in 1940 to provide a place where young ... could add to their ... training under guidance of eminent musicians and teachers and provide for the study of music through experience in actual performance on an advanced level.

Ratterree will attend the camp July 2 to Aug. 12. He plans to work in Philadelphia until July and return to Tonkawa after camp for the remainder of the summer.

FORT WAYNE, IND.
NEWS-SENTINEL
Circ. D. 75,970
MAY 25 1956

Petrassi Guest Teacher

Goffredo Petrassi, one of the foremost of living Italian composers, will be guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. The center is the ... central school of the Boston Symphony and will open at Tanglewood, Mass., July 2 and run through to Aug. 12. It is connected with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival summer concerts.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
Circ. D. 190,893 - S. 197,563
MAY 29 1956

TV Opera Having Stage Premiere

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass. — Lukas Foss "Griffelkin," an opera commissioned by NBC-TV and telecast last November by that network, will receive its premiere as a complete stage performance as the major opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, ... er. ... be performed ... 7, will be ... poser, who ... member ... ent of ... and ... head

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751
JUN 3 1956

Festival Ending, Another to Start

The Mozart Festival at the American Shakespeare Festival Theatre in Stratford, Conn., winds up today with two performances, matinee and evening, of the Coronation Mass and Masonic Music by the Symphony of the Air and a 90-voice ... Tickets for this summer's Berkshire Festival go on sale tomorrow at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. ... Free piano recitals will be given this week at Steinway Hall by Emily McLees on Tuesday evening and Allen Brown on Friday evening.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Citizen ...

YONKERS, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 7,252
AUG 17 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Lists Programs

The Berkshire Festival, du... July and August this summer at Lenox, Mass., will ... feature any composer or period to the degree which ... sometimes been the case in the past.

Instead, the Boston ... under the aegis of its conductor, Charles M... offering six weeks of m... in Tanglewood. Opening ... includes the old and ... has Tuesday, July 20, with ... the popular and the u... on the podium and the ... and several works ... Second Symphony as ... chorus and orchestra.

Though the or... classical c... will precede: The first act of ... Wagner's "Die Walkuere" will be ... Saturday night, July 21, ... Miss Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, baritone, as soloists. Monteux leads the final event of the week, July 22, with Schubert's Seventh Symphony and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra as the major works.

Further discussion of ... programs will appear in a subsequent article.

The first ... of ... will ... Berkshire ... Goldovsky, ... Sanzogno. ... Trio, ... Brass Quintet, ... Club, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists; Boris Goldovsky, pianist-conductor. Two Bach concerts will be climaxed Sunday, July 15, with the "Passion According to St. John."

The following four weeks will offer the Boston Symphony, playing in the 6,000-seat music shed with conductors Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Eleazare de Carvalho and Richard ... Miss Harshaw and Mr. Serkin.

As most music lovers, however, can't arrange their schedules to drive to Tanglewood in the middle of the week, the orchestral concerts provide the major interest.

During the initial two weeks, these also will take place in the smaller hall. Opening night will offer a Mozart Concert with Benny Goodman as soloist in the Clarinet Concerto. Saturday night, July 7, the Martinu "Military Mass," will be heard along with more Mozart. Sunday afternoon, July 8, has music by Haydn, Ives, Haieff and Bach. The following week-end includes one all-Mozart concert with Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists, and Boris Goldovsky, pianist-conductor. Two Bach concerts will be climaxed Sunday, July 15, with the "Passion According to St. John."

The following four weeks will offer the Boston Symphony, playing in the 6,000-seat music shed with conductors Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Eleazare de Carvalho and Richard ... Miss Harshaw and Mr. Serkin.

As most music lovers, however, can't arrange their schedules to drive to Tanglewood in the middle of the week, the orchestral concerts provide the major interest.

During the initial two weeks, these also will take place in the smaller hall. Opening night will offer a Mozart Concert with Benny Goodman as soloist in the Clarinet Concerto. Saturday night, July 7, the Martinu "Military Mass," will be heard along with more Mozart. Sunday afternoon, July 8, has music by Haydn, Ives, Haieff and Bach. The following week-end includes one all-Mozart concert with Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists, and Boris Goldovsky, pianist-conductor. Two Bach concerts will be climaxed Sunday, July 15, with the "Passion According to St. John."

The following four weeks will offer the Boston Symphony, playing in the 6,000-seat music shed with conductors Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Eleazare de Carvalho and Richard ... Miss Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, baritone, as soloists. Monteux leads the final event of the week, July 22, with Schubert's Seventh Symphony and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra as the major works.

Further discussion of the programs will appear in a subsequent article.

[263]

'Make Mine Music'

The first paragraph of a new column can lose or gain future readers. It should be designed to attract attention and not be cluttered with the weight, shape and shirt size of the author. Hence, the first and only insight to myself I shall expose upon you is my devotion to music. With that introduction I begin.

SPECIAL NOTES: Regular features of this column will include record recommendations . . . Next time, part I of "A History Of Jazz" . . . News a bout classical music, jazz, rock n' roll and pope . . . musical events around town . . . any comments, criticisms, or suggestions will be gratefully appreciated

MUSIC FESTIVALS: Planning a vacation? If you are going to be in the Lenox, Mass. area it's worth a trip to the Berkshire Festival. Four weeks of classical programs extend into the middle of August . . . N. Y. City's Central Park offers a pleasant evening Band Concert, yours for the taking, Sundays at 8:30 P.M. . . . August 24th and 25th is the date for a Jazz Festival at Randall's Island Stadium.

RADIO?? Remember when the family gathered around the radio for the evening's entertainment? On a recommendation of a fellow jazz fan I tuned in to Bandstand U. S. A. (WOR, SATURDAY, 8:00 P.M.) and enjoyed hearing remote (live) performances from Boston, New York and New Jersey of such famous jazz names as Count ... Gerry Mulligan, The Modern Jazz Quartet, vocalist Eydye Gorme, Steve Gibson and the Red Caps, West Coast's Jimmy Guiuffre and Buddy Morrow. I didn't even touch my TV dial during the show which is split into two one hour segments.

HEARD THROUGH A TIN EAR: Classical — "Shubert's" Trout Quintet in A Major; Quartet in E Major, Op. 125; Quartet in C Minor, Op. Posthumous (12" Chamber Music Society CM-3) Chamber Music lovers will enjoy the combination of an excellent high fidelity recording coupled with a top performance of the Winterhalter string quartet . . .

New England N...
Box 2078, Boston ...
Berkshi...
GT. BARRI...
Weekly ...
Circ...
JUN 7

Tanglew... Opera's ... Lukas Foss ... Own ...

Work Commissio... Telecast Last ... Presented A... Based on ... Folk Tale.

Lukas Foss' "T... commissioned by ... cast last Novemb... will receive its ... complete ... major opera ... Department ... Center at T... summer. T... performed ... evenings. A... ducted by ... serves as a ... compo... ahire ... Boris ... depar... musi... phon... its ...

Platter' Now Obtai...

Music is about to rec... ent announcements you ... or your attention along ... fores. And the name of ... is popular with shoppers ... ind Chase and Sanborn.

The introduction of a ... rade was made last ... Paris International Music ... platters in a planned series ... the "Sleeping Beauty" ba... "Unfinished Symphony," ... to be purchasable each we... everything from rock and ...

Dr. Spaeth headed a ... selection for the new low ... "world's greatest music" ... chestras and artists. He ... the record jackets, includi... cha cha items. In explaini... roll recordings, Dr. Spaeth ... mensely popular type of ... comic books, western films ...

Times

APRIL 2, 19[illegible]

Here

NEW WORKS SET FOR TANGLEWOOD

[illegible] 75th

Year [illegible] Symphony

[illegible] festival this season will be performed [illegible] orchestra's Berkshire Music Festival next summer.

The Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will be held Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 29 to Aug. 12.

The commissioned works to be heard are Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra, No. [illegible] Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," Copland's "Symphonic Ode" and Piston's Sixth Symphony.

Seven of the [illegible] concerts will be conducted by Charles Munch, musical [illegible] of the [illegible] Symphony [illegible] concerts, [illegible] Leonard Bernstein, [illegible] Adolf Piano Concerto, [illegible] Rosselit, playing the Hindemith Violin Concerto, and Jose [illegible] Oliveira, playing the [illegible] Concerto. [illegible] Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes will be heard in the Brahms Concerto for Violin and 'Cello.

Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and David Lloyd, tenor, will sing in Mozart's "Mass in C Minor." Margaret Hillquer and Margaret Harshaw, sopranos; Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass, will appear in two programs of excerpts.

Chamber music [illegible] will be presented in the theatre concert hall at Tanglewood between July [illegible] and Aug. [illegible]. Those to appear [illegible] Gleason, clarinetist; the Koss String Quartet, the [illegible] Arts Trio, the Boston [illegible] Brass Ensemble, the [illegible] Edwind Quintet, the [illegible] Club, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists; Boris Goldovsky and Lukas Foss, pianists, Miss Harshaw and Mr. Serkin.

K

W

Se ne
of tw
De tic

St
de
Ke
ah
gr

Ja

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 - S. 247,755
MAY 27 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Lists Programs

The Berkshire Festival, during July and August this summer at Lenox, Mass., will not feature any composer or period to the degree which has sometimes been the case in the past.

Instead, the Boston Symphony, under the aegis of its conductor, Charles Munch, is offering six weeks of music which includes the old and the new, the popular and the unknown, and several works featuring chorus and orchestra.

Though the orchestral concerts open Friday night, July 6, the formal opening of the festival at its Tanglewood estate, two miles from Lenox, and approximately four hours from New York by car, is July 4. The latter date raises the curtain on six chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert hall, seating something over a thousand. On this occasion the Kroll Quartet will play music by Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven. Successive events, all on Wednesday evenings, will include Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet; Margaret Harshaw in the "Wesendonck Lieder" by Wagner; and Rudolf Serkin, pianist.

As most music lovers, however, can't arrange their schedules to drive to Tanglewood in the middle of the week, the orchestral concerts provide the major interest.

During the initial two weeks, these also will take place in the smaller hall. Opening night will offer a Mozart Concert with Benny Goodman as soloist in the Clarinet Concerto. Saturday night, July 7, the Martinu "Military Mass," will be heard along with more Mozart, Sunday afternoon, July 8, has music by Haydn, Ives, Haieff and Bach. The following week-end includes one all-Mozart concert with Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists, and Boris Goldovsky, pianist-conductor. Two Bach concerts will be climaxed Sunday, July 15, with the "Passion According to St. John."

The following four weeks will offer the Boston Symphony, playing in the 6,000-seat music shed with conductors Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Eleazare de Carvalho and Richard Burgin in charge. Opening night will be Friday, July 20, with Munch on the podium and the Brahms Second Symphony as the major work. Shorter pieces by Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel will precede. The first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" will be heard Saturday night, July 21, with Miss Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, baritone, as soloists. Monteux leads the final event of the week, July 22, with Schubert's Seventh Symphony and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra as the major works.

Further discussion of later programs will appear in a subsequent article.

[263]

FORT WAYNE, IND.
NEWS-SENTINEL
Circ. D. 75,970
MAY 25 1956

Petrassi Guest Teacher

Goffredo Petrassi, one of the foremost of living Italian composers, will be guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. The center is the orchestral school of the Boston Symphony and will open at Tanglewood, Mass., July 2 and run through to Aug. 12. It is connected with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival summer concerts.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 221,954
APR 29 1956

'Secret Marriage' Is Civic MM '56 Opera

With word of cancellation of the Charles L. Wagner Opera Company tour, due to Mr. Wagner's passing, Civic Morning Musicals, Inc. announces booking of the Goldovsky Opera Theater in "The Secret Marriage" for the night of Dec. 3 next in Central High School. The opera, regarded among the finest examples of Italian comic opera, is Domenico Cimarosa's masterpiece. It will be sung in English, and will be directed by Boris Goldovsky. The latter, known as the master of ceremonies for Metropolitan Opera News on the Air from fall to spring on Saturday afternoons, as for his opera direction in the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. summers, also is an author and lecturer-pianist.

The Goldovsky Opera Theater has no "star" system, as such. Instead, the young performers, American-trained, are indispensable singing-actors in closely-knit ensembles. The texts of the operas are translated in a manner to appeal to intelligent audiences and the plots have what is known as heightened dramatic validity. The new production of the Cimarosa opera features the new English version by Boris Goldovsky with settings by Barbara Lawthers and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

Sunday, June 17, has been designated as "Angel Night" at Finger Lakes Lyric Circus by Producer Walter Davis. At this performance, the public, press and Lyric Circus "angels" will have first opportunity to view the latest of Rodgers and Hammerstein's musicals, "The King and I," in the Lyric's new red and blue Tent near Skaneateles.

The fifth anniversary season will open in the Lyric on June 16 with a sold-out performance of "The King and I" for the benefit of the Kiwanis Club of Solvay-Geddes. This marks the second year in a row for such a benefit.

The attraction, based by R & H on the best-selling novel "Anna and the King of Siam" is described as "an original and beautiful excursion into the rich splendors of the Far East." Among the tunes in addition to a ballet, are "Shall We a Happy Tune," "[illegible]ing Lovers," "We Kiss [illegible]adow," "Something Wonderful" and "Getting to Know You."

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
Circ. D. 190,893 - S. 197,563
MAY 29 1956

TV Opera Having Stage Premiere

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass. — Lukas Foss "Griffelkin," an opera commissioned by NBC-TV and telecast last November by that network, will receive its premiere as a complete stage performance as the major opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center as Tanglewood, [illegible]er.

[illegible]ll be per- [illegible] 7, will be [illegible]oser, who [illegible] member [illegible]ient of [illegible]r, and [illegible], head

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Citizen (e)
YONKERS, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 7,252
AUG 17 1956

'Make Mine Music'

The first paragraph of a new column can lose or gain future readers. It should be designed to attract attention and not be cluttered with the weight, shape and shirt size of the author. Hence, the first and only insight to myself I shall expose upon you is my devotion to music. With that introduction I begin.

SPECIAL NOTES: Regular features of this column will include record recommendations . . . Next time, part I of "A History Of Jazz" . . . News a bout classical music, jazz, rock n' roll and pops . . . musical events around town . . . any comments, criticisms, or suggestions will be gratefully appreciated

MUSIC FESTIVALS: Planning a vacation? If you are going to be in the Lenox, Mass. area it's worth a trip to the Berkshire Festival. Four weeks of classical programs extend into the middle of August . . . N. Y. City's Central Park offers a pleasant evening Band Concert, yours for the taking, Sundays at 8:30 P.M. . . . August 24th and 25th is the date for a Jazz Festival at Randall's Island Stadium.

RADIO?? Remember when the family gathered around the radio for the evening's entertainment? On a recommendation of a fellow jazz fan I tuned in to Bandstand U. S. A. (WOR, SATURDAY, 8:00 P.M.) and enjoyed hearing remote (live) performances from Boston, New York and New Jersey of such famous jazz names as Count [illegible], Gerry Mulligan, The Modern Jazz Quartet, vocalist Eydye Gorme, Steve Gibson and the Red Caps. West Coast's Jimmy Guiuffre and Buddy Morrow. I didn't even touch my TV dial during the show which is split into two one hour segments.

HEARD THROUGH A TIN EAR: Classical — "Shubert's" Trout Quintet in A Major; Quartet in E Major, Op. 125; Quartet in C Minor, Op. Posthumous (12" Chamber Music Society CM-3) Chamber Music lovers will enjoy the combination of an excellent high fidelity recording coupled with a top performance of the Winterhalter string quartet . . .

THE ETUDE
BOSTON
MAY 1956

The Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood, Mass., from July 2 to August 12 in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi will serve as guest teacher of composition.

Muskogee, Okla.
Journal-Tribune
May 15, 1956

Receives Scholarship In Tanglewood Center

TONKAWA — Jack Ratterree, Tonkawa student at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, Pa., has received a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., according to word received here by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ratterree, 301 West Grand.

The music center is a six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra. It was established in 1940 to provide a place where young musicians could add to their professional training under guidance of eminent musicians and teachers and provide for the study of music through experience in actual performance on an advanced level.

Ratterree will attent the camp July 2 to Aug. 12. He plans to work in Philadelphia until July and return to Tonkawa after camp for the remainder of the summer.

JUN 3 1956

Festival Ending, Another to Start

The Mozart Festival at the American Shakespeare Festival Theatre in Stratford, Conn., winds up today with two performances, matinee and evening, of the Coronation Mass and Masonic Music by the Symphony of the Air and a 90-voice chorus. . . . Tickets for this summer's Berkshire Festival go on sale tomorrow at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. . . . Free piano recitals will be given this week at Steinway Hall by Emily McLees on Tuesday evening and Allen Brown on Friday evening.

New England Nev
Box 2078, Boston
Berkshir
GT. BARRI
Weekly
Circ.
JUN 7

Tanglew Opera's

Lukas Foss W Own "

Work Commissio
Telecast Las
Presented An
Based on Lit
Folk Tale.

Lukas Foss' "G commissioned by cast last Novembe will receive its wo complete stage pe major opera produ Department of the Center at Tanglew summer. They ope performed on Mon evenings, August 6 ducted by the co serves as a faculty composition departm shire Music Center, Boris Goldovsky, h department of this music maintained by phony Orchestra in its concerts at the B

The opera, in three poser's largest stag It is based on a litt folk tale which the heard from his moth seven and promptly at the age of eight. years later Foss aga same story, writing asking the British po teacher of English Sarah Lawrence Col to write a rhymed poser writes that th correspondence [illegible] various drafts of th was a wonder-ful not have a single arg met a year later!) contemplating [illegible]

"Griffelkin," in the composer, "is the story out into the world to mischief and [illegible] world to hell. When h world, he sees for the blue sky. This is his f In the course of this d many things human, mother with her childr discovery he becomes human: learns, even Finally, just before mi mits a good deed, and of the clock finds hims by his hell companions trial for committing Griffelkin is expelled ends as a mortal: as little human.

This, the composer's is scheduled for Euro tions in Stuttgart, Berl lation after the Tanglew ances. As has been the past productions of th Music Center, admission Griffelkin" performances Special tickets available members of the Society the Berkshire Music Ce prompt organization set tax donations to the sc untary contribution cons bership in the Friends, w numbered [illegible] individua ing $46,094.

Platter' Now Obtai

Music is about to bec ent announcement. You or your attention along tores. And the name o is popular with shoppers and Chase and Sanborn!

The introduction of a rade was made last wee Paris International Music platters in a planned serie the "Sleeping Beauty" b "Unfinished Symphony," to be purchasable each w everything from rock and

Dr. Spaeth headed a selection for the new lo "world's greatest music" chestras and artists. He the record jackets, includi cha cha items. In explain roll recordings, Dr. Spaet mensely popular type of comic books, western films

Times

APRIL 2, 19

Here

4 NEW WORKS SET FOR TANGLEWOOD

75th

Year of Boston Symphony

Four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during its 75th anniversary festival this season will be performed again at the orchestra's Berkshire Music Festival next summer.

The Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, Beartown, Mass., will be held Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 to [illegible].

The commissioned works to be heard are Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra, No. 2; Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," Copland's "Symphonic Ode," and Piston's Sixth Symphony.

Seven of the twelve concerts will be conducted by Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Soloists [illegible] Adolf Busch, violinist; Rudolf Serkin, pianist; Rosalyn Tureck, pianist playing the Bach Concerto for Violin, Flute, Piano and Orchestra; Jean Pierre Rampal, flutist, and Alexander Schneider, violinist, playing the Bach Concerto for Two Violins; Alexander Hilsberg, violinist, playing the Vivaldi Concerto for Violin and Oboe; Jacob Lateiner, pianist, playing the Mozart Concerto for Two Pianos; Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes, who will be heard in the Brahms Concerto for Violin and 'Cello.

Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and David Lloyd, tenor, will sing in Mozart's C Minor Mass. Margaret [illegible], Phyllis Curtin and Margaret Harshaw, sopranos; Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass, will appear in two program excerpts.

Chamber music programs will be presented during the season concert hall at Tanglewood between July [illegible] and Aug. 4. Those to appear [illegible] Goodman, clarinetist; the Boston String Quartet, the Arts Trio, the Boston Symphony Brass Ensemble, a woodwind Quintet, the Fine Arts Club, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists; Boris Goldovsky and Lukas Foss, pianists, Miss Harshaw and Mr. Serkin.

K

W

Se
ne
of tw
De
tic

St
de
Ke
ah
gr

Ja

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 - S. 247,755

MAY 27 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Lists Programs

The Berkshire Festival, during July and August this summer at Lenox, Mass., will not feature any composer or period to the degree which has sometimes been the case in the past.

Instead, the Boston Symphony, under the baton of its conductor, Charles Munch, is offering six weeks of music which includes the old and the new, the popular and the unknown, and several works featuring chorus and orchestra.

Though the orchestral concerts open Friday night, July 6, the formal opening of the festival at its Tanglewood estate, two miles from Lenox, and approximately four hours from New York by car, is July 4. The latter date raises the curtain on six chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert hall, seating something over a thousand. On this occasion the Kroll Quartet will play music by Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven. Successive events, all on Wednesday evenings, will include Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet; Margaret Harshaw in the "Wesendonck Lieder" by Wagner; and Rudolf Serkin, pianist.

As most music lovers, however, can't arrange their schedules to drive to Tanglewood in the middle of the week, the orchestral concerts provide the major interest.

During the initial two weeks, these also will take place in the smaller hall. Opening night will offer a Mozart Concert with Benny Goodman as soloist in the Clarinet Concerto. Saturday night, July 7, the Martinu "Military Mass," will be heard along with more Mozart. Sunday afternoon, July 8, has music by Haydn, Ives, Haieff and Bach. The following week-end includes one all-Mozart concert with Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists, and Boris Goldovsky, pianist-conductor. Two Bach concerts will be climaxed Sunday, July 15, with the "Passion According to St. John."

The following four weeks will offer the Boston Symphony, playing in the 6,000-seat music shed with conductors Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Eleazare de Carvalho and Richard Burgin in charge. Opening night will be Friday, July 20, with Munch on the podium and the Brahms Second Symphony as the major work. Shorter pieces by Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel will precede. The first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" will be heard Saturday night, July 21, with Miss Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, baritone, as soloists. Monteux leads the final event of the week, July 22, with Schubert's Seventh Symphony and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra as the major works.

Further discussion of later programs will appear in a subsequent article.

FORT WAYNE, IND.
NEWS-SENTINEL
Circ. D. 75,970

MAY 25 1956

Petrassi Guest Teacher

Goffredo Petrassi, one of the foremost of living Italian composers, will be guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. The center is the orchestral school of the Boston Symphony and will open at Tanglewood, Mass., July 2 and run through to Aug. 12. It is connected with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival summer concerts.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 221,954

APR 29 1956

'Secret Marriage' Is Civic MM '56 Opera

With word of cancellation of the Charles L. Wagner Opera Company tour, due to Mr. Wagner's passing, Civic Morning Musicals, Inc. announces booking of the Goldovsky Opera Theater in "The Secret Marriage" for the night of Dec. 3 next in Central High School. The opera, regarded among the finest examples of Italian comic opera, is Domenico Cimarosa's masterpiece. It will be sung in English, and will be directed by Boris Goldovsky. The latter, known as the master of ceremonies for Metropolitan Opera News on the Air from fall to spring on Saturday afternoons, as for his opera direction in the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. summers, also is an author and lecturer-pianist.

The Goldovsky Opera Theater has no "star" system, as such. Instead, the young performers, American-trained, are indispensable singing-actors in closely-knit ensembles. The texts of the operas are translated in a manner to appeal to intelligent audiences and the plots have what is known as heightened dramatic validity. The new production of the Cimarosa opera features the new English version by Boris Goldovsky with settings by Barbara Lawthers and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

Sunday, June 17, has been designated as "Angel Night" at Finger Lakes Lyric Circus by Producer Walter Davis. At this performance, the public, press and Lyric Circus "angels" will have first opportunity to view the latest of Rodgers and Hammerstein's musicals, 'The King and I," in the Lyric's new red and blue Tent near Skaneateles.

The fifth anniversary season will open in the Lyric on June 16 with a sold-out performance of "The King and I" for the benefit of the Kiwanis Club of Syvar-Geddes. This marks the second year in a row for such a benefit.

The attraction, based by R & H on the best-selling novel "Anna and the King of Siam" is described as "an original and beautiful excursion into the rich splendors of the Far East." Among the tunes, in addition to a ballet, are "Whistle a Happy Tune," "Shall We Dance," "We Kiss in a Shadow," "Something Wonderful" and "Getting to Know You."

THE ETUDE
BRYN MAWR, PA.

MAY 1956

The Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood, Mass., from July 2 to August 12 in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi will serve as guest teacher of composition.

Blackwell, Okla.
Journal-Tribune

Mar 15, 1956

Receives Scholarship In Tanglewood Center

TONKAWA — Jack Ratterree, Tonkawa student at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, Pa., has received a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., according to word received here by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ratterree, 301 West Grand.

The music center is a six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra. It was established in 1940 to provide a place where young musicians could add to their professional training under guidance of eminent musicians and teachers and provide for the study of music through experience in actual performance on an advanced level.

Ratterree will attent the camp July 2 to Aug. 12. He plans to work in Philadelphia until July and return to Tonkawa after camp for the remainder of the summer.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
Circ. D. 190,893 - S. 197,563

MAY 29 1956

TV Opera Having Stage Premiere

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass. — Lukas Foss "Griffelkin," an opera commissioned by NBC-TV and telecast last November by that network, will receive its premiere as a complete stage performance as the major opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center as Tanglewood, [illegible]er.

[illegible]ll be per- [illegible] 7, will be [illegible]poser, who [illegible]y member [illegible]artment of [illegible]enter, and [illegible]rsky, head

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

JUN 7 1956

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751

JUN 3 1956

Festival Ending, Another to Start

The Mozart Festival at the American Shakespeare Festival Theatre in Stratford, Conn., winds up today with two performances, matinee and evening, of the Coronation Mass and Masonic Music by the Symphony of the Air and a 90-voice chorus. . . . Tickets for this summer's Berkshire Festival go on sale tomorrow at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. . . . Free piano recitals will be given this week at Steinway Hall by Emily McLees on Tuesday evening and Allen Brown on Friday evening.

Weekend Traveler

(Prepared by the Conn. Motor Club, AAA)

TANGLEWOOD

This suggestion involves a pleasant trip of 46 miles from Winsted to a spot with literary and musical overtones, Tanglewood in the Berkshires. Here the Boston Symphony appears every summer in a series of concerts.

The first part of the trip is to Canaan in the northwest corner of the state at the junction of U. S. Route 7 and 44.

Twelve miles north on U. S. Route 7 is Great Barrington, a summer and winter vacation resort center. Just before entering the town the party passes the fair grounds where the annual fair in September is one of the state's biggest.

A few miles beyond town Route 183 angles off to the left. After a few more miles Route 183 crosses Route 102 and curves around a beautiful lake known as the Stockbridge bowl, about three miles out of Lenox. Now the group approaches the Dixey estate, the site of the Berkshire music festival and the location of the little red house in which Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote his famous book, "The House of the Seven Gables," as well as his "Tanglewood Tales."

On this estate, now owned by the Boston Symphony is the music shed where the concerts are given. Two types of accommodations are available. Some prefer to be in the music shed itself, closer to the music and seated, and many like the beautiful grounds outside where they loll at ease or even walk around if it pleases them.

A visit offers an entertaining spectacle, even in addition to the music. Those who prefer to be outside the shed present an amazing contrast in costumes covering almost the entire field of attire. The first-time visitor is apt to get the impression that this is a giant "come as you are" party where everyone arrives garbed as they were when the invitation was received.

The view of the grounds is close to spectacular and the visitor might be advised to attend the concert, picnic on the grounds after it, and then take a short tour. The formal garden is a must on the list.

Leaving, the party heads into Lenox and then south on U. S. 20 for a dozen miles to Becket, where U. S. 20 cuts east, but the party heads south on Route 8. About 13 miles from here near New Boston is a view of Hanging mountain, a perpendicular cliff about 300 feet high. Jutting out above the base are masses of rock that appear ready to plunge into the Farmington river. Fragments loosened by the rain and frost do sometimes come crashing down with tremendous force.

Route 8 continues south, passing through Winsted, Torrington, Waterbury and [illegible] before ending in Bridgeport. Enroute it is crossed by U. S. Route 6 leading to Danbury and Route 63 that runs to New Haven.

[263]

New England N
Box 2078, Boston
Berkshir
GT. BARRI
Weekly
Circ

JUN 7

Tanglew
Opera's
Lukas Foss
Own "
Work Commissio
Telecast Las
Presented Au
Based on Lit
Folk Tale.

Lukas Foss' "G
commissioned by cast last Novembe will receive its wo complete stage pe
major opera produ
Department of the Center at Tanglew
summer. The ope performed on Mon
evenings, August 6
ducted by the co
serves as a faculty
composition depart
shire Music Center,
Boris Goldovsky, h
department of this music maintained by phony Orchestra in its concerts at the B

The opera, in three poser's largest stag
It is based on a litt
folk tale which th
heard from his moth
seven and promptly
at the age of eight,
years later Foss sa
same story, writing asking the British po
teacher of English
Sarah Lawrence Col
to write a thymed
poser writes that in correspondence of various drafts of th
was a wonderful boo
not have a single sug met a year later!)
contemplating more

"Griffelkin," the composer, "is the stor
out into the world to mischief and [illegible] world to hell. When h works, he sees for the blue sky. This is his
In the course of this d
many things human,
mother with her childr discovery, he becomes human: learns, even
Finally, just before mi
mits a good deed, and of the clock finds hims
by his hell companion
trial for committing
Griffelkin is expelled
ends as a mortal as little human.

This, the composer's is scheduled for Euro tions in Stuttgart, Berl soon after the Tanglew ends. As has been the first productions of t
Music Center, admission
felkin" performances
special tickets available
members of the Society
the Berkshire Music C
nonprofit organization set are donations to the s untary contribution cons berships to the Friends, w numbered [illegible] individua
ing $46,094.

Platter' Now Obta

Music is about to be ent announcement. You or your attention along tores. And the name o is popular with shopper nd Chase and Sanborn!

The introduction of a
rade was made last we Paris International Musi
platters in a planned seri
the "Sleeping Beauty" b
"Unfinished Symphony,"
to be purchasable each w everything from rock and

Dr. Spaeth headed a selection for the new lo
"world's greatest music chestras and artists. He the record jackets, includ cha cha items. In explain roll recordings, Dr. Spae mensely popular type of comic books, western film

APRIL 2, 19

Here

NEW WORKS SET FOR TANGLEWOOD

75th

Music Com
Year of Boston Symphony

Four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in honor of the anniversary festival this season will be performed at the orchestra's Berkshire Music Festival next summer.

The Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be held Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 to Aug. 12.

The commissioned works to be heard are Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra, No. 3; Harrison's "Elegy In Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," Copland's "Symphonic Ode" and Piston's Sixth Symphony.

Seven of the [illegible] concerts will be conducted [illegible] Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony.

[illegible] concerts and [illegible] Carvalho, [illegible] Leonard Bernstein, [illegible] Adolf Busch, Piano concerto [illegible] Rudolf Serkin playing the Hindemith Violin Concerto, and Jose de Oliveira, pianist, playing the Piano Concerto No. [illegible] Conductors Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes will be heard in the Brahms Concerto for Violin and 'Cello.

Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and David Lloyd, tenor, will sing in Mozart's "Coronation Mass." Margaret Williams, soprano; Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass, will appear in two programs of [illegible] excerpts.

Chamber music [illegible] will be presented [illegible] the theatre concert hall at Tanglewood between July [illegible] and Aug. [illegible]. Those to appear [illegible] the Kroll String Quartet, [illegible] Arts Trio, the Boston Symphony Brass Ensemble, [illegible] Woodwind Quintet, the Tanglewood Club, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists; Boris Goldovsky and Lukas Foss, pianists, [illegible] Harshaw and Mr. Serkin.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 - S. 247,755
MAY 27 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Lists Programs

The Berkshire Festival, during July and August this summer at Lenox, Mass., will not feature any composer or period to the degree which has sometimes been the case in the past.

Instead, the Boston Symphony, under the aegis of its conductor, Charles Munch, is offering six weeks of music which includes the old and the new, the popular and the unknown, and several works including chorus and orchestra.

Though the orchestral concerts open Friday night, July 6, the formal opening of the festival at its Tanglewood estate, two miles from Lenox and approximately four hours from New York by car, is July 4. The latter date raises the curtain on six chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert hall, seating something over a thousand. On this occasion the Kroll Quartet will play music by Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven. Successive events, all on Wednesday evenings, will include Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet; Margaret Harshaw in the "Wesendonck Lieder" by Wagner; and Rudolf Serkin, pianist.

As most music lovers, however, can't arrange their schedules to drive to Tanglewood in the middle of the week, the orchestral concerts provide the major interest.

During the initial two weeks, these also will take place in the smaller hall. Opening night will offer a Mozart Concert with Benny Goodman as soloist in the Clarinet Concerto. Saturday night, July 7, the Martinu "Military Mass," will be heard along with more Mozart. Sunday afternoon, July 8, has music by Haydn, Ives, Haieff and Bach. The following week-end includes one all-Mozart concert with Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists, and Boris Goldovsky, pianist-conductor. Two Bach concerts will be climaxed Sunday, July 15, with the "Passion According to St. John."

The following four weeks will offer the Boston Symphony, playing in the 6,000-seat music shed with conductors Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Eleazare de Carvalho and Richard Burgin in charge. Opening night will be Friday, July 20, with Munch on the podium and the Brahms Second Symphony as the major work. Shorter pieces by Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel will precede. The first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" will be heard Saturday night, July 21, with Miss Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, baritone, as soloists. Monteux leads the final event of the week, July 22, with Schubert's Seventh Symphony and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra as the major works.

Further discussion of later programs will appear in a subsequent article.

FORT WAYNE, IND.
NEWS-SENTINEL
Circ. D. 75,970
MAY 25 1956

Petrassi Guest Teacher

Goffredo Petrassi, one of the foremost of living Italian composers, will be guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. The center is the orchestral school of the Boston Symphony and will open at Tanglewood, Mass., July 2 and run through to Aug. 12. It is connected with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival summer concerts.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 221,954
APR 29 1956

'Secret Marriage' Is Civic MM '56 Opera

With word of cancellation of the Charles L. Wagner Opera Company tour, due to Mr. Wagner's passing, Civic Morning Musicals, Inc. announces booking of the Goldovsky Opera Theater in "The Secret Marriage" for the night of Dec. 3 next in Central High School. The opera, regarded among the finest examples of Italian comic opera, is Domenico Cimarosa's masterpiece. It will be sung in English, and will be directed by Boris Goldovsky. The latter, known as the master of ceremonies for Metropolitan Opera News on the Air from fall to spring on Saturday afternoons, as for his opera direction in the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., summers, also is an author and lecturer-pianist.

The Goldovsky Opera Theater has no "star" system, as such. Instead, the young performers, American-trained, are indispensable singing-actors in closely-knit ensembles. The texts of the operas are translated in a manner to appeal to intelligent audiences and the plots have what is known as heightened dramatic validity. The new production of the Cimarosa opera features the new English version by Boris Goldovsky with settings by Barbara Lawthers and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

Sunday, June 17, has been designated as "Angel Night" at Finger Lakes Lyric Circus by Producer Walter Davis. At this performance, the public, press and Lyric Circus "angels" will have first opportunity to view the latest of Rodgers and Hammerstein's musicals, "The King and I," in the Lyric's new red and blue Tent near Skaneateles.

The fifth anniversary season will open in the Lyric on June 16 with a sold-out performance of "The King and I" for the benefit of the Kiwanis Club of Sally Geddes. This marks the second year in a row for such a benefit.

The attraction, based by R & H on the best-selling novel "Anna and the King of Siam" is described as "an original and beautiful excursion into the rich splendors of the Far East." Among the tunes, in addition to a ballet, are "I Whistle a Happy Tune," "Hello Young Lovers," "We Kiss in a Shadow," "Something Wonderful" and "Getting to Know You."

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
Circ. D. 190,893 - S. 197,563
MAY 29 1956

TV Opera Having Stage Premiere

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass. — Lukas Foss "Griffelkin," an opera commissioned by NBC-TV and telecast last November by that network, will receive its premiere as a complete stage performance as the major opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center as Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer.

The opera, which will be performed on August 6 and 7, will be conducted by the composer, who also serves as a faculty member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, and staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751
JUN 3 1956

Festival Ending, Another to Start

The Mozart Festival at the American Shakespeare Festival Theatre in Stratford, Conn., winds up today with two performances, matinee and evening, of the Coronation Mass and Masonic Music by the Symphony of the Air and a 90-voice chorus. . . . Tickets for this summer's Berkshire Festival go on sale tomorrow at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. . . . Free piano recitals will be given this week at Steinway Hall by Emily McLees on Tuesday evening and Allen Brown on Friday evening.

THE ETUDE
MAY 1956

The Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood, Mass., from July 2 to August 12 in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. One of Italy's foremost composers, Goffredo Petrassi will serve as guest teacher of composition.

Blackwell, Okla.
Journal-Tribune
Mar 15, 1956

Receives Scholarship In Tanglewood Center

TONKAWA — Jack Ratterree, Tonkawa student at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, Pa., has received a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., according to word received here by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ratterree, 301 West Grand.

The music center is a six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra. It was established in 1940 to provide a place where young musicians could add to their professional training under guidance of eminent musicians and teachers and provide for the study of music through experience in actual performance on an advanced level.

Ratterree will attend the camp July 2 to Aug. 12. He plans to work in Philadelphia until July and return to Tonkawa after camp for the remainder of the summer.

Traveler

nn. Motor Club, AAA)

tiful grounds outside where they loll at ease or even walk around if it pleases them.

A visit offers an entertaining spectacle, even in addition to the music. Those who prefer to be outside the shed present an amazing contrast in costumes covering almost the entire field of attire. The first-time visitor is apt to get the impression that this is a giant "come as you are" party where everyone arrives garbed as they were when the invitation was received.

The view of the grounds is close to spectacular and the visitor might be advised to attend the concert, picnic on the grounds after it, and then take a short tour. The formal garden is a must on the list.

Leaving, the party heads into Lenox and then south on U. S. 20 for a dozen miles to Becket, where U. S. 20 cuts east, but the party heads south on Route 8. About 13 miles from here near New Boston is a view of Hanging mountain, a perpendicular cliff about 300 feet high. Jutting out above the base are masses of rock that appear ready to plunge into the Farmington river. Fragments loosened by the rain and frost do sometimes come crashing down with tremendous force.

Route 8 continues south, passing through Winsted, Torrington, Waterbury and [illegible] before ending in Bridgeport. En-route it is crossed by U. S. Route 6 leading to Danbury and Route 63 that runs to New Haven.

New England N
Box 2078, Boston
Berkshir
GT. BARRI
Weekly
Circ.
JUN 7

Tanglew Opera's

Lukas Foss
Own

Work Commissio
Telecast Las
Presented An
Based on Lit
Folk Tale.

Lukas Foss' "G
commissioned by cast last Novemb
will receive its w
complete stage p
major opera produ
Department of th
Center at Tanglew
summer. The ope performed on Mo
evenings, August
ducted by the co
serves as a facul
composition depart
shire Music Center
Boris Goldovsky,
department of this music maintained
phony Orchestra i
its concerts on the

The opera, in thre
poser's largest, sta
It is based on a litt
folk tale which th
heard from his mot
seven and promptly
at the age of eight years later Foss ag
same story, writing asking the British p
teacher of English
Sarah Lawrence Co
to write a rhymed
poser writes that, i
correspondence, of various drafts of t
was a wonderful
not have a single met a year [illegible]
contemplating

"Griffelkin," as th
composer, "is the sto
out into the world to mischief and world to hell. When world, he sees for th
blue sky. This is his
In the course of this
many things human-mother with her child
discovery, he become
human: learns, even
Finally, just before m
mits a good deed, an
of the clock finds him
by his hell-companio
trial for committing
Griffelkin is expelled
ends as a mortal: as little human.

This, the composer's
is scheduled for Eur
tions in Stuttgart, Ber
then after the Tangle cepts. As has been th
past productions of
Music Center, admissio
felkin" performances
special tickets [illegible] available
members of the Society
the Berkshire Music
[illegible] organization se its donations to the untary contribution co
bership in the Friends, numbered [illegible] individu
ing $46,094.

Platter' Now Obta

Music is about to b ent announcement. Yo or your attention alon tores. And the name
is popular with shoppe
and Chase and Sanborn

The introduction of
rade was made last w
Paris International Mus
platters in a planned ser
the "Sleeping Beauty"
"Unfinished Symphony,"
to be purchasable each
everything from rock an

Dr. Spaeth headed selection for the new
"world's greatest musi
chestras and artists. H
the record jackets, inclu
cha cha items. In expla
roll recordings, Dr. Spa
mensely popular type o
comic books, western fil

APRIL 2, 1956 Times

Here

4 NEW WORKS SET FOR TANGLEWOOD

Music Commissioned for 75th Year of Boston Symphony

Four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on its seventy-fifth anniversary festival this season will be performed again at the orchestra's Berkshire Music Festival next summer.

The Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will be held Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 to Aug. 12.

The commissioned works to be heard are Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5; Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," Copland's "Symphonic Ode" and Piston's Sixth Symphony.

Seven of the twelve concerts will be conducted by Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony. . . . Concerts . . . Carvalho, Richard . . . Leonard Bernstein . . . conduct. . . . Rudolf Serkin, playing the Beethoven Piano Concerto; Jean Fournier, playing the Hindemith Violin Concerto, and Jose de Oliveira, playing the Ravel Piano Concerto. Zino Francescatti and Samuel Mayes will be heard in the Brahms Concerto for Violin and 'Cello.

Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and David Lloyd, tenor, will sing in Mozart's C minor Mass. Margaret Willauer and Margaret Harshaw, sopranos; Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass, will appear in two programs of Wagnerian excerpts.

Chamber music programs will be presented in the theater concert hall at Tanglewood between July 4 and Aug. 4. Those to appear . . . clarinetist; the Kroll String Quartet, the Juilliard String Quartet, the Boston Arts Trio, the Boston Symphony Brass Ensemble, the Boston Woodwind Quintet, the Yale Glee Club, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists; Boris Goldovsky and Lukas Foss, pianists, Miss Harshaw and Mr. Serkin.

K
W

Se
ne
of tw
De
tic

St
de
Ke
ah
gr

Ja

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 S. 247,755

MAY 27 1956

FORT WAYNE, IND.
NEWS-SENTINEL
Circ. D. 75,970

MAY 25 1956

Petrassi Guest Teacher

Goffredo Petrassi, one of the foremost of living Italian composers, will be guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. The center is the orchestral school of the Boston Symphony and will open at Tanglewood, Mass., July 2 and run through to Aug. 12. It is connected with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival summer concerts.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 221,954

APR 29 1956

'Secret Marriage' Is Civic MM '56 Opera

With word of cancellation of the Charles L. Wagner Opera Company tour, due to Mr. Wagner's passing, Civic Morning Musicals, Inc. announces booking of the Goldovsky Opera Theater in "The Secret Marriage" for the night of Dec. 3 next in Central High School. The opera, regarded among the finest examples of Italian comic opera, is Domenico Cimarosa's masterpiece. It will be sung in English, and will be directed by Boris Goldovsky. The latter, known as the master of ceremonies for Metropolitan Opera News on the Air from fall to spring on Saturday afternoons, as for his opera direction in the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., summers, also is an author and lecturer-pianist.

The Goldovsky Opera Theater has no "star" system, as such. Instead, the young performers, American-trained, are indispensable singing-actors in closely-knit ensembles. The texts of the operas are translated in a manner to appeal to intelligent audiences and the plots have what is known as heightened dramatic validity. The new production of the Cimarosa opera features the new English version by Boris Goldovsky with settings by Barbara Lawthers and costumes by Leo Van Witsen.

Sunday, June 17, has been designated as "Angel Night" at Finger Lakes Lyric Circus by Producer Walter Davis. At this performance, the public, press and Lyric Circus "angels" will have first opportunity to view the latest of Rodgers and Hammerstein's musicals, "The King and I," in the Lyric's new red and blue Tent near Skaneateles.

The fifth anniversary season will open in the Lyric on June 16 with a sold-out performance of "The King and I" for the benefit of the Kiwanis Club of Solvay-Geddes. This marks the second year in a row for such a benefit.

The attraction, based by R & H on the best-selling novel "Anna and the King of Siam" is described as "an original and beautiful excursion into the rich splendors of the Far East." Among the tunes in addition to a ballet, are: "I Whistle a Happy Tune," "Hello Young Lovers," "We Kiss in the Shadow," "Something Wonderful" and "Getting to Know You."

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
Circ. D. 190,893 - S. 197,563

MAY 29 1956

TV Opera Having Stage Premiere

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass. — Lukas Foss "Griffelkin," an opera commissioned by NBC-TV and telecast last November by that network, will receive its premiere as a complete stage performance as the major opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center as Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer.

The opera, which will be performed on August 6 and 7, will be conducted by the composer, who also serves as a faculty member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, and staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751

JUN 3 1956

Festival Ending, Another to Start

The Mozart Festival at the American Shakespeare Festival Theatre in Stratford, Conn., winds up today with two performances, matinee and evening, of the Coronation Mass and Masonic Music by the Symphony of the Air and a 90-voice chorus. . . . Tickets for this summer's Berkshire Festival go on sale tomorrow at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. . . . Free piano recitals will be given this week at Steinway Hall by Emily McLees on Tuesday evening and Allen Brown on Friday evening.

THE ETUDE
BRYN MAWR, PA.

MAY 1956

The Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood, Mass., from July 2 to August 12 in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. One of Italy's . . . composers, Goffredo Petrassi . . . as guest teacher of composition.

[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

15, 195[illegible]

Receives Scholarship In Tanglewood Center

TONKAWA — Jack Ratterree, Tonkawa student at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, Pa., has received a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., according to word received here by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ratterree, 301 West Grand.

The music center is a six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra. It was established in 1940 to provide a place where young musicians could add to their professional training under guidance of eminent musicians and teachers and provide for the study of music through experience in actual performance on an advanced level.

Ratterree will attend the camp July 2 to Aug. 12. He plans to work in Philadelphia until July and return to Tonkawa after camp for the remainder of the summer.

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Lists Programs

The Berkshire Festival, during July and August this summer at Lenox, Mass., will not feature any composer or period to the degree which has sometimes been the case in the past.

Instead, the Boston Symphony, under the aegis of its conductor, Charles Munch, is offering six weeks of music which includes the old and the new, the popular and the unknown, and several works featuring chorus and orchestra.

Though the orchestral concerts open Friday night, July 6, the formal opening of the festival at its Tanglewood estate, two miles from Lenox and approximately four hours from New York by car, is July 4. The latter date raises the curtain on six chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert hall, seating something over a thousand. On this occasion the Kroll Quartet will play music by Mozart, Prokofieff and Beethoven. Successive events, all on Wednesday evenings, will include Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet; Margaret Harshaw in the "Wesendonck Lieder" by Wagner; and Rudolf Serkin, pianist.

As most music lovers, however, can't arrange their schedules to drive to Tanglewood in the middle of the week, the orchestral concerts provide the major interest.

During the initial two weeks, these also will take place in the smaller hall. Opening night will offer a Mozart Concert with Benny Goodman as soloist in the Clarinet Concerto. Saturday night, July 7, the Martinu "Military Mass," will be heard along with more Mozart. Sunday afternoon, July 8, has music by Haydn, Ives, Haieff and Bach. The following week-end includes one all-Mozart concert with Luboschutz and Nemenoff, duo-pianists, and Boris Goldovsky, pianist-conductor. Two Bach concerts will be climaxed Sunday, July 15, with the "Passion According to St. John."

The following four weeks will offer the Boston Symphony, playing in the 6,000-seat music shed with conductors Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Eleazare de Carvalho and Richard Burgin in charge. Opening night will be Friday, July 20, with Munch on the podium and the Brahms Second Symphony as the major work. Shorter pieces by Berlioz, Debussy and Ravel will precede. The first act of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" will be heard Saturday night, July 21, with Miss Harshaw, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, baritone, as soloists. Monteux leads the final event of the week, July 22, with Schubert's Seventh Symphony and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra as the major works.

Further discussion of later programs will appear in a subsequent article.

T
plea
Wim
and musical overtones, Tanglewood in the Berkshires. Here the Boston Symphony appears every summer in a series of concerts.

The first part of the trip is to Canaan in the northwest corner of the state at the junction of U. S. Route 7 and 44.

Twelve miles north on U. S. Route 7 is Great Barrington, a summer and winter vacation resort center. Just before entering the town the party passes the fair grounds where the annual fair in September is one of the state's biggest.

A few miles beyond town Route 183 angles off to the left. After a few more miles Route 183 crosses Route 102 and curves around a beautiful lake known as the Stockbridge bowl, about three miles out of Lenox. Now the group approaches the Dixey estate, the site of the Berkshire music festival and the location of the little red house in which Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote his famous book, "The House of the Seven Gables," as well as his "Tanglewood Tales."

On this estate, now owned by the Boston Symphony is the music shed where the concerts are given. Two types of accommodations are available. Some prefer to be in the music shed itself, closer to the music and seated, and many like the beautiful grounds outside where they loll at ease or even walk around if it pleases them.

A visit offers an entertaining spectacle, even in addition to the music. Those who prefer to be outside the shed present an amazing contrast in costumes covering almost the entire field of attire. The first-time visitor is apt to get the impression that this is a giant "come as you are" party where everyone arrives garbed as they were when the invitation was received.

The view of the grounds is close to spectacular and the visitor might be advised to attend the concert, picnic on the grounds after it, and then take a short tour. The formal garden is a must on the list.

Leaving, the party heads into Lenox and then south on U. S. 20 for a dozen miles to Becket, where U. S. 20 cuts east, but the party heads south on Route 8. About 13 miles from here near New Boston is a view of Hanging mountain, a perpendicular cliff about 300 feet high. Jutting out above the base are masses of rock that appear ready to plunge into the Farmington river. Fragments loosened by the rain and frost do sometimes come crashing down with tremendous force.

Route 8 continues south, passing through Winsted, Torrington, Waterbury and Naugatuck before ending in Bridgeport. Enroute it is crossed by U. S. Route 6 leading to Danbury and Route 63 that runs to New Haven.

Traveler

nn. Motor Club, AAA)

New England Ne
Box 2078, Boston 6

Berkshir
GT. BARRIN
Weekly
Circ.

JUN 7

Tanglew
Opera's
Lukas Foss
Own "
Work Commissio
Telecast Las
Presented Au
Based on Lit
Folk Tale.

Lukas Foss' "G
commissioned by cast last Novemb
will receive its w
complete stage p
major opera produ
Department of th
Center at Tanglew
summer. The ope
performed on Mo
evenings, August 6
ducted by the co
serves as a faculty
composition depart
shire Music Center
Boris Goldovsky,
department of this music maintained
phony Orchestra in its concerts at the

The opera, in thre
poser's largest sta
It is based on a litt
folk tale which th
heard from his mot
seven and promptly
at the age of eight years later Foss ag
same story, writing asking the British po
teacher of English
Sarah Lawrence Col
to write a rhymed
poser writes that correspondence of so
various drafts of t
was a wonderful co
not have a single arg met a year before!)
contemplating marr

"Griffelkin," in th
composer, "is the sto
out into the world to mischief and evil . . .
world to hell. When world, he sees for th
blue sky. This is his
In the course of this many things human-mother with her child
discovery he become human: learns, even
Finally, just before m
mits a good deed, an
of the clock finds him
by his hell-companio
trial for committing
Griffelkin is expelled
ends as a mortal: as little human."

This, the composer's
is scheduled for Eur
tions in Stuttgart, Ber
from after the Tangle ances. As has been th
past productions of
Music Center, admissio
felkin" performances
special tickets availab
members of the Society
the Berkshire Music C
sponsor organization se ags donations to the s
untary contribution co
bership to the Friends, numbered 4715 individu
ing $46,094.

Platter' Now Obta

Music is about to b ent announcement. Yo
or your attention along tores. And the name
is popular with shoppe
and Chase and Sanborn
The introduction of
rade was made last w
Paris International Mus
platters in a planned ser
the "Sleeping Beauty"
"Unfinished Symphony,"
to be purchasable each everything from rock an
Dr. Spaeth headed selection for the new l
"world's greatest musi
chestras and artists. H
the record jackets, inclu
cha cha items. In expla
roll recordings, Dr. Spa
mensely popular type o
comic books, western fil

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325
JU[illegible] 1956

Tanglewood to Have Opera's Stage Debut

Lukas Foss Will Conduct His Own "Griffelkin"

Work Commissioned for NBC-TV and Telecast Last November Will Be Presented August 6-7 — Story, Based on Little-Known German Folk Tale.

Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," an opera commissioned by NBC-TV and telecast last November by that network, will receive its world premiere as a complete stage performance as the major opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in Lenox this summer. The opera, which will be performed on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 6 and 7, will be conducted by the composer, who also serves as a faculty member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, and staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of this summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

The opera, in three acts, is the composer's largest stage work to date. It is based on a little-known German folk tale which the composer first heard from his mother at the age of seven and promptly set as an opera at the age of eight. Twenty-three years later Foss again turned to the same story, writing a synopsis and asking the British poet, Alastair Reid, teacher of English literature at Sarah Lawrence College in New York, to write a rhymed libretto. The composer writes that there "followed a correspondence of some thickness and various drafts of the libretto. Reid was a wonderful collaborator—we did not have a single argument (until we met a year later!) We are now contemplating more work together."

"Griffelkin," in the words of the composer, "is the story of a devil sent out into the world to do 24 hours of mischief and evil . . . to change the world to hell. When he arrives in the world, he sees for the first time 'the blue sky.' This is his first 'discovery.' In the course of this day he discovers many things human—love, death, a mother with her children. With each discovery he becomes himself more human: learns, even falls in love. Finally, just before midnight he commits a good deed, and at the stroke of the clock finds himself surrounded by his hell-companions, and put on trial for committing a good deed. Griffelkin is expelled from Hell and ends as a mortal: as a little boy, a little human."

This, the composer's second opera is scheduled for European productions in Stuttgart, Berlin and Stockholm after the Tanglewood performances. As has been the case with all past productions of the Berkshire Music Center, admission to the "Griffelkin" performances will be by special tickets available only to the members of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the school. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends, who last year numbered 4715 individuals contributing $46,094.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246
JUN 8 1956

Tanglewood will have to share the Boston Symphony orchestra with Leningrad and Moscow this year. Aug. 22 Director Charles Munch will set forth for a European tour that will include Leningrad and Moscow. There was no wasted time between the invitation from Russia and the acceptance by the Boston Symphony. The cabled invitation came in the morning yesterday and acceptance was cabled back as soon as received.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081
JUN 9 1956

(Copyright ltr.)

Tanglewood Box Office Opens Sales Monday

THE box-office for the Berkshire Festival will open at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., Monday at 9 a. m.

An all-time attendance record was set last Summer when nearly 140,000 persons attended the 24 Boston Symphony concerts of the 1956 Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,923
JUN 1 8 1956

Box Office Opens At Tanglewood

A brisk demand for seats for the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, is reported by Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., with the opening this week-end of the box office at the main gates at Tanglewood. The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to August 12, anticipates a banner season, on the basis of good subscription sales. The 1955 Berkshire Festival saw an all-time attendance record of 136,087 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, open Monday through Saturday from 9 to 5. The box office will also be open commencing Sunday, July 1, with the start of the 14th season of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt. Checks and money orders should be made payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., and accompanied by a stamped, self-addresesd envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted.

Platter' Now Obtainable In Chain Stores

Music is about to become a super-market item, according to a recent announcement. You may now find the "Merry Widow" competing for your attention along with the lamb chops and spinach in chain stores. And the name of Dr. Sigmund Spaeth will probably become as popular with shoppers as the more familiar ones such as Heinz, and Chase and Sanborn!

The introduction of a record library into its more usual stock of trade was made last week by 200 Grand Union Markets. Called the Paris International Music Appreciation Library, four LP, high-fidelity platters in a planned series of recordings are now available. These are the "Sleeping Beauty" ballet, Beethoven's 5th Symphony, Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," and "Gaite Parisienne." A new recording is to be purchasable each week in a wide variety of music encompassing everything from rock and roll to "Romeo and Juliet."

Dr. Spaeth headed a board of music authorities which made the selection for the new low-priced record library which contains the "world's greatest music" performed by internationally known orchestras and artists. He has written the notes to be found on most of the record jackets, including even those on the rock and roll and the cha cha items. In explaining his first efforts in behalf of the rock and roll recordings, Dr. Spaeth writes, "This highly controversial but immensely popular type of music is as characteristic of our times as comic books, western films, and gangster who-dun-its . . . ."

[264]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 58,[illegible]
JUN 10 1956

MUSIC

City Symphony Musicians To Attend Annual Workshop

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

According to Harold Kendrick, enterprising young manager of the New Haven Symphony, a good sized delegation of local symphony musicians is planning to attend the Fourth Annual Musician's Workshop of the American Symphony Orchestra League, to be held on Friday and Saturday of this week in Providence, R. I. The Workshop, held in conjunction with the National Convention of the League, will be the first to attract a large number of musicians in the East. Former convention programs which included this educational phase, a comparatively new activity of the League, were held in Indiana and Ohio.

The American Symphony Orchestra League, a non-profit organization dedicated to the interests of community orchestras throughout the country, is holding its 11th national convention this week. The Musician's Workshop first became a part of the league's yearly conferences in 1953 when the first program was inaugurated in Elkhart, Ind. Some 105 musicians representing 33 orchestras attended this first workship program and later convention workshops had comparable attendances.

The purpose of the Musician's Workshops is to assist orchestra musicians in their professional work. A number of first chair musicians from the Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and New York Philharmonic Orchestras will conduct the workship sessions in Providence this week. They will give advice and counsel on instrumental techniques, discuss matters of orchestral repertoires, and help the attending musicians with their individual problems. Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, is to be one of the instructors in this fourth Musician's Workshop.

Kendrick is to be one of the speakers at a seminar for orchestra managers, another workshop program scheduled for Thursday when the convention officially gets under way. A number of prominent composers, including Aaron Copland, Virgil Thomson, Norman Dello Joio, and others, will participate in a seminar for the visiting musicians on Friday. Other workshops during the convention will be devoted to such allied interests as arts councils, women's associations, conductors and youth orchestras. Incidentally, Kendrick is a former vice president of the American Symphony Orchestra League. The New Haven Symphony is, of course, a member of the organization.

Concert Tonight By Yale Glee Club

The Yale Glee Club will give its annual Commencement Concert this evening at 8:30 in Woolsey Hall. Fenno Heath will conduct the singers in the program which will highlight offerings by the Semi-Chorus and the Whiffenpoofs. The Glee Club numbers will include the usual wide variety of secular and religious works of the past and present with a generous sprinkling of foreign and American folk songs as well as the inevitable Yale song group. Several of the folk song presentations will be sung as arranged by the beloved former Yale Glee Club conductor, Marshall Bartholomew, while the present director's musical setting of Three Landscapes by T. S. Eliot, will be of special interest this evening.

The Yale singers will make their first transcontinental tour since 1948 this week with an itinerary which includes some 13 cities. The club will leave New York [illegible] on Wednesday and give its first concert that evening in Cincinnati. Succeeding appearances will be made in Louisville, Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake City, Pasadena, Long Beach (California), Santa Barbara, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Spokane, and Minneapolis.

Following the coming tour, which is to be made entirely by air, the club will go into intensive rehearsals for its forthcoming Tanglewood debut with the Boston Symphony on Saturday, July 7. The young singers have been signally honored by an invitation to participate in this concert which marks the first time that music composed for male chorus and orchestra has been included in a Berkshire Festival concert. Contemporary works by Henry Cowell and Bohuslav Martinu will be sung by the Yale singers, assisted by the Boston Orchestra.

Church Organist Retires After 41 Years

An outstanding example of the successful careers which modern women have carved for themselves in music is recalled with the retirement of Pauline Voorhees from her post as organist and choir director of Center Church after 41 years of service to the New Haven church. The post of organist became vacant shortly after Miss Voorhees received both the Bachelor's and the Master's degrees from the Yale Music School some four decades ago and there was much skepticism at first on the part of Center Church parishioners as to the hiring of a woman. It wasn't long before the church directors began to receive compliments for their courageous choice of a woman organist and during her long tenure Miss Voorhees went on to establish a distinguished record of service to Center Church.

Actually, Miss Voorhees resigned from her Center Church post two years ago, but she has stayed on since then in order that a suitable candidate to replace her might be found. Recently he was found in the person of James Dendy, who returned here from Chicago to do graduate work at the Yale Music School from which he received a B.Mus. degree in 1949. For the past six years, he has been organist and choirmaster of Grace Episcopal Church in Hinsdale, Ill., and he has also served as the assistant editor of the National Organist magazine—Diapason.

Miss Voorhees will continue her teaching activities as a member of the National Association of Teachers of Singing and also go on with her instruction in organ and piano. A Fellow of the American Guild of Organists and a Fellow of Westminster Choir College, she is a former pupil of two great French organists—Widor and Vierne—with both of whom she studied at various times in Paris.

Pops To Feature March By William Walton

Of special program interest to listeners at the first Pop concert on June 26 in the Bowl will be the march, "Orb and Scepter," by William Walton, composed especially for the coronation of Queen Elizabeth [illegible] and first performed at that time. According to conductor Harry Berman, "Orb and Scepter" is a stirring march which will receive its first hearing here in the opening Bowl event.

Mr. Berman adds that a generous amount of encores will be in store for the patrons this summer. In planning the music he says that room has been left for the performances of a number of lighter works which will not be listed in the printed program.

Incidentally, patrons of the New Haven Symphony's regular Woolsey Hall series will enthuse over the picture preview on this page of guest artists scheduled to perform with the orchestra next season.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
Circ. D. 220,412 - S. 282,550
AUG 19 1956

Peruvian Student

ISABEL CARDENAS, Peruvian student at the Cincinnati College-Conservatory, is enrolled for summer courses at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. A soprano, Miss Cardenas is studying in the opera department under Boris Goldovsky. At the College-Conservatory, she has studied under Norma Richter.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325

JUN 1956

Tanglewood to Have Opera's Stage Debut

Lukas Foss Will Conduct His Own "Griffelkin"

Work Commissioned for NBC-TV and Telecast Last November Will Be Presented August 6-7. — Story, Based on Little-Known German Folk Tale.

Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," an opera commissioned by NBC-TV and telecast last November by that network, will receive its world premiere as a complete stage performance as the major opera production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in Lenox this summer. The opera, which will be performed on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 6 and 7, will be conducted by the composer, who also serves as a faculty member of the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center, and staged by Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of this summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its concerts of the Berkshire Festival.

The opera, in three acts, is the composer's largest stage work to date. It is based on a little-known German folk tale which the composer first heard from his mother at the age of seven and promptly set as an opera at the age of eight. Twenty-three years later Foss again turned to the same story, writing a synopsis and asking the British poet, Alastair Reid, teacher of English literature at Sarah Lawrence College in New York, to write a rhymed libretto. The composer writes that there "followed a correspondence of some 50 letters and various drafts of the libretto. Reid was a wonderful collaborator—we did not have a single argument (until we met a year later!) We are now contemplating more work together."

"Griffelkin," in the words of the composer, "is the story of a devil sent out into the world to do 24 hours of mischief and evil . . . to change the world to hell. When he arrives in the world, he sees for the first time 'the blue sky.' This is his first 'discovery.' In the course of this day he discovers many things human—love, death, a mother with her children. With each discovery he becomes himself more human: learns, even falls in love. Finally, just before midnight he commits a good deed, and at the stroke of the clock finds himself surrounded by his hell-companions and put on trial for committing a good deed. Griffelkin is expelled from Hell and ends as a mortal: as a little boy, a little human."

This, the composer's second opera is scheduled for European productions in Stuttgart, Berlin and Stockholm after the Tanglewood performances. As has been the case with all past productions of the Berkshire Music Center, admission to the "Griffelkin" performances will be by special tickets available only to the members of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the school. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends, who last year numbered 4715 individuals contributing $46,094.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUN 8 1956

Tanglewood will have to share the Boston Symphony orchestra with Leningrad and Moscow this year. Aug. 22 Director Charles Munch will set forth for a European tour that will include Leningrad and Moscow. There was no wasted time between the invitation from Russia and the acceptance by the Boston Symphony. The cabled invitation came in the morning yesterday and acceptance was cabled back as soon as received.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 113,081

JUN 9 1956

(Copyright ER)

Tanglewood Box Office Opens Sales Monday

THE box-office for the Berkshire Festival will open at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., Monday at 9 a. m.

An all-time attendance record was set last Summer when nearly 140,000 persons attended the 24 Boston Symphony concerts of the 1955 Festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUN 1 8 1956

Box Office Opens At Tanglewood

A brisk demand for seats for the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, is reported by Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., with the opening this week of the box office at the main gates at Tanglewood. The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to August 12, anticipates a banner season, on the basis of good subscription sales. The 1955 Berkshire Festival saw an all time attendance record of 136,087 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, open Monday through Saturday from 9 to 5. The box office will also be open commencing Sunday, July 1, with the start of the 14th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt. Checks and money orders should be made payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., and accompanied by a stamped, self-addresesd envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted.

Platter' Now Obtainable In Chain Stores

Music is about to become a super-market item according to a recent announcement. You may now find the "Merry Widow" competing for your attention along with the lamb chops and spinach in chain stores. And the name of Dr. Sigmund Spaeth will probably become as popular with shoppers as the more familiar ones such as Heinz, and Chase and Sanborn!

The introduction of a record library into its more usual stock of trade was made last week by 200 Grand Union Markets. Called the Paris International Music Appreciation Library, four LP, high-fidelity platters in a planned series of recordings are now available. These are the "Sleeping Beauty" ballet, Beethoven's 5th Symphony, Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," and "Gaite Parisienne." A new recording is to be purchasable each week in a wide variety of music encompassing everything from rock and roll to "Romeo and Juliet."

Dr. Spaeth headed a board of music authorities which made the selection for the new low-priced record library which contains the "world's greatest music" performed by internationally known orchestras and artists. He has written the notes to be found on most of the record jackets, including even those on the rock and roll and the cha cha items. In explaining his first efforts in behalf of the rock and roll recordings, Dr. Spaeth writes, "This highly controversial but immensely popular type of music is as characteristic of our times as comic books, western films, and gangster who-dun-its . . . . ."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 55,135

JUN 1 0 1956

MUSIC

City Symphony Musicians To Attend Annual Workshop

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

According to Harold Kendrick, enterprising young manager of the New Haven Symphony, a good sized delegation of local symphony musicians is planning to attend the Fourth Annual Musician's Workshop of the American Symphony Orchestra League, to be held on Friday and Saturday of this week in Providence, R. I. The Workshop, held in conjunction with the National Convention of the League, will be the first to attract a large number of musicians in the East. Former convention programs which included this educational phase, a comparatively new activity of the League, were held in Indiana and Ohio.

The American Symphony Orchestra League, a non-profit organization dedicated to the interests of community orchestras throughout the country, is holding its 11th national convention this week. The Musician's Workshop first became a part of the league's yearly conferences in 1953 when the first program was inaugurated in Elkhart, Ind. Some 105 musicians representing 33 orchestras attended this first workship program and latef convention workshops had comparable attendances.

The purpose of the Musician's Workshops is to assist orchestra musicians in their professional work. A number of first chair musicians from the Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and New York Philharmonic Orchestras will conduct the workship sessions in Providence this week. They will give advice and counsel on instrumental techniques, discuss matters of orchestral repertoires, and help the attending musicians with their individual problems. Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, is to be one of the instructors in this fourth Musician's Workshop.

Kendrick is to be one of the speakers at a seminar for orchestra managers, another workshop program scheduled for Thursday when the convention officially gets under way. A number of prominent composers, including Aaron Copland, Virgil Thomson, Norman Dello Joio, and others, will participate in a session for the visiting musicians on Friday. Other workshops during the convention will be devoted to such allied interests as arts councils, women's associations, conductors and youth orchestras. Incidentally, Kendrick is a former vice president of the American Symphony Orchestra League. The New Haven Symphony is, of course, a member of the organization.

Concert Tonight By Yale Glee Club

The Yale Glee Club will give its annual Commencement Concert this evening at 8:30 in Woolsey Hall. Fenno Heath will conduct the singers in the program which will highlight offerings by the Semi-Chorus and the Whiffenpoofs. The Glee Club numbers will include the usual wide variety of secular and religious works of the past and present with a generous sprinkling of foreign and American folk songs as well as the inevitable Yale song group. Several of the folk song presentations will be sung as arranged by the beloved former Yale Glee Club conductor, Marshall Bartholomew, while the present director's musical setting of Three Landscapes by T. S. Eliot, will be of special interest this evening.

The Yale singers will make their first transcontinental tour since 1948 this week with an itinerary which includes some 13 cities. The club will leave New York by air on Wednesday and give its first concert that evening in Cincinnati. Succeeding appearances will be made in Louisville, Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake City, Pasadena, Long Beach (California), Santa Barbara, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Spokane, and Minneapolis.

Following the coming tour, which is to be made entirely by air, the club will go into intensive rehearsals for its forthcoming Tanglewood debut with the Boston Symphony on Saturday, July 7. The young singers have been signally honored by an invitation to participate in this concert which marks the first time that music composed for male chorus and orchestra has been included in a Berkshire Festival concert. Contemporary works by Henry Cowell and Bohuslav Martinu will be sung by the Yale singers, assisted by the Boston Orchestra.

Church Organist Retires After 41 Years

An outstanding example of the successful careers which modern women have carved for themselves in music is recalled with the retirement of Pauline Voorhees from her post as organist and choir director of Center Church after 41 years of service to the New Haven church. The post of organist became vacant shortly after Miss Voorhees received both the Bachelor's and the Master's degrees from the Yale Music School some four decades ago and there was much skepticism at first on the part of Center Church parishioners as to the hiring of a woman. It wasn't long before the church directors began to receive compliments for their courageous choice of a woman organist and during her long tenure Miss Voorhees went on to establish a distinguished record of service to Center Church.

Actually, Miss Voorhees resigned from her Center Church post two years ago, but she has stayed on since then in order that a suitable candidate to replace her might be found. Recently he was found in the person of James Dendy, who returned here from Chicago to do graduate work at the Yale Music School from which he received a B.Mus. degree in 1949. For the past six years, he has been organist and choirmaster of Grace Episcopal Church in Hinsdale, Ill., and he has also served as the assistant editor of the National Organist magazine—Diapason.

Miss Voorhees will continue her teaching activities as a member of the National Association of Teachers of Singing and also go on with her instruction in organ and piano. A Fellow of the American Guild of Organists and a Fellow of Westminster Choir College, she is a former pupil of two great French organists—Widor and Vierne—with both of whom she studied at various times in Paris.

Pops To Feature March By William Walton

Of special program interest to listeners at the first Pop concert on June 26 in the Bowl will be the march, "Orb and Scepter," by William Walton, which was performed especially for the coronation of Queen Elizabeth [illegible] and first performed at that time. According to conductor Harry Berman, "Orb and Scepter" is a stirring march which will receive its first hearing here in the opening Bowl event.

Berman tells me that a generous amount of encores will be in store for Pops patrons this summer. In planning the music, he says that time has been left for the performances of a number of lighter works which will not be listed in the printed program.

Incidentally, patrons of the New Haven Symphony's regular Woolsey Hall series will enthuse over the picture preview on this page of guest artists scheduled to perform with the orchestra next season.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
Circ. D. 220,412 - S. 282,550
AUG 1 9 1956

Peruvian Student

ISABEL CARDENAS, Peruvian student at the Cincinnati College-Conservatory, is enrolled for summer courses at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. A soprano, Miss Cardenas is studying in the opera department under Boris Goldovsky. At the College-Conservatory, she has studied under Norma Richter.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 253,604
JUN 10 1956

Berkshire Music Center Sets Concerts Open to "Friends"

The Berkshire Music Center, summer school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is now preparing for its 14th year at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the United States, from Canada and Europe on Sunday, July 1. Charles Munic, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, is Director of the Center; Ralph Berkowitz is dean, and faculty members include Eleazar de Carvalho, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Goffredo Petrassi, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the Boston Symphony.

Young musicians of high skill — instrumentalists, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers, will have at Tanglewood the invaluable experience of group performance. As in the past their concerts are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the Orchestra's summer music school. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends, who at the end of the summer of 1955 totalled 4,715 individuals contributing $46,094.00. Last summer was the first time that the Berkshire Music Center also benefitted from the Rockfeller Foundation's five-year matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources.

The complete schedule of student performances for 1956 follows:

Department I (Orchestra): Music Shed, 8:30 P.M., July 5, 12, 19, 26, August 2; 3:00 P.M., Saturday, August 11. Six full programs of large-scale symphonic music performed by the orchestra of scholarship students playing under the direction of Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, Lukas Foss and the most outstanding student conductors.

Department I (Chamber Music): Chamber Music Hall, 10:00 A.M., July 8, 15, 22, 29, August 5, 12. Six Sunday morning programs of chamber music played by outstanding students.

Department II (Chorus): Theatre, 8:30 P.M., July 16, 24. Hugh Ross conducting the Tanglewood Choir in two programs of great choral music.

Department III (Composition): Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 P.M., July 15, 22; 3:00 P.M., July 28, August 4. Student composers discussing their own and fellow students' works.

Department IV (Opera): Theatre, 8:30 P.M., July 24 — Scenes from Mozart operas. Theatre, 8:30 P.M., July 30 — Four complete acts from 19th century operas.

Department IV (Opera): Theatre, 8:30 P.M., August 6, 7. The stage premiere of Lukas Foss "Griffelkin" conducted by the composer and staged by Boris Goldovsky.

Department V (Tanglewood Study Group). From time to time during the course of the season this group of musical amateurs and enthusiasts will give demonstrations of its work under the supervision of Ingolf Dahl.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
JUN 10 1956

Student Performances Are Scheduled at Tanglewood

Boston, June 9—Numerous performances by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox. This orchestra's music school in the Berkshire hills is now preapring for its 14th year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the United States, Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 1.

The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as director; Aaron Copland as assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz as dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Eleazar de Carvalho, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Goffredo Petrassi, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl, and first-chair members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Group Concerts

Young musicians of high skill—instrumentalists, conductors and singers—many on the threshold of distinguished careers, will have at Tanglewood the invaluable experience of group performance. As in the past their concerts are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school.

A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends, who at the end of the summer of 1955 totalled 4,715 individuals contributing $46,094. Last summer was the first time that the Berkshire Music Center also benefitted from the Rockefeller Foundation's five-year matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources. The complete schedule of student performances for 1956 follows:

Dept. 1 (Orchestra): Music Shed 8.30 p. m., July 5, 12, 19, 26, Aug. 2; 3.00 p. m., Saturday, Aug. 11. Six full programs of large-scale symphonic music performed by the orchestra of scholarship students playing under the direction of Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, Lukas Foss and the most outstanding student conductors.

Dept. 1 (Chamber Music); Chamber Music Hall, 10 a. m., July 8, 15, 22, 29, Aug. 5, 12. Six Sunday morning programs of chamber music played by outstanding students.

Dept. 2 (Chorus): Theater, 8.30 p. m. July 16, 24. Hugh Ross conducting the Tanglewood Choir in two programs of great choral music.

Student Composers

Dept. 3 (Composition): Chamber Music Hall, 8.30 p. m., July 15, 22; 3 p. m., July 28, Aug. 4. Student composers discussing their own and fellow students' works.

Dept. 4 (Opera): Theater, 8.30 p. m., July 24—Scenes from Mozart operas. Theater, 8.30 p. m., July 30—Four complete acts from 19th-century operas.

Dept. 4 (Opera): Theater, 8.30 p. m., Aug. 6, 7. The stage premiere of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin" conducted by the composer and staged by Boris Goldovsky.

Dept. 5 (Tanglewood study group). From time to time during the course of the season this group of musical amateurs and enthusiasts will give demonstrations of its work under the supervision of Ingolf Dahl.

A complete calendar of events, listing all student activities of the Berkshire Music Center as well as all the programs of the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is now available and may be had by writing to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,241
JUN 11 1956

Berkshire Students Events

Numerous performances by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This orchestra's music school in the Berkshire Hills is now preparing for its 14th year. The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as director; Aaron Copland as assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz as dean, and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Eleazar de Carvalho, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Goffredo Petrassi, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The complete schedule of student performances for 1956 follows:

Department I (Orchestra): Music Shed, 8:30 p. m., July 5, 12, 19, 26, Aug. 2; 3 p. m., Saturday, Aug. 11. Six full programs of large-scale symphonic music performed by the orchestra of scholarship students playing under the direction of Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, Lukas Foss and the most outstanding student conductors.

Department I (Chamber Music): Chamber Music Hall, 10 a. m., July 8, 15, 22, 29, Aug. 5, 12. Six Sunday morning programs of chamber music played by outstanding students.

Department II (Chorus): Theatre, 8:30 p. m., July 16, 24. Hugh Ross conducting the Tanglewood Choir in two programs of great choral music.

Department III (Composition): Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p. m., July 15, 22; 3 p. m., July 28, Aug. 4. Student composers discussing their own and fellow students' works.

Department IV (Opera): Theatre, 8:30 p. m., July 24, Scenes from Mozart operas; Theatre, 8:30 p. m., July 30, four complete acts from 19th century operas.

Department IV (Opera): Theatre, 8:30 p. m., Aug. 6, 7. The stage premiere of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," conducted by the composer and staged by Boris Goldovsky.

Department V (Tanglewood Study Group). From time to time during the course of the season this group of musical amateurs and enthusiasts will give demonstrations of its work under the supervision of Ingolf Dahl.

A complete calendar of events, listing all student activities of the Berkshire Music Center as well as all the programs of the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is now available and may be had by writing to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538
JUN 14 1956

Tanglewood Tales

Registrar Edith M. Bossler advises that the Berkshire Music Center still needs "first-rate" bassoon players, violists and cellists to round out the 100 scholarship students who make up the student symphony orchestra. The Festival Chorus, composed of opera and chorus students, who this summer will sing such major works as the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, and the "Kyrie" and "Gloria" from Mozart's C Minor Mass, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, has still need of good tenors and basses. Applications, especially for Festival Chorus singers and Department V students (Tanglewood Study Group) remain open until July 1.

* * *

When Hugh Ross, who heads the chorus department of the Berkshire Music Center, returns to Tanglewood this summer, it will be with a bride. The popular choral conductor was married during May to the former Ruth Reilly of New York City, and the Rosses will be living this summer in Stockbridge on the old Sedgwick estate.

Visitors to Tanglewood this season will note some changes planned and carried out by workmen under the supervision of superintendent Ward Gaston. Some repairs have been made in the stage of the 6,000-seat Music Shed whose winter shutters came off this week. The ticket office has been enlarged and separated from the office of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, with a new entrance from the Tanglewood grounds. Extensive landscaping has also been carried out, with new maples and screening evergreens planted.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUN 11 1956

Students at Music Center to Give Many Summer Programs

Numerous performances by students of the Berkshire Music center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, it was announced today.

In 14th Year

This orchestra's music school is preparing for its 14th year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the U.S.A., Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 1. The Berkshire Music center has Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, as director; Aaron Copland as assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz as dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Eleazar de Carvalho, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Goffredo Petrassi, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

Young musicians of high skill — instrumentalists, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers, will have at Tanglewood the experience of group performance. As in the past their concerts are open to those who enroll in the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends, who at the end of the summer of 1955 totalled 4,715 individuals contributing $46,094. Last summer was the first time that the Berkshire Music center also benefitted from the Rockefeller foundation's five-year matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources.

Performance Schedule

The schedule of student performances for 1956 follows:

Department I (Orchestra): Music Shed, 8.30 P.M. July 5, 12, 19, 26, Aug. 2; 3 P.M., Aug. 11. Six programs of large-scale symphonic music performed by the orchestra of scholarship students under the direction of Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, Lukas Foss and the most outstanding student conductors.

Department I (Chamber Music): Chamber Music Hall, 10 A.M. July 8, 15, 22, 29, Aug. 5, 12. Six Sunday morning programs of chamber music by outstanding students.

Department II (Chorus): Theater, 8.30 P.M., July 16, 24. Hugh Ross conducting the Tanglewood choir in two programs of great choral music.

Department III (Composition): Chamber Music Hall, 8.30 P.M. July 15, 22; 3 P.M. July 28, Aug. 4. Student composers discussing their own and fellow students' works.

Department IV (Opera): Theater, 8.30 P.M. July 24, Scenes from Mozart operas. Theater 8.30 P.M. July 30, Four complete acts from 19th century operas.

Department IV (Opera): Theater, 8.30 P.M. Aug. 6, 7. The stage premiere of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin" conducted by the composer and staged by Boris Goldovsky.

Department V (Tanglewood Study Group): From time to time during the course of the season this group of musical amateurs and enthusiasts will give demonstrations of its work under the supervision of Ingolf Dahl.

A complete calendar of events, listing all student activities of the Berkshire Music center as well as all the programs of the Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra, is now available and may be had by writing to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox.

[265]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 253,604

JUN 10 1956

Berkshire Music Center Sets Concerts Open to "Friends"

The Berkshire Music Center, summer school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is now preparing for its 14th year at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the United States, from Canada and Europe on Sunday, July 1. Charles Munic, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, is Director of the Center; Ralph Berkowitz is dean, and faculty members include Eleazar de Carvalho, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Goffredo Petrassi, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the Boston Symphony.

Young musicians of high skill — instrumentalists, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers, will have at Tanglewood the invaluable experience of group performance. As in the past their concerts are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the Orchestra's summer music school. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends, who at the end of the summer of 1955 totalled 4,715 individuals contributing $46,094.00. Last summer was the first time that the Berkshire Music Center also benefitted from the Rockfeller Foundation's five-year matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources.

The complete schedule of student performances for 1956 follows:

Department I (Orchestra): Music Shed, 8:30 P.M., July 5, 12, 19, 26, August 2; 3:00 P.M., Saturday, August 11. Six full programs of large-scale symphonic music performed by the orchestra of scholarship students playing under the direction of Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, Lukas Foss and the most outstanding student conductors.

Department I (Chamber Music): Chamber Music Hall, 10:00 A.M., July 8, 15, 22, 29, August 5, 12. Six Sunday morning programs of chamber music played by outstanding students.

Department II (Chorus): Theatre, 8:30 P.M., July 16, 24. Hugh Ross conducting the Tanglewood Choir in two programs of great choral music.

Department III (Composition): Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 P.M., July 15, 22; 3:00 P.M., July 28, August 4. Student composers discussing their own and fellow students' works.

Department IV (Opera): Theatre, 8:30 P.M., July 24 — Scenes from Mozart operas. Theatre, 8:30 P.M., July 30 — Four complete acts from 19th century operas.

Department IV (Opera): Theatre, 8:30 P.M., August 6, 7. The stage premiere of Lukas Foss "Griffelkin" conducted by the composer and staged by Boris Goldovsky.

Department V (Tanglewood Study Group). From time to time during the course of the season this group of musical amateurs and enthusiasts will give demonstrations of its work under the supervision of Ingolf Dahl.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372

JUN 10 1956

Student Performances Are Scheduled at Tanglewood

Boston, June 9—Numerous performances by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox. This orchestra's music school in the Berkshire nills is now preapring for its 14th year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the United States, Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 1.

The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as director; Aaron Copland as assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz as dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Eleazar de Carvalho, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Goffredo Petrassi, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl, and first-chair members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Group Concerts

Young musicians of high skill—instrumentalists, conductors and singers—many on the threshold of distinguished careers, will have at Tanglewood the invaluable experience of group performance. As in the past their concerts are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school.

A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends, who at the end of the summer of 1955 totalled 4,715 individuals contributing $46,094. Last summer was the first time that the Berkshire Music Center also benefitted from the Rockefeller Foundation's five-year matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources. The complete schedule of student performances for 1956 follows:

Dept. 1 (Orchestra): Music Shed 8.30 p. m., July 5, 12, 19, 26, Aug. 2; 3.00 p. m., Saturday, Aug. 11. Six full programs of large-scale symphonic music performed by the orchestra of scholarship students playing under the direction of Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, Lukas Foss and the most outstanding student conductors.

Dept. 1 (Chamber Music); Chamber Music Hall, 10 a. m., July 8, 15, 22, 29, Aug. 5, 12. Six Sunday morning programs of chamber music played by outstanding students.

Dept. 2 (Chorus): Theater, 8.30 p. m. July 16, 24. Hugh Ross conducting the Tanglewood Choir in two programs of great choral music.

Student Composers

Dept. 3 (Composition): Chamber Music Hall, 8.30 p. m., July 15, 22; 3 p. m., July 28, Aug. 4. Student composers discussing their own and fellow students' works.

Dept. 4 (Opera): Theater, 8.30 p. m., July 24—Scenes from Mozart operas. Theater, 8.30 p. m., July 30—Four complete acts from 19th-century operas.

Dept. 4 (Opera): Theater, 8.30 p. m., Aug. 6, 7. The stage premiere of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin" conducted by the composer and staged by Boris Goldovsky.

Dept. 5 (Tanglewood study group). From time to time during the course of the season this group of musical amateurs and enthusiasts will give demonstrations of its work under the supervision of Ingolf Dahl.

A complete calendar of events, listing all student activities of the Berkshire Music Center as well as all the programs of the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is now available and may be had by writing to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

New England Newscap Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,241

JUN 11 1956

Berkshire Students Events

Numerous performances by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This orchestra's music school in the Berkshire Hills is now preparing for its 14th year. The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as director; Aaron Copland as assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz as dean, and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Eleazar de Carvalho, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Goffredo Petrassi, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The complete schedule of student performances for 1956 follows:

Department I (Orchestra): Music Shed, 8:30 p. m., July 5, 12, 19, 26, Aug. 2; 3 p. m., Saturday, Aug. 11. Six full programs of large-scale symphonic music performed by the orchestra of scholarship students playing under the direction of Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, Lukas Foss and the most outstanding student conductors.

Department I (Chamber Music): Chamber Music Hall, 10 a. m., July 8, 15, 22, 29, Aug. 5, 12. Six Sunday morning programs of chamber music played by outstanding students.

Department II (Chorus): Theatre, 8:30 p. m., July 16, 24. Hugh Ross conducting the Tanglewood Choir in two programs of great choral music.

Department III (Composition): Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p. m., July 15, 22; 3 p. m., July 28, Aug. 4. Student composers discussing their own and fellow students' works.

Department IV (Opera): Theatre, 8:30 p. m., July 24, Scenes from Mozart operas: Theatre, 8:30 p. m., July 30, four complete acts from 19th century operas.

Department IV (Opera): Theatre, 8:30 p. m., Aug. 6, 7. The stage premiere of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin," conducted by the composer and staged by Boris Goldovsky.

Department V (Tanglewood Study Group). From time to time during the course of the season this group of musical amateurs and enthusiasts will give demonstrations of its work under the supervision of Ingolf Dahl.

A complete calendar of events, listing all student activities of the Berkshire Music Center as well as all the programs of the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is now available and may be had by writing to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

JUN 14 1956

Tanglewood Tales

Registrar Edith M. Bossler advises that the Berkshire Music Center still needs "first-rate" bassoon players, violists and cellists to round out the 100 scholarship students who make up the student symphony orchestra. The Festival Chorus, composed of opera and chorus students, who this summer will sing such major works as the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, and the "Kyrie" and "Gloria" from Mozart's C Minor Mass, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, has still need of good tenors and basses. Applications, especially for Festival Chorus singers and Department V students (Tanglewood Study Group) remain open until July 1.

* * *

When Hugh Ross, who heads the chorus department of the Berkshire Music Center, returns to Tanglewood this summer, it will be with a bride. The popular choral conductor was married during May to the former Ruth Reilly of New York City, and the Rosses will be living this summer in Stockbridge on the old Sedgwick estate.

Visitors to Tanglewood this season will note some changes planned and carried out by workmen under the supervision of superintendent Ward Gaston. Some repairs have been made in the stage of the 6,000-seat Music Shed whose winter shutters came off this week. The ticket office has been enlarged and separated from the office of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, with a new entrance from the Tanglewood grounds. Extensive landscaping has also been carried out, with new maples and screening evergreens planted.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUN 11 1956

Students at Music Center to Give Many Summer Programs

Numerous performances by students of the Berkshire Music center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, it was announced today.

In 14th Year

This orchestra's music school is preparing for its 14th year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the U.S.A., Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 1. The Berkshire Music center has Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, as director; Aaron Copland as assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz as dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Eleazar de Carvalho, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Goffredo Petrassi, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

Young musicians of high skill — instrumentalists, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers, will have at Tanglewood the experience of group performance. As in the past their concerts are open to those who enroll in the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends, who at the end of the summer of 1955 totalled 4,715 individuals contributing $46,094. Last summer was the first time that the Berkshire Music center also benefitted from the Rockefeller foundation's five-year matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources.

Performance Schedule

The schedule of student performances for 1956 follows:

Department I (Orchestra): Music Shed, 8.30 P.M. July 5, 12, 19, 26, Aug. 2; 3 P.M., Aug. 11. Six programs of large-scale symphonic music performed by the orchestra of scholarship students under the direction of Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, Lukas Foss and the most outstanding student conductors.

Department I (Chamber Music): Chamber Music Hall, 10 A.M. July 8, 15, 22, 29, Aug. 5, 12. Six Sunday morning programs of chamber music by outstanding students.

Department II (Chorus): Theater, 8.30 P.M., July 16, 24. Hugh Ross conducting the Tanglewood choir in two programs of great choral music.

Department III (Composition): Chamber Music Hall, 8.30 P.M. July 15, 22; 3 P.M. July 28, Aug. 4. Student composers discussing their own and fellow students' works.

Department IV (Opera): Theater, 8.30 P.M. July 24. Scenes from Mozart operas. Theater 8.30 P.M. July 30. Four complete acts from 19th century operas.

Department IV (Opera): Theater, 8.30 P.M. Aug. 6, 7. The stage premiere of Lukas Foss' "Griffelkin" conducted by the composer and staged by Boris Goldovsky.

Department V (Tanglewood Study Group): From time to time during the course of the season this group of musical amateurs and enthusiasts will give demonstrations of its work under the supervision of Ingolf Dahl.

A complete calendar of events, listing all student activities of the Berkshire Music center as well as all the programs of the Berkshire festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra, is now available and may be had by writing to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Register (e)
TORRINGTON, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 10,140
JUN 14 1956

Weekend Traveler

(Prepared by the Conn. Motor Club, AAA)

TANGLEWOOD

This suggestion involves a pleasant trip of 100 miles to a spot with literary and musical overtones, Tanglewood in the Berkshires. Here the Boston Symphony appears every summer in a series of concerts.

The first part of the trip is to Canaan in the northwest corner of the state at the junction of U.S. Route 7 and 44. Twelve miles north on U.S. 7 is Great Barrington, a summer and winter vacation resort center. Just before entering the town the party passes the fair grounds where the annual fair in September is one of the state's biggest.

A few miles beyond town Route 183 angles off to the left. After a few more miles Route 183 crosses Route 102 and curves around a beautiful lake known as the Stockbridge Bowl, about three miles out of Lenox. Now the group approaches the Dixey Estate, the site of the Berkshire Music Festival and the little red house in which Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote his famous book, "The House of the Seven Gables," as well as his "Tanglewood Tales."

On this estate, now owned by the Boston Symphony, is the music shed where the concerts are given. Two types of accommodations are available. Some prefer to be in the music shed itself, closer to the music and seated, but many like the beautiful grounds outside where they may loll at ease or even walk around if it pleases them.

A visit offers an entertaining spectacle, even in addition to the music. Those who prefer to be outside the shed present an amazing contrast in costumes covering almost the entire field of attire. The first-time visitor is apt to get the impression that this is a giant "come as you are" party where everyone arrives garbed as they were when the invitation was received.

The view from the grounds is close to spectacular, and the visitor might be advised to attend the concert, picnic on the grounds after it, and then take a short tour. The formal garden is a must on the list.

Leaving, the party heads into Lenox and then south on U.S. 20 for a dozen miles to Becket where U.S. 20 cuts east, but the party heads south on Route 8. About 13 miles from here near New Boston is a view of Hanging Mountain, a perpendicular cliff about 300 feet high. Jutting out above the base are masses of rock that appear ready to plunge into the Farmington River. Fragments loosed by the rain and frost do sometimes come crashing down with tremendous force.

Route 8 continues south, passing through Winsted, Torrington, Waterbury and Naugatuck before ending in Bridgeport. En route it is crossed by U.S. Route 6 leading to Danbury and Route 63 that runs to New Haven.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Journal (e)
LEWISTON-AUBURN,
Maine
Republican
Circ. 15,490
JUN 15 1956

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872
JUN 16 1956

LEWISTON EVENING JOURNA

RECEIVES MASTER'S DEGREE—Maurice C. Carbonneau, 326 South Ave., received a Master's degree in music Tuesday, from the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, Mass. He is a baritone and majored in voice. While at the conservatory he was a member of the Phi Mu Alpha fraternity and received a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Festival. He is presently employed in the music department of the Boston Public Library and is also a soloist at St. Paul's Cathedral. He gave a voice recital in Brown Hall, Boston, last Feb. 27.

Prospects for Concerts,

E. Power Biggs will be organ soloist at the Pops Wednesday evening.

Modern Chamber Series Planned for Tanglewood

Two concerts of modern chamber music will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Guest artists will be announced later. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

The brace of concerts, donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, will each display a work by a former student of the school's composition department. These concerts will be open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky, and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday evening, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are Serenade for String Quintet by Ben Weber of New York City, and "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings, and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn. Mr. Epstein was a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1953.

The program for the second concert on Monday evening, July 23, will include music by Samuel Barber, Manuel de Falla, Darius Milhaud, and Goffredo Petrassi. Mr. Petrassi, Italian composer, will be guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this summer. The commissioned works are Quintet for Bassoon and Strings by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago's Music Department, and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by the Cuban composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

The Berkshire Festival Shed series is preceded by two week ends of concerts by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony orchestra, the popular "Bach-Mozart" concerts given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall under the direction of Charles Munch, with Lukas Foss, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz as the guest conductors. Seats for these two week ends, July 6-7-8 and July 13-14-15 are already scarce, with the latter week end almost sold out. Great interest attaches to the Tanglewood debut, as soloist in Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet (K. 622), of eminent jazz musician Benny Goodman. Other soloists are; vocalists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan, James Joyce; duo pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff, opera director Boris Goldovsky appearing as a pianist; William Kroll, violinist; the Yale Glee club; and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony.

Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, are also given during the Festival, July 4-August 8, proceeds going to the Berkshire Music Center's Revolving Scholarship fund. Benny Goodman, Rudolf Serkin, Zino Francescatti (accompanied by Artur Balsam), Margaret Harshaw, the Kroll String Quartet, the Boston Symphony String Quartet, the Boston Symphony String Quartet, the Brass Ensemble of the orchestra under the direction of BSO trumpeter Roger Voisin, the Beaux Arts Trio, the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet are the performers.

For detailed Berkshire Festival programs, for a complete list of the summer's more than 40 student concerts to which the public is invited by making a voluntary contribution to the society of Friends of the music school, and for price information, write the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox.

[266]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544
JUN 17 1956

Chicago's Fromm Foundation Donates Chamber Music Concerts to Berkshires

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire Festival, will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and noted guest artists, to be announced. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

★ ★ ★

The brace of concerts, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, which commences its 14th season July 2, will each display a work by a former student of the school's composition department. The Fromm Foundation concerts, to be given in addition to the Berkshire Festival's regular schedule of 24 concerts, July 4-August 12, and also extra to the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center given during the same period, are open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Former Students

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday evening, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quintet" by Ben Weber of New York city; and "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn., a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1953, and a faculty member of The Hartford College of Music.

The program for the second concert on Monday evening, July 23, will include music by Samuel Barber, Manuel De Falla, Darius Milhaud and Goffredo Petrassi. Mr. Petrassi, noted modern Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this Summer. The commissioned work are "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of The University of Chicago's Music Department; and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118
JUN 19 1956

Berkshire Festival Box Office Opens At Tanglewood

A brisk demand for seats for the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, is reported by Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., with the opening this week of the box-office at the main gate at Tanglewood. The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to August 12, anticipates a banner season, on the basis of good subscription sales. The 1955 Berkshire Festival saw an all-time attendance record of 136,087 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box-office.

1956's pattern of 12 concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, and with Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Eleazar de Carvalho and Richard Burgin as guest conductors, calls for four week ends, July 20-August 12. Features of the Shed season will be first performances at Tanglewood of four symphonic works commissioned during the current season, the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra, from noted modern composers Howard Hanson, Walter Piston, Goffredo Petrassi and Aaron Copland; and two all-Wagner programs with Metropolitan Opera stars Margaret Harshaw and Albert Da Costa, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students, Act I of "Die Walkure" and the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger". Other noted soloists during the Shed season are Rudolf Serkin and Jocy de Oliveira, pianists; Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt, violinists; and vocalists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts, Marguerite Willauer, James Pease and David Lloyd.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Register (e)
TORRINGTON, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 10,140

JUN 14 1956

Weekend Traveler

(Prepared by the Conn. Motor Club, AAA)

TANGLEWOOD

This suggestion involves a pleasant trip of 100 miles to a spot with literary and musical overtones, Tanglewood in the Berkshires. Here the Boston Symphony appears every summer in a series of concerts.

The first part of the trip is to Canaan in the northwest corner of the state at the junction of U.S. Route 7 and 44. Twelve miles north on U.S. 7 is Great Barrington, a summer and winter vacation resort center. Just before entering the town the party passes the fair grounds where the annual fair in September is one of the state's biggest.

A few miles beyond town Route 183 angles off to the left. After a few more miles Route 183 crosses Route 102 and curves around a beautiful lake known as the Stockbridge Bowl, about three miles out of Lenox. Now the group approaches the Dixey Estate, the site of the Berkshire Music Festival and the little red house in which Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote his famous book, "The House of the Seven Gables," as well as his "Tanglewood Tales."

On this estate, now owned by the Boston Symphony, is the music shed where the concerts are given. Two types of accommodations are available. Some prefer to be in the music shed itself, closer to the music and seated, but many like the beautiful grounds outside where they may loll at ease or even walk around if it pleases them.

A visit offers an entertaining spectacle, even in addition to the music. Those who prefer to be outside the shed present an amazing contrast in costumes covering almost the entire field of attire. The first-time visitor is apt to get the impression that this is a giant "come as you are" party where everyone arrives garbed as they were when the invitation was received.

The view from the grounds is close to spectacular, and the visitor might be advised to attend the concert, picnic on the grounds after it, and then take a short tour. The formal garden is a must on the list.

Leaving, the party heads into Lenox and then south on U.S. 20 for a dozen miles to Becket where U.S. 20 cuts east, but the party heads south on Route 8. About 13 miles from here near New Boston is a view of Hanging Mountain, a perpendicular cliff about 300 feet high. Jutting out above the base are masses of rock that appear ready to plunge into the Farmington River. Fragments loosed by the rain and frost do sometimes come crashing down with tremendous force.

Route 8 continues south, passing through Winsted, Torrington, Waterbury and Naugatuck before ending in Bridgeport. En route it is crossed by U.S. Route 6 leading to Danbury and Route 63 that runs to New Haven.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Journal (e)
LEWISTON-AUBURN,
Maine
Republican
Circ. 15,490

JUN 15 1956

LEWISTON EVENING JOURNA

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUN 16 1956

RECEIVES MASTER'S DEGREE—Maurice C. Carbonneau, 326 South Ave., received a Master's degree in music Tuesday, from the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, Mass. He is a baritone and majored in voice. While at the conservatory he was a member of the Phi Mu Alpha fraternity and received a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Festival. He is presently employed in the music department of the Boston Public Library and is also a soloist at St. Paul's Cathedral. He gave a voice recital in Brown Hall, Boston, last Feb. 27.

Prospects for Concerts,

E. Power Biggs will be organ soloist at the Pops Wednesday evening.

Modern Chamber Series Planned for Tanglewood

Two concerts of modern chamber music will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Guest artists will be announced later. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

The brace of concerts, donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, will each display a work by a former student of the school's composition department. These concerts will be open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky, and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday evening, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are Serenade for String Quintet by Ben Weber of New York City, and "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings, and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn. Mr. Epstein was a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1953.

The program for the second concert on Monday evening, July 23, will include music by Samuel Barber, Manuel de Falla, Darius Milhaud, and Goffredo Petrassi. Mr. Petrassi, Italian composer, will be guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this summer. The commissioned works are Quintet for Bassoon and Strings by Leland Smith of the University of Chicago's Music Department, and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by the Cuban composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

The Berkshire Festival Shed series is preceded by two week ends of concerts by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony orchestra, the popular "Bach-Mozart" concerts given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall under the direction of Charles Munch, with Lukas Foss, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz as the guest conductors. Seats for these two week ends, July 6-7-8 and July 13-14-15 are already scarce, with the latter week end almost sold out. Great interest attaches to the Tanglewood debut, as soloist in Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet (K. 622), of eminent jazz musician Benny Goodman. Other soloists are: vocalists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan, James Joyce; duo pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff, opera director Boris Goldovsky appearing as a pianist; William Kroll, violinist; the Yale Glee club; and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony.

Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, are also given during the Festival, July 4 August 8, proceeds going to the Berkshire Music Center's Revolving Scholarship fund. Benny Goodman, Rudolf Serkin, Zino Francescatti (accompanied by Artur Balsam), Margaret Harshaw, the Kroll String Quartet, the Boston Symphony String Quartet, the Boston Symphony String Quartet, the Brass Ensemble of the orchestra under the direction of BSO trumpeter Roger Voisin, the Beaux Arts Trio, the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet are the performers.

For detailed Berkshire Festival programs, for a complete list of the summer's more than 40 student concerts to which the public is invited by making a voluntary contribution to the society of Friends of the music school, and for price information, write the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 374,544

JUN 17 1956

Chicago's Fromm Foundation Donates Chamber Music Concerts to Berkshires

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire Festival, will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and noted guest artists, to be announced. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

★ ★ ★

The brace of concerts, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, which commences its 14th season July 2, will each display a work by a former student of the school's composition department. The Fromm Foundation concerts, to be given in addition to the Berkshire Festival's regular schedule of 24 concerts, July 4-August 12, and also extra to the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center given during the same period, are open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Former Students

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday evening, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quintet" by Ben Weber of New York city; and "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn., a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1953, and a faculty member of The Hartford College of Music.

The program for the second concert on Monday evening, July 23, will include music by Samuel Barber, Manuel De Falla, Darius Milhaud and Goffredo Petrassi. Mr. Petrassi, noted modern Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this Summer. The commissioned work are "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of The University of Chicago's Music Department; and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

New England Newscrp Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,118

JUN 19 1956

Berkshire Festival Box Office Opens At Tanglewood

A brisk demand for seats for the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, is reported by Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., with the opening this week of the box-office at the main gate at Tanglewood. The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to August 12, anticipates a banner season, on the basis of good subscription sales. The 1955 Berkshire Festival saw an all-time attendance record of 136,087 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box-office.

1956's pattern of 12 concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, and with Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Eleazar de Carvalho and Richard Burgin as guest conductors, calls for four week ends, July 20-August 12. Features of the Shed season will be first performances at Tanglewood of four symphonic works commissioned during the current season, the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony orchestra, from noted modern composers Howard Hanson, Walter Piston, Goffredo Petrassi and Aaron Copland; and two all-Wagner programs with Metropolitan Opera stars Margaret Harshaw and Albert Da Costa, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students, Act I of "Die Walkure" and the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger". Other noted soloists during the Shed season are Rudolf Serkin and Jocy de Oliveira, pianists; Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt, violinists; and vocalists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts, Marguerite Willauer, James Pease and David Lloyd.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • HAncock 6-9297
Variety
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Weekly Amusements
JUN 20 1956

NEW CHAMBER MUSIC GETS FROMM BACKING

Boston, June 19.

Two concerts of modern chamber music, bonus for visitors to Berkshire Festival, will be given in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 9 and 23, by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. Performers will be members of the Boston Symphony and guest artists, to be picked. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

The brace of concerts, donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Centre, will each display a work by a former student.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538
JUN 20 1956

Tanglewood Back in Business

TANGLEWOOD—The box office at the main gate of Tanglewood has been opened for the season and a brisk demand for tickets for the 1956 Berkshire Festival has been reported by Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to Aug. 12, may top all previous attendance records if subscription sales continue at the present pace, BSO officials said today. Last year the Festival drew an all-time record crowd of 136,087 persons.

Office Open Daily

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, which is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The box office will also be open Sundays commencing July 1, with the start of the 14th season of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts.

The 1956 pattern of 12 concerts by the 101-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch as conductor, will have as guest conductors this summer Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Eleazar de Carvalho and Richard Burgin. The 12 major concerts will be given over four weekends, July 20 to Aug. 12.

First Performances

Features of the Shed season will be first performances at Tanglewood of four symphonic works commissioned during the current season, the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, from noted modern composers Howard Hanson, Walter Piston, Goffredo Petrassi and Aaron Copland; and two all-Wagner programs with Metropolitan Opera stars Margaret Harshaw and Albert Da Costa, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, Act I of "Die Walkure" and the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger." Other noted soloists during the Shed season are Rudolf Serkin and Jocy de Oliveira, pianists; Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt, violinists, and vocalists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts, Marguerite Willauer, James Pease and David Lloyd.

The Berkshire Festival Shed series is preceded by two weekends of concerts by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the popular "Bach-Mozart" concerts given in the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall under the direction of Charles Munch, with Lukas Foss, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz as guest conductors.

Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts are also given during the Festival, July 4-Aug. 8, proceeds going to the Berkshire Music Center's Revolving Scholarship Fund. Benny Goodman, Rudolf Serkin, Zino Frances atti (accompanied by Artur Balsam), Margaret Harshaw, the Kroll String Quartet, the Boston Symphony String Quartet, the Brass Ensemble of the orchestra under the direction of BSO trumpeter Roger Voisin, the Beaux Arts Trio, the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet are the performers.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Cir. 1,634
JUN 20 1956

Tanglewood

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire Festival, will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to be announced. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

The brace of concerts, donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, which commences its 14th season July 2, will each display a work by a former student of the school's composition department. The Fromm Foundation concerts, to be given in addition to the Berkshire Festival's regular schedule of 24 concerts, July 4 to August 12, and also extra to the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center given during the same period, are open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357
JUN 21 1956

Around Berkshire

To Visit Trolley Museum

PITTSFIELD—A group of local enthusiasts will visit the old trolley car museum at Brandon, Conn., Sunday. The museum houses a collection of old-time trolley cars in operation and has attracted the attention of several employes of the Berkshire Street Railway company who formerly worked on trolleys here.

* * *

Mission Church 100 Years Old

SOUTH LEE—The Church of the Good Shepherd will observe the 100th anniversary tomorrow of its founding as a mission of St. Paul's church, Episcopal, of Stockbridge.

The church, located on Route 102, across the Housatonic from the Hurlbut Paper mill, became a diocesan mission in 1953. Its present vicar is Rev. Douglas J. Berndt, rector of St. George's church, Episcopal, of Lee.

* * *

Tanglewood Selling Tickets

LENOX—The box office at the main gate of Tanglewood has been opened for the season and a brisk demand for tickets for the 1956 Berkshire Festival has been reported by Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra. The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to Aug. 12, may top all previous attendance records if subscription sales continue at the present pace, BSO officials said today. Last year the Festival drew an all-time record crowd of 136,087 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, which is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. The box office will also be open Sunday commencing July 1, with the start of the 14th season of the Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUN 21 1956

400 To Study At Tanglewood

Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, July 4-August 12, has passed the 325 mark, Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, reports. Additional applications are being processed daily, until the full enrollment of some 400 is reached. To date, students have been enrolled from 37 states, Canada and thirteen foreign countries.

The Berkshire Music Center, founded in 1940, will open its fourteenth session on Sunuday afternoon, July 1, when students will be welcomed by Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in his capacity as director of the summer music school. Composer Aaron Copland is assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean; and Gail W. Rector, assistant manager of the orchestra, is executive secretary.

Students at Tanglewood study orchestra playing and conducting under Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, while department head Leonard Bernstein is on leave of absence; choral singing and conducting under Hugh Ross; composition from Mr. Copland and Italian modern composer Goffredo Petrassi; opera under Boris Goldovsky; or are enrolled in the Tanglewood Study Group under Ingolf Dahl. Since enrollment in the latter may be for either the full six weeks or for periods of four weeks or two weeks, applications for this department are still being accepted.

Advertiser
NEW CANAAN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,942
JUN 21 1956

Tanglewood Boxoffice Open For New Festival

A brisk demand for seats for the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is reported by Manager Thomas D. Perry, jr., with the opening of the boxoffice at the main gate at Tanglewood.

The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to August 12, anticipates a banner season, on the basis of good subscription sales. The 1955 Berkshire Festival saw an all-time attendance record of 136,087 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the boxoffice, open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The boxoffice will also be open commencing Sunday, July 1, with the start of the 14th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the festival concerts.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068
Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,675
JUN 21 1956

Box Office Opens At Tanglewood

A brisk demand for seats for the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is reported by Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., with the opening this week of the box office at the main gate at Tanglewood.

The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to August 12, anticipates a banner season, on the basis of good subscription sales. The 1955 Berkshire Festival saw an all-time attendance record of 136,087 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The box office will also be open commencing Sunday, July 1, with the start of the 14th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts.

Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt; checks and money orders should be made payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted: phone Lenox, Mass. 600.

[267]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325
JUN 21 1956

Tanglewood Offers 2 Bonus Concerts

Modern Chamber Music to Be Heard July 9 and 23

Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago to Sponsor Performances. — Each Will Contain Work by Former Student of Berkshire Music Center.— Box Office Now Open.

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire Festival, will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and noted guest artists, to be announced. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

The brace of concerts, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, which commences its fourteenth season July 2, will each display a work by a former student of the school's composition department. The Fromm Foundation concerts, to be given in addition to the Berkshire Festival's regular schedule of 24 concerts, July 4 - August 12, and also extra to the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center given during the same period, are open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday evening, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quintet" by Ben Weber of New York city; and "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn., a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1953, and a faculty member of the Hartford College of Music.

The program for the second concert on Monday evening, July 23, will include music by Samuel Barber, Manuel De Falla, Darius Milhaud and Goffreda Petrassi. Mr. Petrassi, noted modern Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this summer. The commissioned works are "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of The University of Chicago's Music Department; and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a. m. to 5:00 p.m. The box office will also be open commencing Sunday, July 1. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt: checks and money orders should be made payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted: phone Lenox 600.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • HAncock 6-9297

Variety
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Weekly Amusements

JUN 20 1956

NEW CHAMBER MUSIC GETS FROMM BACKING

Boston, June 19.

Two concerts of modern chamber music, bonus for visitors to Berkshire Festival, will be given in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 9 and 23, by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. Performers will be members of the Boston Symphony and guest artists, to be picked. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

The brace of concerts, donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Centre, will each display a work by a former student.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

JUN 20 1956

Tanglewood Back in Business

TANGLEWOOD—The box office at the main gate of Tanglewood has been opened for the season and a brisk demand for tickets for the 1956 Berkshire Festival has been reported by Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to Aug. 12, may top all previous attendance records if subscription sales continue at the present pace, BSO officials said today. Last year the Festival drew an all-time record crowd of 136,087 persons.

Office Open Daily

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, which is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The box office will also be open Sundays commencing July 1, with the start of the 14th season of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts.

The 1956 pattern of 12 concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch as conductor, will have as guest conductors this summer Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Eleazar de Carvalho and Richard Burgin. The 12 major concerts will be given over four weekends, July 20 to Aug. 12.

First Performances

Features of the Shed season will be first performances at Tanglewood of four symphonic works commissioned during the current season, the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, from noted modern composers Howard Hanson, Walter Piston, Goffredo Petrassi and Aaron Copland; and two all-Wagner programs with Metropolitan Opera stars Margaret Harshaw and Albert Da Costa, other soloists and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, Act I of "Die Walkure" and the opening and final scene of Act III of "Die Meistersinger." Other noted soloists during the Shed season are Rudolf Serkin and Jocy de Oliveira, pianists; Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt, violinists, and vocalists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts, Marguerite Willauer, James Pease and David Lloyd.

The Berkshire Festival Shed series is preceded by two weekends of concerts by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the popular "Bach-Mozart" concerts given in the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall under the direction of Charles Munch, with Lukas Foss, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz as guest conductors.

Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts are also given during the Festival, July 4-Aug. 8, proceeds going to the Berkshire Music Center's Revolving Scholarship Fund. Benny Goodman, Rudolf Serkin, Zino Frances atti (accompanied by Artur Balsam), Margaret Harshaw, the Kroll String Quartet, the Boston Symphony String Quartet, the Brass Ensemble of the orchestra under the direction of BSO trumpeter Roger Voisin, the Beaux Arts Trio, the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet are the performers.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Cir. 1,634

JUN 20 1956

Tanglewood

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire Festival, will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to be announced. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

The brace of concerts, donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, which commences its 14th season July 2, will each display a work by a former student of the school's composition department. The Fromm Foundation concerts, to be given in addition to the Berkshire Festival's regular schedule of 24 concerts, July 4 to August 12, and also extra to the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center given during the same period, are open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,357

JUN 21 1956

Around Berkshire

To Visit Trolley Museum

PITTSFIELD—A group of local enthusiasts will visit the old trolley car museum at Brandon, Conn., Sunday. The museum houses a collection of old-time trolley cars in operation and has attracted the attention of several employes of the Berkshire Street Railway company who formerly worked on trolleys here.

* * *

Mission Church 100 Years Old

SOUTH LEE—The Church of the Good Shepherd will observe the 100th anniversary tomorrow of its founding as a mission of St. Paul's church, Episcopal, of Stockbridge.

The church, located on Route 102, across the Housatonic from the Hurlbut Paper mill, became a diocesan mission in 1953. Its present vicar is Rev. Douglas J. Berndt, rector of St. George's church, Episcopal, of Lee.

* * *

Tanglewood Selling Tickets

LENOX—The box office at the main gate of Tanglewood has been opened for the season and a brisk demand for tickets for the 1956 Berkshire Festival has been reported by Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra. The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to Aug. 12, may top all previous attendance records if subscription sales continue at the present pace, BSO officials said today. Last year the Festival drew an all-time record crowd of 136,087 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, which is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. The box office will also be open Sunday commencing July 1, with the start of the 14th season of the Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUN 21 1956

400 To Study At Tanglewood

Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, July 4-August 12, has passed the 325 mark, Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, reports. Additional applications are being processed daily until the full enrollment of some 400 is reached. To date, students have been enrolled from 37 states, Canada and thirteen foreign countries.

The Berkshire Music Center, founded in 1940, will open its fourteenth session on Sunuday afternoon, July 1, when students will be welcomed by Dr. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in his capacity as director of the summer music school. Composer Aaron Copland is assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean; and Gail W. Rector, assistant manager of the orchestra, is executive secretary.

Students at Tanglewood study orchestra playing and conducting under Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra of Rio de Janeiro, while department head Leonard Bernstein is on leave of absence; choral singing and conducting under Hugh Ross; composition from Mr. Copland and Italian modern composer Goffredo Petrassi; opera under Boris Goldovsky; or are enrolled in the Tanglewood Study Group under Ingolf Dahl. Since enrollment in the latter may be for either the full six weeks or for periods of four weeks or two weeks, applications for this department are still being accepted.

Advertiser
NEW CANAAN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,942

JUN 21 1956

Tanglewood Boxoffice Open For New Festival

A brisk demand for seats for the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is reported by Manager Thomas D. Perry, jr., with the opening of the boxoffice at the main gate at Tanglewood.

The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to August 12, anticipates a banner season, on the basis of good subscription sales. The 1955 Berkshire Festival saw an all-time attendance record of 136,087 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the boxoffice, open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The boxoffice will also be open commencing Sunday, July 1, with the start of the 14th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the festival concerts.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-0068

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,675

JUN 21 1956

Box Office Opens At Tanglewood

A brisk demand for seats for the 1956 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., is reported by Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., with the opening this week of the box office at the main gate at Tanglewood.

The six-week season of 24 concerts, from July 4 to August 12, anticipates a banner season on the basis of good subscription sales. The 1955 Berkshire Festival saw an all-time attendance record of 136,087 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The box office will also be open commencing Sunday, July 1, with the start of the 14th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts.

Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt; checks and money orders should be made payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted: phone Lenox, Mass., 600.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325

JUN 21 1956

Tanglewood Offers 2 Bonus Concerts

Modern Chamber Music to Be Heard July 9 and 23

Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago to Sponsor Performances. — Each Will Contain Work by Former Student of Berkshire Music Center.— Box Office Now Open.

Two concerts of modern chamber music, a bonus for visitors to the Berkshire Festival, will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox on July 9 and 23 under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. The performers will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and noted guest artists, to be announced. Each program will include two compositions commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

The brace of concerts, generously donated by Paul Fromm to the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony, which commences its fourteenth season July 2, will each display a work by a former student of the school's composition department. The Fromm Foundation concerts, to be given in addition to the Berkshire Festival's regular schedule of 24 concerts, July 4 - August 12, and also extra to the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center given during the same period, are open on a non-reserved seat basis to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center whose contributions help support the music school, and to the general public.

Music by Benjamin Britten, Igor Stravinsky and Aaron Copland will be performed on Monday evening, July 9, with Mr. Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, as pianist in his own trio, "Vitebsk." The commissioned works are "Serenade for String Quintet" by Ben Weber of New York city; and "Sabrina Fair," a suite of songs for tenor, strings and piano by Alvin Epstein of Hartford, Conn., a Crofts Scholarship student of Mr. Copland at Tanglewood in 1953, and a faculty member of the Hartford College of Music.

The program for the second concert on Monday evening, July 23, will include music by Samuel Barber, Manuel De Falla, Darius Milhaud and Goffreda Petrassi. Mr. Petrassi, noted modern Italian composer, is guest teacher of composition in the Berkshires this summer. The commissioned works are "Quintet for Bassoon and Strings" by Leland Smith of The University of Chicago's Music Department; and "Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) for soprano and eight instruments by Cuban composer Julian Orbon of Havana, a 1946 Tanglewood composition student.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a. m. to 5:00 p.m. The box office will also be open commencing Sunday, July 1. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt: checks and money orders should be made payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted: phone Lenox 600.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,679
JUN 22 1956

WEEKLY CALENDAR

A schedule of places to go and things to do in The Bee's area

Music

The New Haven Pops Concerts, Tuesdays, June 26, through August 28. Opening night, "Porgy and Bess"; July 10, Duke Ellington; July 24, Eileen Farrell; July 31, John Raitt; August 14, Roger Williams; August 28, Rise Stevens.

Washington Depot Piano Center, Sunday, July 1, at 3:15 p.m. Grant Horne will play the piano; Percy Kalt, first violin, of the string quartet; Rhoda Soren, second violin; Donald Brody, viola and Julius Scheier, cello. No admission.

Van Voorhis Bowl, Paper Mill Road, New Milford, two evening concerts, July 4 and 5. Eric Simon of Sherman, well-known clarinetist and faculty member of the Mannes College of Music, New York City will conduct this series of "Merryall Serenades". Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform wind instrument works by classical and modern composers. Highlights of the program will be performances by Samuel Mayes, solo cellist of the Boston Symphony and Margot Staglioni, soprano. Tickets at Cassedy's, Main Street, New Milford.

Connecticut Symphony Orchestra Summer Pops series, Fairfield University Field, opens on Friday, July 6, with Gustave Haenschen conducting. Representing Newtown for tickets sales and reservations is Mrs Charles Schuck of Kings Highway, Westport.

Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra from July 4 to August 12 in Theatre-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Two concerts of modern chamber music, July 9 and July 23. For concert information write Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

26, "King John"; Wednesday, June 27, "Measure for Measure". Performances at 8:30. For information call Stratford, EDison 7-4457.

Oakdale Musical Theatre, Wallingford, the musical play "The King and I" now showing will continue through July 7. Call New Haven, ATwater 8-0639.

Starlight Theatre, Pawling, N. Y. Season opens June 26, with play "Anastasia", starring Carol Van Der Mier. Performances, evenings at 8:30, Tuesday through Sunday, matinee Wednesday at 2:30 Seats 95 cents to $2.45; matinees 50 cents to $1.30. Phone PAwling 5711 or 3171.

Town Players Little Theatre, Orchard Hill Road, South Center, Newtown, July 4 through July 7 and July 13 and 14, "The Rainmaker". Performances at 8:30 p.m. For ticket information call Mrs Gilpin, Newtown, GArden 6-2763.

White Barn, Westport opens season on July 8 with "Adam" and a one-act opera "Apollo and Persephone". Call Westport CApital 7-3768.

7/29/56

Tanglewood-Type Festival In Sarasota Urged

By LAWRENCE DAME

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. — It was like old times to be up in these music - saturated green hills of Western Massachusetts. The Berkshire Music Festival has swung into full rhythm, with both Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra at various times for good measure, and thousands of visitors, including not a few from Sarasota with the music contingent headed by Alexander and Mrs. Bloch, are very much in evidence.

I say it was like old times because in 1937, when the beautiful Tanglewood estate was given for festival purposes, I wrote one of the first stories about a project, now eminently successful, which then seemed dubious to many skeptics.

It was impossible to sit listening today to one of the world's greatest orchestras without thinking of the late Serge Koussevitzky, its longtime conductor, whom I knew personally when he was in his prime driving away at the Tanglewood idea.

Nor could it have been possible to sit in the music shed and not wish that Sarasota might have a music festival based on the Tanglewood idea. Something that would bring the best of performers to our bayside city, and thousands of visitors as well, in a carnival of the arts which we are fitted better than any other place in Florida to present.

This is a mere suggestion which I hope will bear some fruit. I can hear lots of Sarasotans say, "It couldn't be done here." Some might point to the Florida West Coast Symphony and say that is enough. Yet the West Coast Symphony, which has done such a remarkable job over the years, would make a marvelous nucleus for bigger and better musical treats on a more varied scale than Sarasota has ever known before.

Harking back to the beginnings of Tanglewood—now a self-supporting world-famous festival—I recall that there were plenty of people in these hills who said, "It can't be done. It's too far from New York. Where would we get the musicians? Where would the money come from?"

Yet there is something about the atmosphere in the Berkshires —where it either rains, fogs up or gets infernally hot in summer — that is conducive to the welfare of the Muse of Harmony. Summer folks from Philadelphia, Boston and New York had long enjoyed chamber music there on a small scale. In 1934, the idea of a music festival grew into action. Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, a Stockbridge dowager still to be seen with distinguished guests at her festival box, lent her energy and vision to the undertaking. Henry Hadley supported the movement and conducted New York Philharmonic players in the first concerts.

Two years later, Hadley fell ill. The project might have died but for the persistence of Miss Robinson Smith and a growing number of supporters. Most of them, however, could not possibly imagine where a new conductor would be found.

"Why not ask Koussevitzky?" someone asked.

People oh-ed and ah-ed, for Koussevitzky, a natural autocrat aloof and austere when not on the podium, seemed as remote and difficult to reach as a diety of Olympus.

Yet, surprisingly enough, when the Berkshire committee plucked up enough courage to ask, he brightened and accepted. For years he had dreamed of a music center in the country where talented young people could further their training. He wanted a place outside Boston where new works commissioned for his beloved orchestra could be presented in summer. And he felt that his players would perform even better if they had a vernal shift from the familiar urban site.

So it became a happy combination of Berkshire Festival and Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Never will the first Koussevitsky season be forgotten. In this variable mountain climate, a huge orange-colored tent went up to protect audience and musicians from sudden showers. It worked very well indeed until the first concert of the second week, when an all-Wagnerian program was to be presented.

The night, I remember, was a threatening one. Yet the tent and the lawns held some 4,000 of us, equipped, it seemed, for any caprice of the elements.

In the middle of the awe-inspiring program, Nature decided to stage a rival show. The heavens opened. Thunderous as Koussevitsky and Wagner could be when joined, an electrical storm provided even more tumult of quite a different kind.

No man to brook interruption in his projects, Koussevitzky was nonetheless forced to lower his baton from time to time and even halt completely the brasses and other instruments striving so valiantly to outdo the storm. He glared in his imperious manner at the out-of-doors, where the flood of floods seemed forming. He even stalked off the platform in a rage.

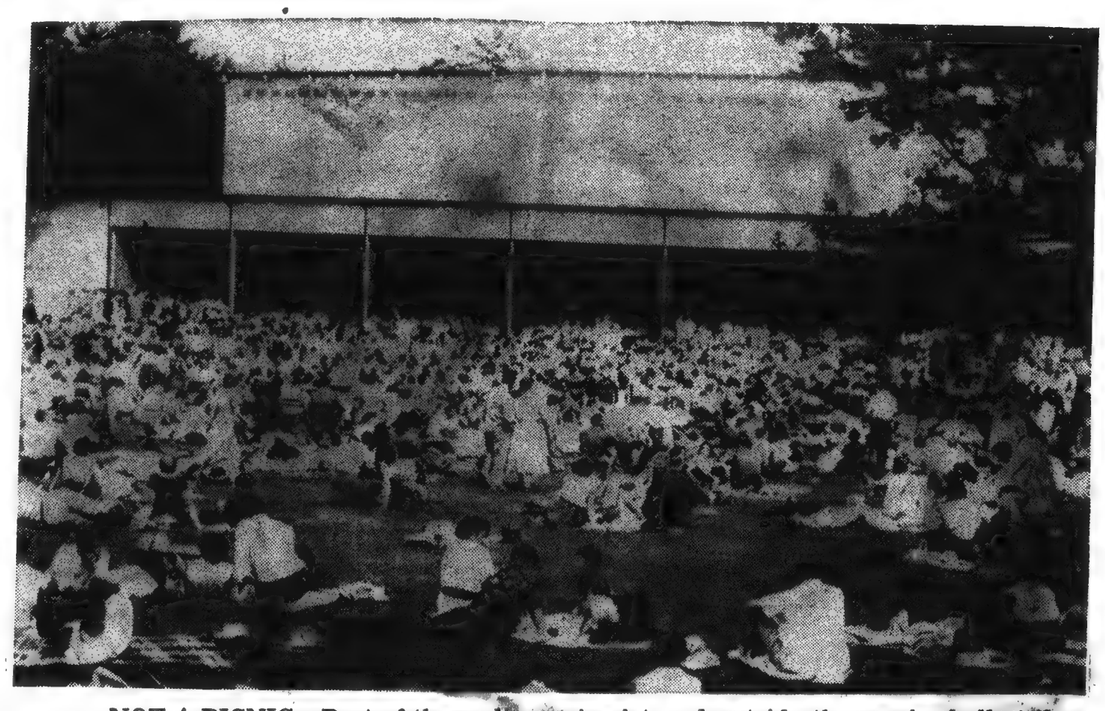
Eventually, as we all got soaked, the electrical tempest won. The concert had to be called off. It was not safe to approach Koussevitzky on the subject for several days.

Yet it all turned out to the good. Berkshire citizens who had thought a tent good enough became convinced that fateful night that a permanent steel and wooden shell would have to be erected. Twenty thousand dollars toward the cost was contributed by that historical storm audience. The Berkshire Festival entered its greatest phase which seems destined to last eternally.

Koussevitzky's dream of a music center is now reality. Four hundred students spend six weeks here for intensive instruction under such masters as Aaron Copland. Martinu, Sessions, Milhaud, Honegger and Hindemith are only a few of those who have come here to teach youth. From Japan, Finland, Italy, France and Latin America, as well as from the 48 states, students flock to get instruction of a calibre not attainable elsewhere.

As for the concerts, which include student concerts as well as the professional programs, they attract more than 130,000 visitors a summer season. They have given the Berkshire Hills a new atmosphere and a new economy.

Could it be done in Sarasota? I say yes! As here, any larger musical project for Florida would have to be started on a minor scale. It would entail great difficulties. It would mean the exercise of vision and imagination as well as hard work on the part of those few who always have to spark fine enterprises. They said it couldn't be done in the Berkshires. In succeeding articles, you will judge for yourself how well it has been done.



NOT A PICNIC—Part of the audience is pictured outside the music shell at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass. Often there are as many music lovers on the grass as there are inside the structure, which holds 6,000.

[26]

DE CARVALHO BRILLIANT AT TANGLEWOOD

Presents Exciting Concert; Wife Makes Her North American Debut

WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 3—There have been, during this season, some very fine concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, but tonight we heard the most exciting concert to date. The conductor was the Brazilian genius Eleazar De Carvalho, who has not been here since five years ago when he was a student here. The soloist was his wife, Jooey De Oliverira, pianist, who was making her North American debut.

Colorful Performance

Listening to the playing tonight, we got the impression that just for a little while, Mr. Carvalho had gotten the members of the Boston Symphony to almost believing they were South Americans. For sheer color, rhythmic excitement and magnificent rhythms, they turned in performances which caught the audience as few others have this season.

The program opened with a stunning performance of "La Kermesse" from the ballet of the same name by Henry Barraud. He is a Frenchman, born in Bordeaux. The work is of the kind which trolls along at relentless pace, taking in all the resources of the orchestra on the way.

When someone like Carvalho undertakes to bring to the North American audiences dances from "The Three Cornored Hat" by De Falla, the result can be a triumph for both orchestra and conductor. So it was tonight. From the first suave, insinuating dance, to the last note of the brilliant, rhythmically exciting finale, Mr. Carvalho made his orchestra sing, speak, and shout to the intense enthusiasm of the audience.

Miss Oliverira, handsomely gowned in scarlet, chose to make her North American debut in the Ravel piano concerto. This work gave her ample opportunity to reveal her technical abilities, which are very considerable, and her interpretive gifts, equally considerable. She has a flexible technique, no great forcefulness, but her intelligent approach makes up for such deficiency. In the lengthy solo in the second movement, she revealed an ability to color phrases expressively and her tone, always pure, stood out against orchestral accompaniment. In the final presto, she lacked the power to make the sheer brilliance of the piano stand out, but it was playing so clean, so finely in vein, that, together with the orchestra, the movement came off with real brilliance. Her impact on the audience was instantaneous, even before her husband kissed her hand, and she was recalled a number of times so that she may feel she had a success.

Complete "Petrouchka"

The final work on the program was the complete "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky. One hears mostly an abbreviated version of the suite and it can be said that such an abbreviation would not have been out of place tonight. Stravinsky, in the days of "Petrouchka," had considerable to say, and said it at some length, but like many of his works, repeated hearings do not always excite the listener. Mr. Carvalho labored mightily over the four scenes and succeeded in adjusting them to a tremendously dramatic whole.

Tomorrow night Leonard Bernstein makes his only appearance with the orchestra, conducting the annual memorial concert in honor of Serge Koussevitzky. The program will open with the Kyrie and Gloria from the "Mass in C Minor" by Mozart and "Symphony No. 5" by Prokofieff, which Koussevitzky premiered in this country. Soloists for the mass will include Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCullum, tenor. The festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross will also be heard.

Sunday afternoon Zino Francescatti will be heard in the Tschaikowsky violin concerto under the direction of Charles Munch. Continuing the celebration of the

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 3 1956

Biggest Crowds of the Season Expected at Festival Weekend

Eleazar de Carvalho Will Conduct BSO Tonight With His Wife as Piano Soloist—Koussevitzky Memorial Tomorrow Evening

TANGLEWOOD — With good weather predicted for the weekend, the largest crowds of the season are expected to attend the three Berkshire Festival concerts which open tonight with Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed. His wife, the Brazilian pianist, Jocy de Oliveira, will make her North American debut tonight as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major by Ravel.

Tomorrow night, Leonard Bernstein will make his only appearance at the Festival when he will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, musical director and founder of the Berkshire Music Center and BSO conductor for 25 years.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Dr. Charles Munch will return to the podium in a concert which will bring the violinist Zino Francescatti to the Shed as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto.

Mr. de Carvahlo, artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, returned to Tanglewood this summer after a five-year absence as acting head of the department of orchestra and conductor of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tonight's Program

For tonight's program, which starts at 8:30, he has scheduled a suite fro mthe ballet "La Kermess" by Henri Barraud in its first Tanglewood performance, and also three dances from the ballet, "The Three Cornered Hat," by Manuel de Falla and the complete score of Stravinsky's ballet, "Petrouchka."

Since his last guest-conducting appearance at the Berkshire Festival in 1951, de Carvalho has conducted primarily in his own country and in Europe, especially in Paris, London and Berlin. In addition to his post with the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, Mr. de Carvalho is general director of the Juventude Musical Brasileira (Brazilian Musical Youth), a society which he founded in 1952. Recognized as a public utility in Brazil and sponsored by the Ministry of Education and Culture, the society in 1955 brought the musical education of some 75,000 Brazilian youngsters under its supervision. At the conclusion of the current season at the Berkshire Festival, Mr. de Carvalho will return to Brazil for two weeks with his orchestra. In September, with Herbert von Karajan and Karl Bohm, he will conduct the Berlin Philharmonic during the Festival of Berlin.

Miss de Oliveira, a native of the state of Parana in Brazil, studied in Sao Paulo until she was 17, then went to Paris to study with Mme Marguerite Long. In 1954 and 1955 she was several times soloist with the Brazil Symphony Orchestra playing Liszt's Second Piano Concerto, Ravel's G major Concerto and Beethoven's Third Concerto in Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo and other Brazilian cities. She made her European debut during the 1955-1956 season, playing the Ravel Concerto with the Belgian National Orchestra in Brussels, and this led to appearances in Germany, France, Italy and Switzerland. Among her engagements for next season will be concerts with the Belgian National Orchestra, the Lamoureux and National Radio Orchestra in Paris, and recitals in Hanover, Berlin, Hamburg and Hamel.

Public Rehearsal

A bonus for Festival visitors tomorrow morning will be the third of this season's four Saturday morning open rehearsals by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for which a nominal admission charge of $1 is made. The proceeds will benefit the pension fund of the orchestra.

Remaining tickets for tonight's concert, as well as all those remaining in the Berkshire Festival, which ends a week from Sunday, Aug. 12, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office. Telephone reservations are accepted.

Petrovec

TONIGHT'S HEADLINERS at the Festival concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed will be Eleazar deCarvalho, conductor, and his wife, concert pianist Jocy de Oliveira, who will be the soloist in Ravel's Piano Concerto. The concert will open at 8:30.

11,104 IN TRIBUTE TO KOUSSEVITSKY AT TANGLEWOOD

Memorial Concert Draws Season's Peak Audience; Artists Excel

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 4—The Berkshire Music Festival reached its peak audience tonight when 11,104 people crowded the shed and spacious lawns to hear the concert in memory of Serge Koussevitsky. Eeach year since his death, there has been such a memorial concert and each concert has been directed by Leonard Bernstein, protege of Koussevitzky and now one of the most significant figures in American music.

It was eminently appropriate that Mr. Bernstein should choose to present the Kyrie and Gloria from the "Mass in C Minor" by Mozart.

Favorite of Late Conductor

It contains some of the finest music ever written and was a favorite work of the great conductor. All the resources of the festival were on hand to pay tribute to the beloved founder of the festival. This year the festival chorus, directed by Hugh Ross, is exceptionally fine and the excellent soloists were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum. Then there was the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing for Mr. Bernstein as it used to play for Koussevitzky.

It was a stupendous performance, finely detailed and directed with consummate authority. The chorus singing was excellent. Particularly impressive was the "Cum Sancto Spiritu," a fully developed fugue which was sung with clarity and sense of spaciousness.

Soloists Excel

Miss Curtin sang with clarity and flexibility the taxing air in the "Christe Eleison" and Miss Alberts, singing better than we have heard her in many years, was admirable in the "Laudamus Te." The duet by the two women, "Dominus Deus," was the offering of two fine-voiced musicians. In the "Auaniam Tu Solus Sanctus," the women were joined by tenor John McCollum. There was impassioned choral singing in the Gloria, particularly the repeated utterance of "Miserere." The orchestra was in its best estate and Mr. Bernstein held all forces together, bending them to his will.

Prokofieff's "Symphony No. 5" was written in 1944 and its American premiere was given by Dr. Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Although Mr. Prokofieff insisted this was pure music, without program, he did say that "It is a symphony about the spirit of man."

Vivid Reading Given

Mr. Bernstein provided a vivid, authoritative reading, one in which the melodies were made clearly expressive and the underlying thought of brutal warfare which permeates the finale was clearly realized. There were magnificent climaxes and moments of tenderness in the broad constructive scheme of this symphony. It is impressive in its rhythmic and melodic contrasts and there is melody aplenty for Prokofieff was a melodist at heart, even when writing with his tongue in his cheek.

An audience which had already given the performance of the Kyrie and Floria a tremendous ovation, unleashed its applause again after the symphony, and with reason.

Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. Charles Munch will direct the orchestra in a program which will include the Tschiakowsky violin concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist.

Robert Schumann's second symphony will be played in memory of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program will open with a "Symphonic Ode" by Aaron Copland, a work revised for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra.

Final Concerts Aug. 8-10-11-12

Four concerts during the coming week—a recital on Wednesday evening (August 8) in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three week-end concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 10 and 11) and Sunday afternoon (August 12) by the full 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed—will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on Aug. 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m.)

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening (August 10) concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening (August 11); and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon (August 12) with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease as Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (August 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Oveture; the late Georges Enesco's Suuite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersinger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, August 9, with demonstratoins at 6:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 4 1956

Music

De Carvalho Triumphs at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE RETURN of Eleazar de Carvalho to the podium of the Boston Symphony Orchestra last night in the Shed at Tanglewood had been anticipated with great eagerness by all who had last heard him conduct there five years ago.

As one of the late Serge Koussevitzky's most favored proteges, Tanglewood audiences had cometo know him as a conductor of talent and personal charm. The growth in his general musical grasp and conducting technique during his short absence from Tanglewood has been enormous.

Carvalho's program, except for the Ravel piano concerto in which his handsome young wife, Jocy de Oliveiro, was the soloist, was entirely ballet music. While this was both exciting and entertaining, so far as an appraisal of Carvalho was concerned, it showed but one side of him, but that was of a now mature and able conductor.

Jocy de Oliveira

* * *

THE MAIN WORK of the evening was Stravinsky's burlesque "Petrouchka." He had started with a short [illegible] from the ballet "La Kermesse", of a contemporary French [illegible], new to Tanglewood, Henri Barraud, and then proceeded to three dances from De Falla's "Three Cornered Hat." This [illegible] work, as "Petrouchka" [illegible] inspiration of the [illegible] Diaghilev days in Paris when the famous Russian impresario and enterpreneur was scattering commissions around like embryo stars which were later to expand into musical planets.

* * *

BARRAUD'S SCENE was vivid and colorful, but without relief in orchestration, rhythm, or dynamics. Some of its sounded like the music we are accustomed to hearing with movies of pageantry. The De Falla was welcomed in its own right and, in addition, as a contrast in every aspect from the preceding agile bulkiness. "El Sombrero" was gay and witty, light and vivacious.

Carvalho played the entire "Petrouchka" in the revised version, done by the composer in 1947. The conductor was in easy command at all times and it was a joy to see the manner in which his indications to the orchestra conveyed the spirit of the music to the audience without excessive histrionic gyrations. Gone are the indications of the obvious details which, to an orchestra of the virtuosity and experience of the Boston Symphony are redundant, to say the least. Once settled temporarily but securely in a recurring pattern, Carvalho let the orchestra play and he seemed to enjoy those moments as much as those who came to listen. For he has now become a music maker and is no longer concerned only with elementary precision.

* * *

STRAVINSKY'S story got a dramatic and graphic performance. The orchestra played with exceptional bravura and the conductor pointed out several individuals whose assignments had been so ably discharged, notably pianist Bernard Zighera, whose depiction of the puppet's dance was bright and virile. Carvalho got a well-deserved ovation and was recalled and "bravoed" in old-time Tanglewood style.

Eleazar de Carvalho

Ravel's concerto has a dance flavor, too. Except for the floating mood of the central slow movement, it is decidedly of American jazz influence. The petite Miss de Oliveira caught the impulse of the music very well but her physical resources limited her from giving the muscular effort by which the concerto comes to complete fruition.

The soloist was a pupil of Marguerite Long to whom the concerto is dedicated and who was its first performer, in Paris in January of 1932. If our memory serves us well, Carvalho was a more sensitive conductor of the accompaniment last night than was the composer himself on that historic occasion.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 4 1956

Scholarships To Be Awarded In Name of Festival Founder

Board Members Pay Tribute to Miss Robinson Smith in Final Action Before Dissolving Organization

The scholarships established by the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. for the Pittsfield Community Music School and the Berkshire Music Center will be known as the Gertrude Robinson Smith Scholarships, Laurence F. Connor, chairman of the finance committee of the organization, announced today.

This action was taken by the board members, following a recent meeting at Miss Robinson Smith's home, when the trustees voted to dissolve and granted $5,000 for scholarships to the Music Center and about $20,000 to the Community Music School.

The $5,000 grant to the Berkshire Music Center Revolving Scholarship Fund will be placed in an account to be known as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Scholarship Fund, the income of which will be used for scholarships to be awarded to students of conducting. These scholarships will be known as the Gertrude Robinson Smith Scholarships.

Hope for Matching Funds

In making the grant to the Music Center, the Berkshire Symphonic Festival trustees expressed the hope that this amount will be matched by the Rockefeller Foundation grant and that this matching fund will become an integral part of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Fund.

"This is proposed in order that the name of this great Festival, founded in our Berkshires, shall remain alive and be an inspiration for all students receiving scholarships," the trustees said.

The balance of the financial assets of the corporation, which may approximate $20,000, will be held in trust for the Pittsfield Community Music School at the Agricultural National Bank, with the bank president, along with two or more members of the board of the Community Music School, serving as trustees.

For Instrumental Students

In announcing the ways in which the board voted to distribute the funds today, the trustees expressed "the wish" connected with the $20,000 grant "that the board of the Pittsfield Community Music School be free to give one or more scholarships each year to those scholars they deem sufficiently talented and that they may decide quite freely when and how these students are to benefit. It would also be the wish that the board of the Pittsfield Community Music School award these scholarships to instrumental students and that these scholarships be known as the Gertrude Robinson Smith Scholarships.

"The board of trustees of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival wish this gift to be free of 'all strings' in order that with changing conditions in the years to come, the persons then in charge of the Community Music School may act and decide in accordance with then existing conditions. It is to be hoped that the total sum donated may be considered as capital and that only the income will be used for scholarships. Should any person or persons in the future care to make a [illegible] this fund, it [illegible] provided the name of the scholarship fund is in no way changed.

Miss [illegible] was the prime mover behind the establishment of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival in 1934, and the organization's only president. The Berkshire organization first hired the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky as conductor, to give concerts here in 1936 at Holmwood, now the Foxhollow School, after operating the Festival for two years in an open horse show ring at the Dan Hanna Farm in Interlaken, now the Stockbridge School.

Built $100,000 Shed

The following year, when the Festival moved to Tanglewood, the Berkshire Symphonic Festival launched a drive for $100,000 to build the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Berkshire County residents gave a total of $57,724, of which $34,460 came from the summer residents of Lee, Lenox, Great Barrington, Pittsfield, Stockbridge and Williamstown. Festival trustees alone donated $36,110 of the total amount raised. Eighty-one per cent of the money collected came from donors within 50 miles of Stockbridge.

After the first Shed concerts in the summer of 1938, the Festival showed a profit which was divided between the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival, marking the first time the BSO had received any sum over and above the regular fee.

Split $51,886 Profit

Before the outbreak of World War II, the Festival season in 1941 set a new attendance record at Tanglewood up to that time, and the net income of $51,886.83 was split between the Festival and BSO.

In 1945 the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. ended its joint operation with the BSO at Tanglewood and gave to the Boston Symphony trustees the Music Shed. Since that time the Berkshire organization had been inactive, except for sponsoring the publication of a book, giving the history of the Festival, titled "Music Under the Moon," by John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of The Eagle.

Last month the trustees of the Festival voted to dissolve before Dec. 31, 1956, and wrote into the final record their "expression of appreciation and gratitude to Gertrude Robinson Smith, the president, for her imagination and foresight in organizing and establishing this great Festival, and for leading the Berkshire community to a richer cultural and economic life."

TIGHT BINDING

Vogue June 1956

The Tanglewood festival opens at Lenox, Massachusetts, in the Berkshire Hills on July 4. These Boston Symphony concerts—Koussevitzky's fabulous legacy to music in America—attract around ten thousand people a night. Other diversions are: top jazz concerts at Music Inn; the Lenox Library with a fine selection of records as well as books (small concert hall attached); the stately home of Edith Wharton built from designs by Sir Christopher Wren; and the Stockbridge Playhouse and the dance festival at Jacob's Pillow.

During this time it is hard to find good accommodations. Those in the know and who know members, try for the Edwardian comfort of the Lenox Club. And there is the sumptuous Elm Court, once the house of an old-guard summer resident, now the Brooks's home, which has such guests as conductor Charles Munch.

Nearby, in the elm-lined village of Stockbridge, is the white wooden Red Lion Inn (well-run but noisy until the new track route is finished), and Miss Buck's, a nice boarding house (but few baths).

Further away, in the pretty village of South Egremont—the Egremont Tavern is a small New England inn, its annex an old mill by a mountain brook.

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Mozart Draws 2,200 at Lenox

Lenox, Mass., July 13—Three concertos, three performers and three pianos describes quantitatively the order of musical fare here Friday night at the Tanglewood Estate, home of the Berkshire Festival.

The delight of the evening, qualitatively can only be measured, however, by those courageous listeners who braved dampness and rain to attend the all-Mozart program presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the three participating artists.

Within the music's limited range the program offered considerable variety. Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, husband-and-wife duopianists, top artists of the genre, participated in two of the concertos. Boris Goldovsky played a solo concerto, was the third pianist for the three-piano concerto, and conducted most of the concert. Luboshutz was on the podium for the Concerto in A Major, K.488, in which Goldovsky was the soloist. The latter conducted the three-piano work from his instrument. He also opened the concert with a buoyant performance of three movements from the charming Symphonie in D Major, K. 320 and closed it with the Rondo from the Concerto in D Major, K. 382.

Nobody could deny that this was a versatile trio and skilled too. Miss Nemenoff had no chance to display other gifts than her interpretative art as a member of the team, but she more than compensated in personality and lovingness for her lack of varied opportunity.

Originally scheduled for the small Theater-Concert Hall which seats 1,200, the management decided four hours before the program was to start to hold it instead in the 6,000-seat Music Shed. Announcements were sent out over the air to this effect with the result that over a thousand additional customers, who would otherwise have overflowed onto the grass and the weather been good, sat in the shed and enjoyed the music undampened.

The Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos and Orchestra K. 242, benefited from an excellent performance by the trio, particularly enhanced by the silken tone, imaginative coloring and sensitive understandings of Luboshutz and Nemenoff as the most important solo participants. Goldovsky, himself a creditable pianist though obviously not as dedicated as the former two, was a worthy adjunct to them.

Primarily a conductor, he associated with mastery whenever he had the opportunity, as also did Luboshutz.

Luboshutz and Miss Nemenoff closed the concert with an inspiring rendition of the Concerto in E Flat Major for Two Pianos and Orchestra, K. 365.

Weather permitting, the two all-Bach concerts remaining for the week-end will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall. The four coming weeks of orchestral concerts in the big shed will open Friday, July 20, with the full complement of the 105 strong Boston Symphony, playing under the direction of Charles Munch.

HOLIDAY MAGAZINE
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
JUL 1956

NORTH AMERICA

Calendar of Summer Events

United States

June 7–Sept. 2. MUNICIPAL OPERA, St. Louis, Mo. Eleven Broadway musicals including Student Prince, Peter Pan, Kismet, and Kiss Me, Kate.

June 9–24. BOSTON ART FESTIVAL, Public Garden, Boston. Outdoor exhibitions of painting, sculpture, crafts, architecture; ballet, concerts, poetry, opera, drama. Nationally known artists.

June 23–Sept. [illegible] COMMON GLORY, Williamsburg, [illegible]. Outdoor symphonic drama of early America.

June 26–Sept. [illegible] INSTITUTE, Aspen, Col. Lectures, forums on Great Ideas of Western Man led by nation's top scholars; concerts, recreation, films.

June 29–30. Men's U.S. OLYMPIC TRACK AND FIELD TRIALS, Los Angeles. Competition to select U.S. representatives to World Olympic Games in Australia.

June 30–July 5. DOUGH FESTIVAL, Daytona Beach, Fla. Talent and beauty contest, water-ski show, fireworks, children's events.

June 30–Sept. 1 CENTRAL CITY FESTIVAL, Central City, Col. Puccini's La Tosca and world premiere of Ballad of Baby Doe, by Douglas Moore.

July 2–4. SOUTHWEST ALL-INDIAN POW-WOW, Flagstaff, Ariz. Over 10,000 Southwestern Indians in parades, ceremonials, rodeos.

July 2–Aug. 24. CHAUTAUQUA INSTITUTION, Chautauqua, N.Y. Concerts, lectures, drama, opera, summer school, recreation.

July 3–5. BLACK HILLS ROUND-UP, Belle Fourche, S.D. Rodeo with bareback riding, saddle bucking, bull riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, wild-horse race, dog acts, parades.

July 4. PIKES PEAK AUTO HILL CLIMB, Pikes Peak Highway, Colorado Springs, Col. Twelve-mile uphill race against time.

July 4. SUBURBAN HANDICAP, Belmont Park, Elmont, N.Y. America's top horses past Kentucky Derby age.

July 4–Aug. 12. BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony, Charles Münch directing. Guest artists include Monteux, Bernstein, Francescatti, Serkin.

July 5–7. AMERICAN JAZZ FESTIVAL, Newport, R.I. Jazz greats in Dixieland to Progressive; panels of jazz and classical critics, musicians and writers.

July 9–14. JUNIOR LEAGUE HORSE SHOW, Lexington, Ky. Outdoor show with leading horses from all over United States.

July 10. ALL-STAR GAME, Washington, D.C. Top players from National and American Leagues in special baseball event.

July 12–22. MISS UNIVERSE PAGEANT, Long Beach, Cal. Contest for most beautiful girl in the world.

July 16–21. VERMONT GARDEN PILGRIMAGE, at Bennington (on 16th), Manchester (17th), Woodstock (18th), Middlebury (19th), Burlington (21st).

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 17 1956

Capacity Crowd At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 15.—The Bach-Mozart concerts, which opened the first portion of the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, ended Sunday afternoon with a week-end attendance of 10,479, compared with 7,643 the previous week end, which was hard hit by inclement weather.

Sunday afternoon's audience of 3,741 and Saturday night's crowd of 4,530 filled the theater concert hall to overflowing.

Saturday night's concert by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony, with Charles Munch conducting, proved to be the most popular of the six Bach-Mozart performances when William Kroll, violinist, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appeared as soloists.

The chamber orchestra opened Saturday evening's concert with Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major, followed by the Violin Concert in F Major with Mr. Kroll as soloist. After intermission Mrs. Dwyer captivated her audience playing the flute solo in Bach's Suite No. 2 in B Minor. The evening's performance was concluded with Bach's Suite No. 3 in D Major.

Sunday afternoon's concert was devoted to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in which the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra was assisted by the festival chorus of students at the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, and five soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 18 1956

Brass Ensemble At Tanglewood

The third week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., begins at 8:30 tonight with a concert by the Boston Symphony Brass Ensemble and Margaret Harshaw, soprano, in the Theater-Concert Hall. The instrumentalists, under Roger Voisin's direction, will play sixteenth-century and modern music and Miss Harshaw will sing Wagner's five Wesendonck Songs.

The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will give its first concert in Tanglewood's Music Shed Friday night, playing the works by Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms. Saturday night's concert will be devoted to Act I of Wagner's "Die Walküre" and works of Samuel Barber and Bohuslav Martinu. Pierre Monteux will make his first Tanglewood appearance of the season this afternoon.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 16 1956

Capacity Crowd At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 15.—The Bach-Mozart concerts, which opened the first portion of the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, ended this afternoon with a week-end attendance of 10,479, compared with 7,643 the previous week end, which was hard hit by inclement weather.

This afternoon's audience of 3,741 and last night's crowd of 4,530 filled the theater concert hall to overflowing.

Last night's concert by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony, with Charles Munch conducting, proved to be the most popular of the six Bach-Mozart performances when William Kroll, violinist, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appeared as soloists.

The chamber orchestra opened Saturday evening's concert with Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major, followed by the Violin Concert in F Major with Mr. Kroll as soloist. After intermission Mrs. Dwyer captivated her audience playing the flute solo in Bach's Suite No. 2 in B Minor. The evening's performance was concluded with Bach's Suite No. 3 in D Major.

This afternoon's concert was devoted to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in which the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra was assisted by the festival chorus of students at the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, and five soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 17 1956

Capacity Crowd At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 15.—The Bach-Mozart concerts, which opened the first portion of the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, ended Sunday afternoon with a week-end attendance of 10,479, compared with 7,643 the previous week end, which was hard hit by inclement weather.

Sunday afternoon's audience of 3,741 and Saturday night's crowd of 4,530 filled the theater concert hall to overflowing.

Saturday night's concert by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony, with Charles Munch conducting, proved to be the most popular of the six Bach-Mozart performances when William Kroll, violinist, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appeared as soloists.

The chamber orchestra opened Saturday evening's concert with Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major, followed by the Violin Concert in F Major with Mr. Kroll as soloist. After intermission Mrs. Dwyer captivated her audience playing the flute solo in Bach's Suite No. 2 in B Minor. The evening's performance was concluded with Bach's Suite No. 3 in D Major.

Sunday afternoon's concert was devoted to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in which the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra was assisted by the festival chorus of students at the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, and five soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 21 1956

Music: Lenox

Full Boston Symphony Conducted by Munch

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 20—The full Boston Symphony Orchestra was on hand at Tanglewood tonight for the first time in this year's Berkshire Festival. Playing the opening of the regularly scheduled concerts in the Music Shed, the orchestra sounded as if it had had a holiday and had returned with refreshed energy and enthusiasm.

The fact is that the Bostonians have been performing steadily since last fall—in their regular winter season, the "pops" and the Esplanade concerts. Could it be that they were not only responding to the eagerness of the Tanglewood audience but also working up a head of steam over their forthcoming European tour that will take them into the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia?

If they play in Leningrad, Moscow and Prague as they played here tonight, particularly in Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite No. 2, it is a certainty that they will be a revelation.

Charles Munch, who conducted tonight, is a specialist in French music, and he gives a piece like the Ravel a shimmering web of sound held together with the utmost intensity.

Sitting up front, one felt that the tension and impact of those dazzling sonorities in the concluding Danse Generale were almost overwhelming. But there was no gainsaying the superb control with which conductor and orchestra whipped up a climax that seemed like a wild outburst of jubilation.

This was a characteristic Munch program. It began with Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" Overture that also was built up with a kind of furious exhilaration. Mr. Munch has a way of letting the mood of the moment take hold of him and guide his interpretations. This habit may lead at times to a want of repose and balance, but the lack is more than adequately compensated for by the impression that the music is newly felt and communicated.

In the Berlioz Overture, in Debussy's "Apres-Midi D'Un Faune" and in Brahms' second symphony, as well as in the Ravel Suite, Mr. Munch conducted as though he were experiencing the emotions of each piece afresh. There were touches of roughness in the Brahms symphony, but there was never a failure of vivid communication. That, in essence, is the best thing that can happen to music.

[271]

TIGHT BINDING

The Tanglewood festival opens at Lenox, Massachusetts, in the Berkshire Hills on July 4. These Boston Symphony concerts—Koussevitsky's fabulous legacy to music in America—attract around ten thousand people a night. Other diversions are: top jazz concerts at Music Inn; the Lenox Library with a fine selection of records as well as books (a small concert hall attached); the stately house Edith Wharton built from designs by Sir Christopher Wren; the Stockbridge Playhouse and the dance at Jacob's Pillow.

During this time it is hard to find good accommodations. Those in the know, and who know members, try for the Edwardian comfort of the Lenox Club. And there is the sumptuous Elm Court, once the house of an old-guard summer resident; now the brocade-hung rooms have such guests as conductor Charles Munch.

Nearby, in the elm-lined village of Stockbridge, is the large wooden Red Lion Inn (well-run but noisy until the new truck route is finished), and Miss Buck's, a nice boarding house (but few baths).

Further away is the pretty village of South Egremont—the Egremont Tavern is a small New England inn, its annex an old gristmill by a mountain brook.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 389,011 - S. 258,548
JUL 15 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

All-Mozart Draws 2,200 at Lenox

Lenox, Mass., July 13—Three concertos, three performers and three pianos describes quantitatively the order of musical fare here Friday night at the Tanglewood Estate, home of the Berkshire Festival.

The delight of the evening, qualitatively can only be measured, however, by those 2,200-plus courageous listeners who braved dampness and rain to attend the all-Mozart program presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the three collaborating artists.

Within the music's limited frame, the program offered considerable variety. Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, the eminent duo-pianists, top artists in the genre, participated in two of the concertos. Boris Goldovsky played a solo concerto, was the third pianist for the three-piano concerto, and conducted most of the concert. Luboshutz was on the podium for the Concerto in A Major, K.488, in which Goldovsky was the soloist. The latter conducted the three-piano work from his instrument. He also opened the concert with a buoyant performance of three movements from the charming Serenade in D Major, K. 320 and 320 A.

Nobody could deny that this was a versatile trio and skilled too. True, Miss Nemenoff had no chance to display other gifts than her first-rate art as a member of a team, but she more than compensated in personality and loveliness for her lack of varied opportunity.

Originally scheduled for the small Theater-Concert Hall which seats 1,200, the management decided four hours before the program was to start to hold it instead in the 6,000-seat Music Shed. Announcements were sent out over the radio to this effect with the result that over a thousand additional enthusiasts, who would ordinarily have overflowed onto the grass had the weather been good, sat in the shed and enjoyed the music undampened.

The Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos and Orchestra K. 242, benefited from an excellent performance by the trio, particularly enhanced by the silken tone, imaginative coloring and sensitive understandings of Luboshutz and Nemenoff as the most important solo participants. Goldovsky, himself a creditable pianist, though obviously not as dedicated as the former two, was a worthy adjunct to them.

Primarily a conductor, he officiated with mastery whenever he had the opportunity, as also did Luboshutz.

Luboshutz and Miss Nemenoff closed the concert with an ingratiating rendition of the Concerto in E Flat Major for Two Pianos and Orchestra, K. 365.

Weather permitting, the two-all Bach concerts remaining for the week-end will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall. The four coming weeks of orchestral concerts in the big shed will open Friday, July 20, with the full complement of the 105 strong Boston Symphony, playing under the direction of Charles Munch

Sunday Music . . .

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 16 1956

Capacity Crowd At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 15.—The Bach-Mozart concerts, which opened the first portion of the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, ended this afternoon with a week-end attendance of 10,479, compared with 7,643 the previous week end, which was hard hit by inclement weather.

This afternoon's audience of 3,741 and last night's crowd of 4,530 filled the theater concert hall to overflowing.

Last night's concert by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony, with Charles Munch conducting, proved to be the most popular of the six Bach-Mozart performances when William Kroll, violinist, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appeared as soloists.

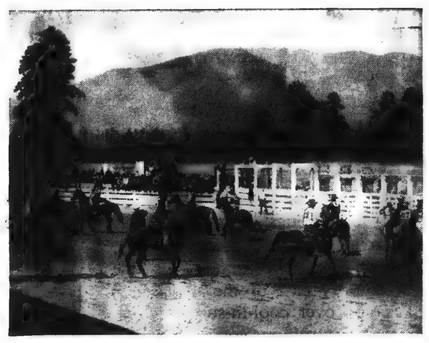
The chamber orchestra opened Saturday evening's concert with Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major, followed by the Violin Concert in F Major with Mr. Kroll as soloist. After intermission Mrs. Dwyer captivated her audience playing the flute solo in Bach's Suite No. 2 in B Minor. The evening's performance was concluded with Bach's Suite No. 3 in D Major.

This afternoon's concert was devoted to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in which the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra was assisted by the festival chorus of students at the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, and five soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

This was a characteristic Munch program. It began with Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" Overture that also was built up with a kind of furious exhilaration. Mr. Munch has a way of letting the mood of the moment take hold of him and guide his interpretations. This habit may lead at times to a want of repose and balance; but the lack is more than adequately compensated for by the impression that the music is newly felt and communicated.

In the Berlioz Overture, in Debussy's "Apres-Midi D'Un Faune" and in Brahms' second symphony, as well as in the Ravel Suite, Mr. Munch conducted as though he were experiencing the emotions of each piece afresh. There were touches of roughness in the Brahms symphony, but there was never a failure of vivid communication. That, in essence, is the best thing that can happen to music.

HOLIDAY MAGAZINE
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
JUL 1956
NORTH AMERICA



Calendar of Summer Events

United States

June 7–Sept. 2. MUNICIPAL OPERA, St. Louis, Mo. Eleven Broadway musicals including Student Prince, Peter Pan, Kismet, and Kiss Me, Kate.

June 9–24. BOSTON ART FESTIVAL, Public Garden, Boston. Outdoor exhibitions of painting, sculpture, crafts, architecture; ballet, concerts, poetry, opera, drama. Nationally known artists.

June 23–Sept. 2. THE COMMON GLORY, Williamsburg, Va. Outdoor symphonic drama of early America.

June 26–Sept. 2. ASPEN INSTITUTE, Aspen, Col. Lectures, forums on Great Ideas of Western Man led by nation's top scholars; concerts, recreation, films.

June 29–30. MEN'S U.S. OLYMPIC TRACK AND FIELD TRIALS, Los Angeles. Competition to select U.S. representatives to World Olympic Games in Australia.

June 30–July 5. DIXIE FROLICS, Daytona Beach, Fla. Talent and beauty contest, water-ski show, fireworks, children's events.

June 30–Sept. 1 CENTRAL CITY FESTIVAL, Central City, Col. Puccini's La Tosca and world première of Ballad of Baby Doe, by Douglas Moore.

July 2–4. SOUTHWEST ALL-INDIAN POW-WOW, Flagstaff, Ariz. Over 10,000 Southwestern Indians in parades, ceremonials, rodeos.

July 2–Aug. 24. CHAUTAUQUA INSTITUTION, Chautauqua, N.Y. Concerts, lectures, drama, opera, summer school, recreation.

July 3–5. BLACK HILLS ROUND-UP, Belle Fourche, S.D. Rodeo with bareback riding, saddle bucking, bull riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, wild-horse race, dog acts, parades.

July 4. PIKES PEAK AUTO HILL CLIMB, Pikes Peak Highway, Colorado Springs, Col. Twelve-mile uphill race against time.

July 4. SUBURBAN HANDICAP, Belmont Park, Elmont, N.Y. America's top horses past Kentucky Derby age.

July 4–Aug. 12. BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony, Charles Münch directing. Guest artists include Monteux, Bernstein, Francescatti, Serkin.

July 5–7. AMERICAN JAZZ FESTIVAL, Newport, R.I. Jazz greats in Dixieland to Progressive; panels of jazz and classical critics, musicians and writers.

July 9–14. JUNIOR LEAGUE HORSE SHOW, Lexington, Ky. Outdoor show with leading horses from all over United States.

July 10. ALL-STAR GAME, Washington, D.C. Top players from National and American Leagues in special baseball event.

July 12–22. MISS UNIVERSE PAGEANT, Long Beach, Cal. Contest for most beautiful girl in the world.

July 16–21. VERMONT GARDEN PILGRIMAGES, at Bennington (on 16th), Manchester (17th), Woodstock (18th), Middlebury (19th), Burlington (21st).

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 18 1956

Brass Ensemble At Tanglewood

The third week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., begins at 8:30 tonight with a concert by the Boston Symphony Brass Ensemble and Margaret Harshaw, soprano, in the Theater-Concert Hall. The instrumentalists, under Roger Voisin's direction, will play sixteenth century and modern music and Miss Harshaw will sing Wagner's five Wesendonck Songs.

The complete Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will give its first concert in Tanglewood's Music Shed Friday night, playing works by Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms. Saturday night's concert will be devoted to Act I of Wagner's "Die Walkuere" and works of Samuel Barber and Bohuslav Martinu. Pierre Monteux will make his first Tanglewood appearance of the season Sunday afternoon.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 17 1956

Capacity Crowd At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., J... Bach-Mozart ... opened the first portion of the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, ended Sunday afternoon with a week-end attendance of 10,479, compared with 7,643 the previous week end, which was hard hit by inclement weather.

Sunday afternoon's audience of 3,741 and Saturday night's crowd of 4,530 filled the theater concert hall to overflowing.

Saturday night's concert by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony, with Charles Munch conducting, proved to be the most popular of the six Bach-Mozart performances when William Kroll, violinist, and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, appeared as soloists.

The chamber orchestra opened Saturday evening's concert with Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major, followed by the Violin Concert in F Major with Mr. Kroll as soloist. After intermission Mrs. Dwyer captivated her audience playing the flute solo in Bach's Suite No. 2 in B Minor. The evening's performance was concluded with Bach's Suite No. 3 in D Major.

Sunday afternoon's concert was devoted to the Tanglewood premiere of Bach's "The Passion According to St. John" in which the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra was assisted by the festival chorus of students at the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, and five soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860
JUL 21 1956

Music: Lenox Festival

Full Boston Symphony Conducted by Munch

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 20—The full Boston Symphony Orchestra was on hand at Tanglewood tonight for the first time in this year's Berkshire Festival. Playing the opening of the regularly scheduled concerts in the Music Shed, the orchestra sounded as if it had had a long holiday and had returned with refreshed energy and enthusiasm.

The fact is that the Bostonians have been performing steadily since last fall—in their regular winter season, the "pops" and the Esplanade concerts. Could it be that they were not only responding to the eagerness of the Tanglewood audience but also working up a head of steam over their forthcoming European tour that will take them into the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia?

If they play in Leningrad, Moscow and Prague as they played here tonight, particularly in Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite No. 2, it is a certainty that they will be a revelation.

Charles Munch, who conducted tonight, is a specialist in French music, and he gives a piece like the Ravel a shimmering world in which to gather with the most intensity.

Sitting up front, one felt the tensile and impact of those dazzling sonorities in the concluding Danse Generale were almost overwhelming. But there was no gainsaying the superb control with which conductor and orchestra whipped up a climax that seemed like a wild outburst of jubilation.

This was a characteristic Munch program. It began with Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" Overture that also was built up with a kind of furious exhilaration. Mr. Munch has a way of letting the mood of the moment take hold of him and guide his interpretations. This habit may lead at times to a want of repose and balance; but the lack is more than adequately compensated for by the impression that the music is newly felt and communicated.

In the Berlioz Overture, in Debussy's "Apres-Midi D'Un Faune" and in Brahms' second symphony, as well as in the Ravel Suite, Mr. Munch conducted as though he were experiencing the emotions of each piece afresh. There were touches of roughness in the Brahms symphony, but there was never a failure of vivid communication. That, in essence, is the best thing that can happen to music.

APPLETON, WIS.
POST CRESCENT
Circ. D. 32,179
JUL 20 1956

Berkshire Festival Has Liter...

By Marguerite Schumann

Framed in the rolling ... shire hills of western M... chusetts is the Berkshire ... sic center, musical mecc... serious young music... Among 400 students atte... the New England school ... summer are two Lawrence ... lege students, David Bethe... of Mr. and Mrs. Everett B... 1036 W. Winnebago street. ... Miss Roberta Lupe, La Gr... Ill.

Here the Lawrentians ... part in the student orche... David as a string bass ... er, and Roberta, handli... cello. Both will return to ... lege in the fall, Roberta ... senior, and David, as a ... in the music conservatory.

Since 1937, the hills are ... been the site of the ... school and the accompa... annual Berkshire Music ... val. The musical event is ... ed at Tanglewood, noted in ... ary fame as a temporary ... idence of Nathaniel Hawt... early American writer.

Hawthorne penned two ... here in the middle of th... century, his classic work, ... House of Seven Gables, ... "Tanglewood Tales," the ... piece giving the estate ... name.

Literary Twosome

When Hawthorne lived ... he and his great, good ... Herman Melville, at wo... "Moby Dick" only abou... miles away, hiked the ... and the lake front, and ... said that their favorite v... the Damson mountains ... spot where Tanglewood ... dents now swim. Local lo... it that the two men dis... ed each others' minds (... stiffly, formal early ac... ance), when they were ... ven into the same ca... of the torrents that ... Berkshires at this s... In the enforced compani... of the crevice, they foun... they had a great deal i... mon.

That meeting of min... tween Melville and Haw... has an almost daily c... part at Tanglewood, ... young musicians, most o... "the best back home ... only in their talent, fin... counterparts from all s...

...Festival

By MILES KASTENDIECK

As the Berkshire Fes... val moves into t... Music Shed at Tanglewo... this weekend, it acqui... some focus after all. T... concentration appears son... what incidental and app... ently unofficial; nevertl... less it is there.

A definite feature of the S... series is the first Tanglew... performances of five sympho... works commissioned by ... Boston Symphony for its 7... anniversary season.

Why more could not h... been made of the annivers... is a nice question. When ... Festival made Berlioz the f... point two years ago and B... thoven last year, it gave s... significance to all this orch...

APPLETON, WIS.
POST CRESCENT
Circ. D. 32,179
JUL 20 1956

Berkshire Hills in New England Has Literary Past, Today's Music

By Marguerite Schumann

Framed in the rolling Berkshire hills of western Massachusetts is the Berkshire Music center, musical mecca of serious young musicians. Among 400 students attending the New England school this summer are two Lawrence college students, David Bethe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Bethe, 1036 W. Winnebago street, and Miss Roberta Lane, La Grange, Ill.

Here the Lawrentians take part in the student orchestra, David as a string bass player, and Roberta, handling a cello. Both will return to college in the fall, Roberta as a senior, and David, as a junior in the music conservatory.

Since 1937, the hills area has been the site of the music school and the accompanying annual Berkshire Music festival. The musical event is staged at Tanglewood, noted in literary fame as a temporary residence of Nathaniel Hawthorne, early American writer.

Hawthorne penned two books here in the middle of the 19th century, his classic work, "The House of Seven Gables," and "Tanglewood Tales," the latter piece giving the estate its name.

Literary Twosome

When Hawthorne lived here, he and his great, good friend Herman Melville, at work on "Moby Dick" only about five miles away, hiked the woods and the lake front, and it is said that their favorite view of the Damson mountains was a spot where Tanglewood students now swim. Local lore has it that the two men discovered each others' minds (after a stiffly, formal early acquaintance), when they were both driven into the same cave by one of the torrents that visits the Berkshires at this season. In the enforced companionship of the crevice, they found that they had a great deal in common.

That meeting of minds between Melville and Hawthorne has an almost daily counterpart at Tanglewood, where young musicians, most of them "the best back home" and lonely in their talent, find their counterparts from all sections of the country and about 18 foreign lands.

Tanglewood's Enchantment

There is a real enchantment about Tanglewood, which is partly the physical beauty of the place. You feel it most when an opal light floods the century-old formal garden, with its luxuriant but disciplined hemlock hedges and most-grown stone benches but it is partly the significant people that move so normally through the routines of music making.

The spirit that broods over Tanglewood is that of Serge Koussevitsky, who founded Tanglewood to train American orchestral players in the fierce discipline of the European method. The great Russian conductor died here five years ago, and his grave is planted with white pansies in the shape of a Jerusalem cross. His only monument is a simple kneeling bench given by the Israel Symphony which he founded and breathed into life in his free time from the Boston orchestra. The grave plot is up on the hill next to a chastely beautiful white Congregational church.

Mrs. Koussevitsky continues to be a loyal patron of the music center, and scarcely a concert passes without a glimpse of her. The Tanglewood choir has done memorial programs in the church and she never fails to treat them with a few huge Russian Easter cakes afterward.

Today's active spiritual head of Tanglewood is Charles Munch and his Boston Symphony orchestra, who control both the music festival and the school.

Munch A Gentle Man

To sit on the stage behind the orchestra, one of the privileges accorded all members of the school at almost every festival concert, and watch Munch stir the Boston Symphony into music, is a gripping thing. Munch is a gentle man, cast in a mould somewhat like Albert Schweitzer, his father's intimate friend. His instructions to the orchestra in rehearsal are given somewhere between a whisper and a mumble. As members of a 50 voice choir that sang Bach's monumental St. John Passion under his direction this week, we offer testimony that all under his guidance disport themselves with a sort of hypnotized horror, hypnotized that he can evoke so much with so little motion, and horrified of missing one of his muttered instructions, delivered in a fine assortment of English, French and Italian. In concert, beams like a pleased child when the music suits him; he sings "toot-toot", not always under his breath, in robust passages; and only he can press his heart to indicate more soul in the tone, and not make it look corny.

Other Tanglewood Notables

Many more of America's leading names are connected with Tanglewood. Aaron Copland, one of the nation's top composers, is head of the school, and he slouches genially around the grounds, teaches composition, and is master of ceremonies at composer's forums. Benny Goodman has been here, recording chamber music with the BSO, local slang for the Boston Symphony. When a recording session is on, all classes must make way to far flung barns and sheds, for disturbing sound travels easily in the mountain air.

In the opera department, Boris Goldovsky is the amiable clown and raconteur. He crackles with witty conversation between acts of the operas he directs, filling in time while sets are being changed. When the boys backstage are ready, they drop a piece of scenery, and Goldovsky withdraws.

One never has opportunity to forget that you are righteous, God-fearing Massachusetts. In the 6,000 seat music shed, based on a design by Eliel Saarinen, there is a license permitting entertainment on "The Lord's Day." Women who have the effrontery to appear at the gates of Tanglewood in slacks or shorts are quietly handed a red wrap-around denim skirt.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 21 1956

Top Concert Aug. 9 for Tanglewood

Boston Pops, Symphony Set

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 20.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestra will give the major concert of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center here on Thursday, Aug. 9.

Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, will direct the Boston Symphony in the first half of the concert at 8:15 p. m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed. This includes Rimsky - Korsakov's "Russian Easter" Overture and Heitor Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10, "Rasga o Coracao." The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will sing in the latter work.

The Boston Pops Orchestra, composed mainly of Boston Symphony Musicians, then will be heard under Arthur Fiedler's direction in Respighi's "La Boutique Fantasque" and George Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as the soloist. Several encore items will follow.

Ticket holders for this concert also may attend afternoon and early evening performances by the Berkshire Music Center's various departments. Opera Department students and members of the Tanglewood study group will be heard at 4 p. m. At 5:45 p. m. a fanfare and an address by Ralph Berkowitz dean of the Center, will preface simultaneous performances by students in the orchestra, opera and composition departments. Mr. Ross will conduct an informal choral program at 7 p. m., when the audience can enjoy a picnic supper on the lawn. Waltzing on the lawn will follow the evening concert at 10:30.

Reservations can be made by telephoning Lenox 600. Box seats cost $5, with rates of $4 and $3 for other reserved seats and $2.50 for general admission.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 22 1956

Berkshire Music Festival

Sameness of Programs At Tanglewood Criticized

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 21.—There seems little use in ducking the issue any longer—if the orchestral programs given at Tanglewood do not show considerably more variety within a year or so the Berkshire Music Festival will cease to function as a legitimate artistic enterprise. Year in, year out the same chestnuts are rewarmed, the same tired pieces played over and over again.

It seems, indeed, as if the whole operation were meant simply to duplicate the Boston Symphony Orchestra's winter season in its home town and New York. I cannot recall which of the Herald Tribune book reviewers put it in print, but recently in pointing to Tanglewood he referred to it as "Brahms bursting in air." The phrase is as apt as it is painfully true; the contemporary spirit is as alien to the Berkshire Music Festival as it is to a brocaded Victorian sofa.

Friday's Concert

Last night, for example, the series entered its current major phase with a concert in the Music Shed played by the Boston Orchestra under Charles Munch's direction. For the event, a program was served up for 6,000 listeners that for sheer lack of imagination balks description. It began with Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" Overture, continued with Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," Ravel's Second "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite and concluded with Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D Major.

Granted, these are all great works, staples of the repertory, marvels of their kind. But to ask an audience to travel hundreds of miles to hear them performed is sheer effrontery and nothing less. There is not a radio station throughout the land that does not, through first-rate recordings, air them once weekly at least, and symphonic groups from coast to coast give them hearings at regular intervals.

Why, then, should America's leading music festival do precisely what every hamlet does equally as well? To this writer it makes not a shred of sense, since Tanglewood was never founded to serve as a hazy carbon copy of the Boston Symphony's winter season. It was meant to act as a vivifying force, a modern trumpet blast in the still night of the orchestral unproductive summer months. And unless directors of this formerly forward-look festival begin to insert new or untried works in its program scheme I cannot see how it will continue to attract the visitors it needs for its financial support.

As a counter argument there are those who may insist that the Boston men make up no ordinary band, that any performance it gives is worth a lengthy trip over hot coals. And there is, of course, no questioning the virtuoso wonders of the group. Last night, the Berlioz overture was set down as a real carnival and a ringingly Italian one at that. As always, Mr. Munch sought out the wild theatrical contrasts implied by the score's sudden alterations of dynamic and color, and the result was a shotgun blast of teeming orchestral sound. Conversely, the Debussy Prelude was sensuous, sultry and languid—exquisitely right in its sonority and detail. And the following "Daphnis and Chloe" brought forth surges of gorgeous sound such as aural dreams are made of. It was, all told, a glowing fresco of unbelievably vivid color, with every member of the orchestra offering a brilliant tonal dab of his own.

The Brahms, however, I found gray, lifeless and sluggish, the combination resulting in a generally dispiriting reading. But even if it had rocked the skies, it would not have rubbed the curse from a program familiar to the point of embarrassment.

No doubt about it. Tanglewood is in desperate need of an esthetic face-lifting. It is beginning to show its age; it has begun to grow haggard and worn.

Festival Needs Stronger Focal Point

N.Y. American July 22

By MILES KASTENDIECK

As the Berkshire Festival moves into the Music Shed at Tanglewood this weekend, it acquires some focus after all. This concentration appears somewhat incidental and apparently unofficial; nevertheless it is there.

A definite feature of the Shed series is the first Tanglewood performances of five symphonic works commissioned by the Boston Symphony for its 75th anniversary season.

Why more could not have been made of the anniversary is a nice question. When the Festival made Berlioz the focal point two years ago and Beethoven last year, it gave some significance to all this orchestral activity in the Berkshires. This year the Festival could have had special significance had the anniversary of the orchestra been highlighted. The emphasis would have been on contemporary music. Could the management have possibly shied away from such an announcement?

The programs this year have lacked any special attraction. The fact that the commissioned pieces will be played points them up to some extent but not enough. Only a last minute change established this idea anyhow. Originally no anniversary work was scheduled for the first Shed weekend. Then the recent shift in last night's program brought in Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6), the work named by the New York Music Critic Circle as the best new orchestral work presented during 1955. Thus a focal point became discernible.

Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 turns up on Friday's program. This has double significance because the Italian composer is the guest teacher at Berkshire this Summer.

Hanson's Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitsky is set for Saturday's concert. (This next weekend as a whole has a contemporary tinge with Honegger's Fifth Symphony also listed for this concert and Prokofieff, Hindemith, and Mahler lined up for Sunday.)

With Copland's Symphonic Ode and Piston's Sixth Symphony scheduled for the August concerts, the "feature" of the Shed concerts is complete. It is slim focusing, but it has perhaps saved the Festival from having no meaning other than another series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Of course some may question whether a festival need have a focal point. Do not the orchestral concerts suffice? Are they not an end in themselves? Festivals that concentrate on opera are no different.

But they are, just as opera is different from symphony. And the tendency of festivals is to become a hodge-podge of events unless some overall scheme is behind them. The Berkshire Festival had begun to progress when it highlighted some composer as a focal point. May it continue to do so now that it has squeaked by this season with its commissioned works.

AFTERNOON AT TANGLEWOOD . . . Conductor Charles Munch is seen directing the Boston Symphony Orchestra in one of its current concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

July 22 Amer.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

JUL 22 1956

LENOX FETE PLANS GALA CONCERT AUG. 9

A gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be the climax of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" celebration in the Music Shed at Lenox, Mass., on Aug. 9. The celebration will benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brzil Symphony Orchestra and acting head of the school's conducting department, will lead the first half of the program. He will direct the Choros No. 10, "Rasga o coracao," by his countryman, Reitor Villa-Lohbos. The orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of Music Center, students trained by Hugh Ross.

For the second half of the concert Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra and Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianist, in Gershwin's Concerto in F and other works from the Pops repertory.

Holders of tickets for the evening concert are invited to a series of presentations by Departments of the Berkshire Music Center. These start at 4 P. M. with opera department performances in the Formal Gardens. Other performances will be given through the afternoon by students of the opera, composition and orchestra departments.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 390,982 - S. 274,577

JUL 22 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Munch Opens Lenox Shed Concerts

Lenox, Mass., July 21—The Berkshire Festival opened four weeks of concerts in its 6,000-seat music shed here at Tanglewood last night with a program which would rival the Goldman Band concerts in Central Park for circulating in the "pop" genre. Opening with the smash-bang Berlioz Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Charles Munch, conducting the Boston Symphony, then proceeded to Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun." Ravel's Second Suite from "Daphnis and Chloe" followed with Brahms' Second Symphony providing the conclusion.

With the exception of the Berlioz, all of the above can be considered great music, and obviously it would be carping to damn such choices because they are familiar.

Having just come from the youthful Empire State Festival at Ellenville, however, one cannot help but compare the admirable courage and convictions of this new venture with the current summer policy of its well-established, solvent Massachusetts neighbor.

During four weeks of operation, the Symphony of the Air has played one world premiere, the Villa-Lobos ballet, "The Emperor Jones," and a U. S. premiere, Orff's musical score for Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream."

Sunday Music . . .

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30.

The Bostonians, on the other hand, find themselves playing no premieres during the month of shed concerts, but instead highlighting such favorites as the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto and the Schumann Piano Concerto.

Daphnis and Chloe Exciting

This is not to say that the Berkshire opening did not have its share of musical excitement. Especially in the "Daphnis and Chloe," which alternated between shimmer and excitement, and the Brahms Symphony, which projected much beautiful and luscious sound, did Munch achieve his best.

The [illegible] dynamic personality communicated a sense of drama to the Ravel Suite that brought a picturesque vividness and intensity to its chameleon-like moods. During the first movement of the Brahms, the tempo was deliberate and relaxed with a tendency toward exaggerated ritards. But the interpretation of this most lyrical of the four Brahms symphonies was, at the same time, in the atmosphere of a summer night and altogether pleasureable. The "Allegretto Grazioso" had such delicacy in the pizzicato portions it was pixie-like and altogether wonderful in its effect.

Considering the unlimited seating capacity of the Tanglewood grounds, the audience was small, only 6,203 listeners, including a couple of thousand outside on the grass.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

JUL 24 1956

FROMM CONCERT GIVEN AT LENOX

Program Under Foundation's Auspices Offers Works by Orbon and Leland Smith

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 23—Contemporary music can be fun. The number of attractive pieces on a program of chamber music presented at Tanglewood tonight was gratifying.

It must have been especially pleasing to Paul Fromm, founder of the Fromm Music Foundation, who came from Chicago to hear the concert. This was the second at Tanglewood this season under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation, and from all reliable accounts the superior one.

Mr. Fromm is as worthy of attention in his own right as the cause he espouses. He is in the wine business, a man who found a refuge and a good life in this country. He loves music and has a passionate conviction that the living composer deserves encouragement and support. His foundation, built out of the fruits of his success in America, is dedicated to this work.

On tonight's program, there were first performances of two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation. One might be called a hit; the other a miss.

"Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) by Julian Orbon, Cuban composer, turned out to be a personally felt, touching score.

A Quintet for Bassoon and Strings by Leland Smith, American composer, was a dreary work without any semblance of individuality.

Mr. Orbon, who, like Mr. Smith, was born in 1925, came from Havana to hear his brief work performed tonight. This was his second visit to Tanglewood; he was here ten years ago as a composition student with Aaron Copland.

The young Cuban's hymn, scored for soprano, string quartet, harp, flute, oboe and clarinet, is in the conservative vein of late romanticism. He employs this idiom with a naturalness that gives his music not only validity but eloquence. He knows how to be concise and expressive.

Marjorie McClung, soprano, and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Seymour Lipkin, gave the work an affecting perforance.

Goffredo Petrassi, this year's guest composer on the Berkshire Music Center faculty, was represented by his Sonata da Camera. This piece, written in 1948, is scored for harpsichord and a small contingent of strings and woodwinds. It has a style of its own; if one were compelled to identify it more closely, one would say it reflects the influence of Stravinsky playing over eighteenth-century Italian lightness and precision.

As one of Italy's principal composers today, the 52-year-old Petrassi has used the twelve-tone system on occasion, but has never been slavish in his devotion to it. He has a meticulous ear for color and sonority, and while his style is not expansive, it interests and disarms the listener.

The composer was a modest and effective conductor tonight, and Sylvia Marlowe was at the harpsichord.

Samuel Barber's "Summer Music," written last year, was utterly winning. Scored for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon and French horn, this ten-minute work is a twentieth-century version of the serenade.

Two hundred years ago, occasional pieces like this could go on for six, seven and eight movements, but we think we need to be in a hurry, and Mr. Barber has wisely tailored his music to suit our tempo. Nevertheless, his little work sings from beginning to end, giving each of the instruments charming things to do. The first-desk players of the Boston Symphony gave the piece a delightful performance.

The program began and ended with two of the established figures of the contemporary scene.

De Falla's Concerto for Harpsichord, with Miss Marlowe as Soloist, started the evening, reminding us that the Spaniard at 50 was striking out on new grounds. The music has an odd effectiveness, with its alternating bits of lyricism and short-breathed staccato phrases.

Darius Milhaud's "Cantate de L'Enfant et de la Mer," with Mrs. Norma Farber as the reciter, rounded out a full and often rewarding concert.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

JUL 22 1956

MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux.
Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri ..... Rossini
Concerto for Orchestra ..... Bartok
Symphony No. 7 ..... Schubert

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, special program of modern chamber music donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, Ill. Participants: Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra assisted by Sylvia Marlowe, harpsichordist; Marjorie McClung, soprano; Norma Farber, reciter.
Program of works by Manuel de Falla, Goffredo Petrassi (who will conduct his own composition), Samuel Barber and Darius Milhaud, and two first performances: Leland Smith's Quintet for Bassoon and Strings; and Julian Orbon's Himnus ad Galli Cantum (latter conducted by Seymour Lipkin).

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, chamber music by the Beaux Arts Trio.
Trio in D minor ..... Mendelssohn
Trio in A minor ..... Ravel
Trio in C minor ..... Brahms

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Leonore Overture No. 2 ..... Beethoven
Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 ..... Petrassi
Symphony No. 4 ..... Tchaikovsky

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Rudolf Serkin, pianist.
Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky ..... Hanson
Piano Concerto ..... Schumann
Symphony No. 5 ..... Honegger
La Mer ..... Debussy

NEXT SUNDAY, July 29, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Richard Burgin; Ruth Posselt, violinist.
Romeo and Juliet, Suite No. 2 ..... Prokofieff
Violin Concerto ..... Hindemith
Symphony No. 1 ..... Mahler

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 24 1956

Obituary-Page Tanglewood Critique 'Little Premature'

In Jay Harrison's review of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood reprinted in last night's Gazette, and which incidentally, appeared on the obituary page in the Herald Tribune, a little prematurely, I feel, he diagnosed an ailment but didn't prescribe a treatment. Is this because he was unaware of all the facts? Has he read the full program of the Festival? There is at least one contemporary work on each program except the last. Granted Friday night's concert was dull fare, program-wise and weather-wise; don't forget the weather is an important asset; but perhaps there was a good reason for presenting such a mild dish.

Surely Mr. Harrison is aware that the Boston Symphony Orchestra is the fond parent and that means supporter of the Berkshire Music Center, which dispenses — in some cases through scholarships — instruction and coaching in all branches of music, for a short six weeks. This adds to the schedule of many of the orchestra members; and this leads to the question of time to prepare a more diversified program; modern music at its best is littered with accidentals, changes of meter and tempo, all of which requires careful and deliberate study and practice. Perhaps the winter concerts need revising. We don't have the opportunity of hearing as many live concerts as you and your city-mates, Mr. Harrison.

Many of the charter devotees of Tanglewood don't want the indigestible fare of some of the modern composers; if they were not so seriously intent on erudite experimentation, and would reflect a little hope and faith in the persent and the future, their dissonances would sound less harsh and be more esculant — and there would be a really loud outcry for more of this juicy fare.

The Wednesday evening concerts, which perhaps Mr. Harrison has not attended, offer diversified fare for almost any musical taste; the assisting artists have contributed their services to the support of the Music Center; the Fromm Foundation has sponsored two concerts of purely contemporary music, Mr. Harrison; these have been well-attended by the really interested persons.

The younger generation hereabouts is disappointed in the inclusion of contemporary works on all of the programs they say their preference lies in the old friends, not "chestnuts" (you did call them "marvels" in another outburst) Bach to Brahms, and even pre-Bach; I commend their good taste; this is the solid foundation most of us want and need, if we are to distinguish between the fair and the great in the contemporary field; they (the young) do not deprecate all the moderns; a note of reverence sounds at th mention of Bartok; this is healthy.

Perhaps your opinion is purely personal, Mr. Harrison; you are young enough to find what you seek, and to change that which you desire; but have patience, it takes more than time; look behind the scenes more carefully; you may be surprised at what you find. — M. deB. B.

[273]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

JUL 22 1956

LENOX FETE PLANS GALA CONCERT AUG. 9

A gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be the climax of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" celebration in the Music Shed at Lenox, Mass., on Aug. 9. The celebration will benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brzil Symphony Orchestra and acting head of the school's conducting department, will lead the first half of the program. He will direct the Choros No. 10, "Rasga o coracao," by his countryman, Reitor Villa-Lohbos. The orchestra will be assisted by the Festival Chorus of Music Center, students trained by Hugh Ross.

For the second half of the concert Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra and Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianist, in Gershwin's Concerto in F and other works from the Pops repertory.

Holders of tickets for the evening concert are invited to a series of presentations by Departments of the Berkshire Music Center. These start at 4 P. M. with opera department performances in the Formal Gardens. Other performances will be given through the afternoon by students of the opera, composition and orchestra departments.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 398,982 - S. 274,577

JUL 22 1956

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Munch Opens Lenox Shed Concerts

Lenox, Mass., July 21—The Berkshire Festival opened four weeks of concerts in its 6,000-seat music shed here at Tanglewood last night with a program which would rival the Goldman Band concerts in Central Park for circulating in the "pop" genre. Opening with the smash-bang Berlioz Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Charles Munch, conducting the Boston Symphony, then proceeded to Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun." Ravel's Second Suite from "Daphnis and Chloe" followed with Brahms' Second Symphony providing the conclusion.

With the exception of the Berlioz, all of the above can be considered great music, and obviously it would be carping to damn such choices because they are familiar.

Having just come from the youthful Empire State Festival at Ellenville, however, one cannot help but compare the admirable courage and convictions of this new venture with the current summer policy of its well-established, solvent Massachusetts neighbor.

During four weeks of operation, the Symphony of the Air has played one world premiere, the Villa-Lobos ballet, "The Emperor Jones," and a U. S. premiere, Orff's musical score for Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream."

Sunday Music . . .

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30.

The Bostonians, on the other hand, find themselves playing no premieres during the month of shed concerts, but instead highlighting such favorites as the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto and the Schumann Piano Concerto.

Daphnis and Chloe Exciting

This is not to say that the Berkshire opening did not have its share of musical excitement. Especially in the "Daphnis and Chloe," which alternated between shimmer and excitement, and the Brahms Symphony, which projected much beautiful and luscious sound, did Munch achieve his best.

The dynamic personality communicated a sense of drama to the Ravel Suite that brought a picturesque vividness and intensity to its chameleon-like moods. During the first movement of the Brahms, the tempo was deliberate and relaxed with a tendency toward exaggerated ritards. But the interpretation of this most lyrical of the four Brahms symphonies was, at the same time, in the atmosphere of a summer night and altogether pleasureable. The "Allegretto Grazioso" had such delicacy in the pizzicato portions it was pixie-like and altogether wonderful in its effect.

Considering the unlimited seating capacity of the Tanglewood grounds, the audience was small, only 6,203 listeners, including a couple of thousand outside on the grass.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

JUL 24 1956

FROMM CONCERT GIVEN AT LENOX

Program Under Foundation's Auspices Offers Works by Orbon and Leland Smith

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 23—Contemporary music can be fun. The number of attractive pieces on a program of chamber music presented at Tanglewood tonight was gratifying.

It must have been especially pleasing to Paul Fromm, founder of the Fromm Music Foundation, who came from Chicago to hear the concert. This was the second at Tanglewood this season under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation, and from all reliable accounts the superior one.

Mr. Fromm is as worthy of attention in his own right as the cause he espouses. He is in the wine business, a man who found a refuge and a good life in this country. He loves music and has a passionate conviction that the living composer deserves encouragement and support. His foundation, built out of the fruits of his success in America, is dedicated to this work.

On tonight's program, there were first performances of two works commissioned by the Fromm Foundation. One might be called a hit; the other a miss.

"Himnus ad Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock) by Julian Orbon, Cuban composer, turned out to be a personally felt, touching score.

A Quintet for Bassoon and Strings by Leland Smith, American composer, was a dreary work without any semblance of individuality.

Mr. Orbon, who, like Mr. Smith, was born in 1925, came from Havana to hear his brief work performed tonight. This was his second visit to Tanglewood; he was here ten years ago as a composition student with Aaron Copland.

The young Cuban's hymn, scored for soprano, string quartet, harp, flute, oboe and clarinet, is in the conservative vein of late romanticism. He employs this idiom with a naturalness that gives his music not only validity but eloquence. He knows how to be concise and expressive.

Marjorie McClung, soprano, and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Seymour Lipkin, gave the work an affecting perforance.

Goffredo Petrassi, this year's guest composer on the Berkshire Music Center faculty, was represented by his Sonata da Camera. This piece, written in 1948, is scored for harpsichord and a small contingent of strings and woodwinds. It has a style of its own; if one were compelled to identify it more closely, one would say it reflects the influence of Stravinsky playing over eighteenth-century Italian lightness and precision.

As one of Italy's principal composers today, the 52-year-old Petrassi has used the twelve-tone system on occasion, but has never been slavish in his devotion to it. He has a meticulous ear for color and sonority, and while his style is not expansive, it interests and disarms the listener.

The composer was a modest and effective conductor tonight, and Sylvia Marlowe was at the harpsichord.

Samuel Barber's "Summer Music," written last year, was utterly winning. Scored for flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon and French horn, this ten-minute work is a twentieth-century version of the serenade.

Two hundred years ago, occasional pieces like this could go on for six, seven and eight movements, but we think we need to be in a hurry, and Mr. Barber has wisely tailored his music to suit our tempo. Nevertheless, his little work sings from beginning to end, giving each of the instruments charming things to do. The first-desk players of the Boston Symphony gave the piece a delightful performance.

The program began and ended with two of the established figures of the contemporary scene.

De Falla's Concerto for Harpsichord, with Miss Marlowe as Soloist, started the evening, reminding us that the Spaniard at 50 was striking out on new grounds. The music has an odd effectiveness, with its alternating bits of lyricism and short-breathed staccato phrases.

Darius Milhaud's "Cantate de L'Enfant et de la Mer," with Mrs. Norma Farber as the reciter, rounded out a full and often rewarding concert.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 526,215 - S. 1,146,860

JUL 22 1956

MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux.
Overture to L'Italiana in Algeri ..... Rossini
Concerto for Orchestra ..... Bartok
Symphony No. 7 ..... Schubert

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, special program of modern chamber music donated to the Berkshire Music Center by the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago, Ill. Participants: Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra assisted by Sylvia Marlowe, harpsichordist; Marjorie McClung, soprano; Norma Farber, reciter.
Program of works by Manuel de Falla, Goffredo Petrassi (who will conduct his own composition), Samuel Barber and Darius Milhaud, and two first performances: Leland Smith's Quintet for Bassoon and Strings; and Julian Orbon's Himnus ad Galli Cantum (latter conducted by Seymour Lipkin).

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, chamber music by the Beaux Arts Trio.
Trio in D minor ..... Mendelssohn
Trio in A minor ..... Ravel
Trio in C minor ..... Brahms

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Leonore Overture No. 2 ..... Beethoven
Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 ..... Petrassi
Symphony No. 4 ..... Tchaikovsky

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; Rudolf Serkin, pianist.
Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky ..... Hanson
Piano Concerto ..... Schumann
Symphony No. 5 ..... Honegger
La Mer ..... Debussy

NEXT SUNDAY, July 29, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Richard Burgin; Ruth Posselt, violinist.
Romeo and Juliet, Suite No. 2 ..... Prokofieff
Violin Concerto ..... Hindemith
Symphony No. 1 ..... Mahler

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928

JUL 24 1956

Obituary-Page Tanglewood Critique 'Little Premature'

In Jay Harrison's review of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood reprinted in last night's Gazette, and which incidentally, appeared on the obituary page in the Herald Tribune, a little prematurely, I feel, he diagnosed an ailment but didn't prescribe a treatment. Is this because he was unaware of all the facts? Has he read the full program of the Festival? There is at least one contemporary work on each program except the last. Granted Friday night's concert was dull fare, program-wise and weather-wise; don't forget the weather is an important asset; but perhaps there was a good reason for presenting such a mild dish.

Surely Mr. Harrison is aware that the Boston Symphony Orchestra is the fond parent and that means supporter of the Berkshire Music Center, which dispenses — in some cases through scholarships — instruction and coaching in all branches of music, for a short six weeks. This adds to the schedule of many of the orchestra members; and this leads to the question of time to prepare a more diversified program; modern music at its best is littered with accidentals, changes of meter and tempo, all of which requires careful and deliberate study and practice. Perhaps the winter concerts need revising. We don't have the opportunity of hearing as many live concerts as you and your city-mates, Mr. Harrison.

Many of the charter devotees of Tanglewood don't want the indigestible fare of some of the modern composers; if they were not so seriously intent on erudite experimentation, and would reflect a little hope and faith in the persent and the future, their dissonances would sound less harsh and be more esculant — and there would be a really loud outcry for more of this juicy fare.

The Wednesday evening concerts, which perhaps Mr. Harrison has not attended, offer diversified fare for almost any musical taste; the assisting artists have contributed their services to the support of the Music Center; the Fromm Foundation has sponsored two concerts of purely contemporary music, Mr. Harrison; these have been well-attended by the really interested persons.

The younger generation hereabouts is disappointed in the inclusion of contemporary works on all of the programs they say their preference lies in the old friends, not "chestnuts" (you did call them "marvels" in another outburst) Bach to Brahms, and even pre-Bach; I commend their good taste; this is the solid foundation most of us want and need, if we are to distinguish between the fair and the great in the contemporary field; they (the young) do not deprecate all the moderns; a note of reverence sounds at th mention of Bartok; this is healthy.

Perhaps your opinion is purely personal, Mr. Harrison; you are young enough to find what you seek, and to change that which you desire; but have patience, it takes more than time; look behind the scenes more carefully; you may be surprised at what you find. — M. deB. B.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
JUL 25 1956

Week's Events At Tanglewood

The ofurth week of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., opens tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio (Menahem Bressler, pianist; Daniel Guilet, violinist, and Bernard Greenhouse, cellist). Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts on Friday and Saturday nights, with Rudolph Serkin as soloist on the latter date in Schumann's Piano Concerto. Richard Burgin will conduct Sunday afternoon's Boston Symphony conctrt, with his wife, Ruth Posselt, violinist, as soloist in a Hindemith violin concerto.

The Boston Symphony and the Boston "Pops" Orchestras will give the evening concert in the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit on Thursday, Aug. 9, with Heitor Villa-Lobos and Arthur Fiedler conducting. Jesus Maria Sanroma wil lbe soloist in Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

There will also be performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center at 4 p. m. and at 6 p. m., following a welcoming address at 5:45 by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center. There will be singing by the Tanglewood Chorus under Hugh Ross at 7 p. m. during a period set aside for picnic suppers on the lawn. Dancing on the lawn will follow the concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 25 1956

Tanglewood Always To Provide Spell Of Great Music

Northampton, July 24, 1956

To the Editor:

The criticism (by Jay S. Harrison) of Dr. Munch and his Tanglewood programs reprinted in a recent Gazette seems to me very lacking in sensitivity.

There are still people so humble that they can listen even to Beethoven and Brahms a thousand times without exhausting their beauty. For such people, Dr. Munch studies the oft-repeated symphonies so that he may interpret them more faithfully and so free the power in them.

For the people who require variety, there are hundreds of recordings available. But for people who crave deeper familiarity with the music of the old masters, who are grateful to anyone whose wide experience enables him to interpret that music richly, and who enjoy human companionship under the spell of what is great in music, there is, and always will be, Tanglewood.

A Listener.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746
JUL 25 1956

Fiedler Returning to Lenox At 'Tanglewood On Parade'

Lenox, July 24—Arthur Fiedler, the popular maestro of the Boston "Pops" Orchestra for the past 27 years, will return to Lenox to conduct the third consecutive summer appearance by the Boston "pops" at this year's "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, to be held this year on Thursday, Aug. 9.

Fiedler is currently in San Francisco, where for the sixth consecutive season he is in charge of the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium. At the end of July he flies from San Francisco to Boston for a few days of rest before flying to Miami to conduct the University of Miami Pops on Aug. 5. Four days later he [illegible] ducts at "Tanglewood on Parade," and then immediately flies back to San Francisco to conclude the season there late in August.

At their "Tanglewood on Parade" appearance Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will perform a Suite from the ballet "LaBoutique Fantasque," arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini; the Gershwin Piano Concerto in F with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist; and Ravel's "Bolero."

During the afternoon, simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments — student symphony and chamber music (Dept. I), chorus (Dept. II), original compositions (Dept. III), opera (Dept. IV), and the amateur division, or Tanglewood Study Group (Dept. V).

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,928
JUL 23 1956

Critic Scores Tanglewood For 'Rewarmed Chestnuts'

The Berkshire Musical Festival, America's leading music festival and the particular pride of Western Massachusetts and New England, has come under fire of Jay S. Harrison, who, in a critique of last Friday's concert at Tanglewood, predicted that "If the orchestral programs do show considerably more variety, the festival will cease to function as a legitimate artistic enterprise."

The New York Herald Tribune of yesterday published the following article under Mr. Harrison's byline:

LENOX, Mass.—There seems little use in ducking the issue any longer—if the orchestral programs given at Tanglewood do not show considerably more variety within a year or so the Berkshire Music Festival will cease to function as a legitimate artistic enterprise. Year in, year out the same chestnuts are rewarmed, the same tired pieces played over and over again.

It seems, indeed, as if the whole operation were meant simply to duplicate the Boston Symphony Orchestra's winter season in its home town and New York. I cannot recall which of the Herald Tribune book reviewers put it in print, but recently in pointing to Tanglewood he referred to it as "Brahms bursting in air." The phrase is as apt as it is painfully true the contemporary spirit is as alien to the Berkshire Music Festival as it is to a brocaded Victorian sofa.

Friday night, for example, the series entered its current major phase with a concert in the Music Shed played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch's direction. For the event, a program was served up for 6,000 listeners that for sheer lack of imagination balks description. It began with Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" Overture, continued with Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun." Ravel's Second "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite and concluded with Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D Major.

Granted, these are all great works, staples of the repertory, marvels of their kind. But to ask an audience to travel hundreds of miles to hear them performed is sheer effrontery and nothing less. There is not a radio station throughout the land that does not, through first-rate recordings air them once weekly at least, and symphonic groups from coast to coast give them hearings at regular intervals.

Why then, should, America's leading music festival do precisely what every hamlet does equally as well? To this writer it makes not a shred of sense, since Tanglewood was never founded to serve as a hazy carbon copy of the Boston Symphony's winter season. It was meant to act as a vivifying force, a modern trumpet blast in the still night of the orchestral unproductive summer months. And unless directors of this formerly forward-look festival begin to insert new or untried works in its program scheme I cannot see how it will continue to attract the visitors it needs for its financial support.

As a counter argument there are those who may insist that the Boston men make up no ordinary band, that any performance it gives is worth a lengthy trip over hot coals. And there is, of course, no questioning the virtuoso wonders of the group. Last night, the Berlioz overture was set down as a real carnival and a ringingly Italian one at that. As always, Mr. Munch sought out the wild theatrical contrasts implied by the score's sudden alterations of dynamic and color, and the result was a shotgun blast of teeming orchestral sound. Conversely, the Debussy Prelude was sensuous, sultry and languid exquisitely right in its sonority and detail. And the following "Daphnis and Chloe" brought forth surges of gorgeous sound such as aural dreams are made of. It was, all told, a glowing fresco of unbelievably vivid color, with every member of the orchestra offering a brilliant tonal dab of his own.

The Brahms, however, I found gray, lifeless and sluggish, the combination resulting in a generally dispiriting reading. But even if it had rocked the skies, it would not have rubbed the curse from a program familiar to the point of embarrassment.

No doubt about it, Tanglewood is in desperate need of an esthetic face-lifting. It is beginning to show its age; it has begun to grow haggard and worn.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 25 1956

Tanglewood Tales

Tanglewood's opera department is concentrating its major effort of the summer on Lukas Foss' three-act opera "Griffelkin," which students of Boris Goldovsky, who is staging the work, will perform with alternate casts on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 6 and 7. The composer, a member of the Berkshire Music Center's composition department since 1946, will conduct both performances in the Theater-Concert Hall. As has been the case with all past productions of the Berkshire Music Center opera department, admission to the "Griffelkin" performances will be by special tickets, available only to those who, by joining the Friends' organization, help support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Seats may now be reserved by inquiry to the Friends' office at Tanglewood, or by telephoning Lenox 600.

* * *

As a preview to the staged performances of "Griffelkin," composer Foss will lead the symphony orchestra of 100 scholarship students in a suite from his score at the weekly concert tomorrow. The orchestra which performs for the opera will be composed of members of the same student body.

* * *

"Griffelkin" uses a large cast, some 15 principals, a chorus of 9, and some 30 dancers who appear but do not sing. It is scheduled for European production in Stuttgart, Berlin and Stockholm after Tanglewood, and encouraged by the success of their collaboration, Mr. Foss and Mr. Reid hope to do further work together. Of the TV presentation, Howard Taubman, music critic of the New York Times, wrote: "The piece moves, and the orchestra is full of gay and fanciful comment, written with sureness of effect and telling transparency. In the second act, Mr. Foss achieves something more touching—a mood and an emotion that touch the heart."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
JUL 25 1956

Ground Breaking at Shadowbrook Will Attract Church Dignitaries

LENOX — Church dignitaries from all New England dioceses, headed by Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston, will participate in ground breaking ceremonies Tuesday for Shadowbrook—the new Jesuit Novitiate here, which will replace the building destroyed by fire on March 10.

1,500 To Attend

More than 1,500 relatives and friends of the Jesuits will attend the exercises. Formal ceremonies will be held first at Tanglewood in the Music Shed, provided by the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Ceremonies will conclude with the actual ground breaking on the adjacent Jesuit property at the site of the new Novitiate near the ruins of the old building.

Archbishop Cushing will deliver the principal address. Eight members of the New England Hierarchy will be present.

Ground breaking will be performed by the Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, D.D., bishop of the Springfield Diocese.

The Very Rev. William E. FitzGerald, S.J., provincial of the New England Province of the Society of Jesus, will deliver the salutation.

Anniversary Date

Although the appeal for $3,000,000 to rebuild Shadowbrook is only two-thirds completed, construction will begin on Tuesday—a day of deep significance to the Jesuits. July 31st will mark the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus.

Joseph E. Sullivan of Lowell, national chairman of the fund campaign, will report on progress of the appeal. He announced yesterday that to date 11,000 donors have contributed $2,045,000.

The Rev. George V. McCabe, S.J., will introduce the campaign area chairmen and co-chairmen. These include:

Lawrence T. Callahan, North Shore area; Robert T. Capeless, Berkshire area; John P. Cooney, Jr., Rhode Island area; John E. Fenton, executive board; Charles J. Fleming, Worcester area; E. Clayton Gengras, Hartford area; William S. Ginn, Berkshire area; Thomas J. Groark, Norwich area; Thomas W. Grzebien, Jr., Rhode Island area; Dr. Solomon G. Hajjar, Merrimack Valley area.

Also John F. Havens, Hartford area; George J. Jacob, New Haven area; James V. Joy, Fairfield County area; James B. Kelley, Jr., Bristol County area; Dr. James J. Kelley, Rhode Island area; Judge Daniel M. Keyes, Jr., Springfield area; John A. Largay, Waterbury area; Daniel E. Marshall, Maine area; James J. Marshall, Worcester area; Adm. Edmond J. Moran, Fairfield County area; Dr. Richard L. Murphy, New Hampshire area; Harry J. O'Sullivan, Brockton area; Robert H. Ryan, special gifts, Boston; and Walter F. Sullivan, Central Massachusetts area.

Memorial Service

Following the ground breaking, a memorial service will be held at the graves of the four Jesuits who perished in the Shadowbrook fire. Archbishop Cushing will lead the prayers for the dead.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746
JUL 27 1956

Munch to Conduct Petrassi Concerto At Lenox Today

Lenox, July 26—Charles Munch will conduct the Tanglewood premere Friday night of the Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 by composer Gofredo Petrassi as the second weekend of concerts by the 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1956 Berkshire Festival gets under way in the giant Music Shed at Tanglewood at 8.30.

In addition, the program includes the Second "Leonore" Overture by Beethoven and Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, both of which have recently been released by RCA victor in recorded performances by Dr. Munch and the Orchestra.

Mr. Petrassi, who composed his Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is this summer's visiting professor of composition at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Charles Munch conducted the world premiere of the work at a pair of Boston Symphony concerts last December, and then conducted it in New York and various other eastern cities. It is in two constrasting movements, the first a Presto, the second an Andante tranquillo and Lento.

Tomorrow evening, pianist Rudolf Serkin, who made his Tanglewood debut last summer at a notable concert which drew more than 15,000 persons, will return to perform with Dr. Munch and the Orchestra the Piano Concerto in A Minor by Robert Schumann in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. The program also will include music by Hanson, Honegger and Debussy. Sunday afternoon, Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orhestra, will make his only Tanglewood conducting appearance of the season in a concert which will also feature his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, in a performance of the Hindemith Concerto.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 Saturday. A nominal admission of $1 is charged for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

HANOVER, PA.
SUN
Circ. D. 23,099

JUL 28 1956

AT MUSIC CENTER—Two Hanoverians and two other Pennsylvanians are studying at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer. They are, from left, Earl F. Gruber, Stroudsburg, who plays the bass trombone in the student orchestra; Shirley M. Rhodes, Hanover, who sings in the Festival Chorus; Mara Wall, Lancaster, who plays violin in the student orchestra, and Nancy L. Williams, Hanover, a drama student in the opera department. The school is in its 14th session from July 2 to Aug. 12 with Charles Munch as director of the school, Aaron Copland as assistant director and Ralph Berkowitz as dean.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 5,895

JUL 31 1956

BURLINGTON STUDENT AT TANGLEWOOD—June Stone, of 24 Hoover St., Burlington (extreme right), a member of the festival chorus, goes over a score with fellow students at the famed Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. In the background is the music shed, where Boston Symphony Orchestra summer concerts are held. Miss Stone's fellow New England area students are, from left, Eunice de Sanchez of Portland, Maine, Joan Lewitt of Nashua, N. H., Walter Tokarczyk of Woonsocket, R. I., and Madeline Palmer of Manchester, N. H.

GREENSBORO, N. C.
NEWS

JUL 30 1956

Music Notes

BY HENRY S. WOOTTON JR.

BREVARD PROGRAM:

Thor Johnson, of the Cincinnati Symphony, will make his annual visit as guest conductor and James Wolfe will be guest pianist on Friday, Aug. 3. The Transylvania Symphony Orchestra will perform the "Concerto in D Major" by K. P. E. Bach-Steinberg; Variations, Chaconne, and Finale by Norman Della Joio; and the Academic Festival Overture by Brahms. Wolfe will play Beethoven's "Concerto No. 4 in G Major."

Saturday, Aug. 4, features the Transylvania Concert Band, directed by Paul Bryan, and the Transylvania Chorus, Gordon Page conducting. The band will perform, among other selections, Darius Milhaud's "Suite Francaise." The chorus will sing Randall Thompson's "The Peaceable Kingdom," the text of which was adapted from the Book of Isaiah.

Sunday, Aug. 5, James Christian Pfohl conducts the Faure Requiem at the morning worship service; and a concert by the Orchestra of the Faculty and Staff in the afternoon, with soloists Mary Davenport, contralto, and James Wolfe, pianist.

TANGLEWOOD:

Young musicians representing 30 states, the District of Columbia and 18 foreign countries have come to Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., for the 14th annual session of the Berkshire Music Center. The summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra provides expert training and teaching in ensemble work, with public performances by the students as often as four times weekly, from July 4 to Aug. 12. Although some 30 per cent of the student body this year attended the Berkshire Music Center previously, the majority of the group are newcomers to Tanglewood.

The Berkshire Music Center was established in 1940 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to provide a campus where young musicians could add to their professional training and artistic experience under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the center. Aaron Copland is assistant director, Ralph Berkowitz is dean and Gail W. Rector is executive secretary. The distinguished faculty includes such notables as Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Boris Goldovsky and Seymour Lipkin. Goffredo Petrassi, composer-in-residence at the American Academy in Rome, is guest composer at Tanglewood this summer, continuing the tradition of having an eminent visiting composer on the faculty each year.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Britten's "Peter Grimes," and "Albert Herring," Mozart's "Idomeneo," Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot" and, so far as is known, the first American performance of Mozart's unfinished opera "Zaide." The summer of 1955 also witnessed the world premiere of a short opera especially composed at Tanglewood for performance there, "The Rope" by Louis Mennini, from a play by Eugene O'Neill. Sharing honors in this performance was tenor Paul Berry of Greensboro.

North Carolinians who are studying at Tanglewood this summer include Carolyn Warlick of Raleigh, Robert B. Morris, who teaches at the Music School of Woman's College, Greensboro, and Ann Rothgeb of Raleigh.

[275]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 31 1956

Petrovec

RETIRING TIMPANIST Roman Szulc, left, 62, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, gives a pointer to his pupil, Everett J. Firth, 26, who will succeed him as first timpanist when the orchestra begins its European tour Aug. 24. Mr. Szulc has been with the orchestra 21 years.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 1 1956

Rudolf Serkin's Final Concert At Tanglewood Tonight at 8:30

TANGLEWOOD—Rudolf Serkin, who last Saturday evening played Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of the composer, makes his second and final appearance at this summer's Berkshire Festival with a concert in the Theater-Concert Hall, tonight at 8:30. He will continue tonight his Schumann commemorations with performances of the Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval" Suite.

In addition, he will play Mozart's Quintet in E-Flat Major for piano and wind instruments, K. 452, with four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

The Boston Woodwind Quintet was formed by the principal woodwind players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1952. Since then the group has given many concerts throughout New England and on tour.

The final concert in this summer's chamber music series will be given next Wednesday evening when violinist Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam, pianist, will play a program of sonatas by Faure, Ravel and Franck.

This coming weekend the Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho (Friday evening), Leonard Bernstein (Saturday evening), and Charles Munch (Sunday afternoon). Soloists will be pianist Jocy de Oliveira on Friday; singers Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum on Saturday; and violinist Zino Francescatti on Sunday.

Remaining tickets for all concerts in the 1956 Berkshire Festival, which ends on Aug. 12, are now on sale at the Tanglewood box-office. Telephone reservations are accepted.

ADVERTISEMENT

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 1 1956

Symphony Timpanist Retiring

Roman Szulc, left, 62, first timpanist of the Boston Symphony Orcestra, will complete 21 years' association with the orchestra when he retires at the end of the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglwood on Aug. 12. His successor is his pupil, Everett J. Firth, 26, a member of the orchestra since 1952, who will become first timpanist with the start of the orchestra's tour of Europe on Aug. 24.

First Timpanist Of Symphony to Retire On Aug. 12

Lenox, July 31 — Roman Szulc, first timpanist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will retire at the close of the Tanglewood season, ending 21 years' association with the orchestra on Aug. 12.

His successor, a pupil he has trained since 1950, is Everett J. Firth, a member of the orchestra since 1952, whose new duties will commence with the Boston Symphony's European tour of 13 countries during August and September.

Mr. Szulc, who is 62, resides with his wife in Boston, and during the Tanglewood season at 28 Clinton Ave., Pittsfield. In the autumn he plans to move to Arizona to better his health. He has two sons, Walter, who plays the trombone, and Andrew, formerly a pianist with dance orchestras. They now operate a gasoline station in Long Island.

Szulc was born in Warsaw, Poland, commenced his musical studies at an early age, and played first timpani with almost every great conductor in Europe. He came to the United States in 1935, the year he joined the Boston Symphony, succeeding the great trombonist Ritter. He learned what English he knew on the boat bringing him to America.

Firth was born in Winchester and attended the New England Conservatory, Boston, and the Berkshire Music Center. At the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood during 1950 and 1951, he first studied with Mr. Szulc, and before joining the Boston Symphony in 1952, was a pupil of Saul Goodman, head timpanist of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

JUL 31 1956

25 Foreign Born Musicians To Visit Homelands With BSO

TANGLEWOOD — Twenty-five foreign-born members of the 105-man Boston Symphony Orchestra will be revisiting their homelands during the course of the five-week tour of Europe, which will commence immediately at the conclusion, on Aug. 12, of the orchestra's concerts at this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

By far the largest group of returning natives will be the 16 French-born members of the orchestra, who are looking forward to the concerts in Paris on Sept. 19 and 20, and in the Cathedral at Chartres on Sept. 21. Included in this group are Emil Kornsand (born in Colmar), Norbert Lauga (Aix-les-Bains), Pierre Mayer (Paris) and Roger Shermont (Paris), violinists. Albert Yves Bernard (Seine) and Jean Cauhape (Toulouse) are French-born violists. Leon Marjollet (Chalons-sur-Marne) and Alfred Zighera (Paris) are native French cellists. The bass section includes Georges Moleux, principal bass (Boulogne-sur-Mer), Gaston Dufresne (Lille) and Henri Girard (Montlhery).

Other French-horn Boston Symphony players are Jean Devergie (Marseille), oboe; Louis Speyer (Paris), English horn; Roger Voisin, principal trumpet (Angers); Marcel Lafosse (Marly-le-Roi), trumpet; and Bernard Zighera (Paris), harp.

Both Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, and Pierre Monteux, the guest conductor, are French-born, Dr. Munch in Strasbourg and Mr. Monteux in Paris. Each will conduct a concert in Paris.

Three Russian-born violinists have been polishing up their Russian for the orchestra's concerts in Leningrad on Sept. 5 and 6, and Moscow on Sept. 8 and 9. They are Victor Manusevitch (born in Alexandrovsk), Vladimir Resnikoff (Novgorod), and Manuel Zung (Grodno).

Two cellists, Louis Berger (Prague) and Josef Zimbler (Pilsen), have been briefing their colleagues about the best restaurants and hotels in Prague, where the orchestra will play on Sept. 11.

The concert in Vienna on Sept. 12 will find Irving Frankel (Lemberg), bass, and Ernst Panenka (Vienna), bassoon, acting as guides for the other men as they go sight-seeing in this famous musical capital.

The two remaining foreign-born players whose homelands will be visited are violinists Alfred Krips (Berlin) and Einar Hansen (Copenhagen). The orchestra will play in Copenhagen on Aug. 31, immediately after its final performance at the Edinburgh Festival, and Stuttgart and Munich in Germany will hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Sept. 13 and 14. Eleven other members of the orchestra are foreign-born, but their countries are not included on the itinerary for this year's tour.

[276]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 1 1956

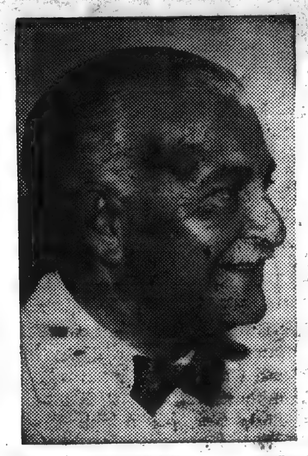
Rudolf Serkin Concert Today At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 31—Rudolf Serkin, who last Saturday evening played Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of the composer, makes his second and final appearance at this summer's Berkshire Festival with a concert in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Wednesday at 8.30 p. m. He will continue his Schumann commemorations with performances of the Symphonic Etudes and "Carnaval" Suite. In addition, he will play Mozart's Quintet in E-Flat Major for piano and wind intruments, K. 452, with four members of the Boston Woodwind Quintet, the leaders of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gion Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

The Boston Woodwind Quintet was formed by the principal woodwind players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1952. Since then the group has given many concerts throughout New England and on tour.

The final concert in this summer's chamber music series will be given next Wednesday evening when violinist Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsam, pianist, will play a program of sonatas by Faure, Ravel and Franck.

This coming week end the Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho (Friday evening), Leonard Bernstein (Saturday evening), and Charles Munch (Sunday afternoon). Soloists will be pianist Jocy de Oliveira on Friday; singers Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum on Saturday; and violinist Zino Francescatti on Sunday.



ARTHUR FIEDLER . . . conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra who will return to Tanglewood for his third consecutive year with the Pops at Tanglewood on Parade on August 9 at 8:15 p.. He will direct works by Gershwin, Rossini-Respighi and Ravel.

LAST TWO WEEKS AT TANGLEWOOD

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, August 4: Leonard Bernstein, in a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum; also, Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony. Sunday afternoon, August 5: Charles Munch conducting Copland's Symphonic Ode, Tschaikovsky's Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti, soloist, and Schumann's Second Symphony.

Four concerts during the coming week—a recital on Wednesday evening (August 8) in the intimate Theatre - Concert Hall by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam, and three weekend concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 10 and 11) and Sunday 105-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the giant Music Shed—will conclude the 1956 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts.

In addition, "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual gala for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts, will be held on Thursday (August 9), with simultaneous demonstrations by all five departments and a gala evening concert featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops led by Arthur Fiedler, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as piano soloist.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts opens with the concluding event of the Wednesday evening chamber music series on August 8, when Zino Francescatti and Artur Balsom will play sonatas for violin and piano by Faure, Ravel and Franck. (Theatre-Concert Hall 8:30 p.m.)

Charles Munch will conduct music by Haydn, Piston, Richard Strauss and Dukas at the Friday evening (August 10) concert; Pierre Monteux will conduct music by Freed, Brahms, Enesco and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening (August 11); and the Festival will conclude on Sunday afternoon (August 12) with Dr. Munch conducting Beethoven's "Eroica" Spmphony and scenes from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" with soloists including James Pease and Hans Sachs, Albert Da Costa as Walther, and Marguerite Willauer as Eva.

First performances at Tanglewood during the week are Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony (August 10), one of four works commissioned by the Boston Symphony in this, its 75th Anniversary season, to be heard here this summer; Isadore Freed's Festival Overture; the late Georges Enesco's Suite for Orchestra, No. 9, and the Wagner "Meistersniger" excerpts.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities will commence on Thursday, August 9, with demonstrations at 8:00 p.m. by all departments: student symphony orchestra, composition, chorus, and opera. Holders of box seats are invited to a special performance of opera in the formal gardens commencing at 4:00 p.m. At 8:15 p.m. a gala concert will be played in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn. Eleazar de Carvalho, Artistic Director and permanent Conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra and acting head this summer of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the first half of the program in Rimsky - Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10 with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross. Arthur Fieldler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra on the second half of the program in a typical Pops program of music by Rossini, Ravel and George Gershwin, with virtuoso pianist Jesus Maria Sanroma making his first Tanglewood appearance since the summer of 1942, playing Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 80,746

AUG 2 1956

RUDOLF SERKIN PLAYING STIRS ENTHUSIASM

Pianist, Quartet Are Given Much Applause at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 1 — Rudolf Serkin attracted the largest audience to any of the shed concerts thus far and he also drew the largest Wednesday night chamber music audience tonight. Continuing his commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of Robert Schumann, he played the Schumann piano concerto last Saturday night. Tonight he played the Schumann "Symphonic Etudes" and "Carnaval." Observing the current Mozart bicentennial, he played, with the Boston Symphony woodwind quartet, the "Quintet for piano, oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon."

Superb Musicians

Members of the quartet were Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, French horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon. With Mr. Serkin at the piano, there was formed a group of superb musicians who seemed to be playing the music they loved. Each had given his service for the benefit of the revolving scholarship fund.

Mr. Serkin gave a brilliant, strongly propulsive account of the Schumann "Symphonic Etudes." It was a broad, heavily outlined exposition of these delightful works, each of which seems to outdo the other in interest and ingenuity of treatment. We have heard greater contrasts given to these etudes, but not always the vitality and drive Mr. Serkin provided.

The "Carnaval" was a sheer delight to hear. The miracle of these pieces is the bewildering variety achieved despite the limiting factor of three themes to which he confined himself. Regardless of the program given the work, as pure music the "Carnaval" is a glowing, passionate outpouring from one of the most poetic musicians who ever lived. It was all mirrored in Mr. Serkin's playing which was beautifully detailed, limitless in tonal variety and spiced with the joyousness inherent in the music. The audience numbering 2236 fairly rocked the concert hall in its enthusiasm and the shy little man returned time after time to acknowledge the applause.

Mr. Serkin seemed completely happy when playing with his colleagues in the Mozart "Quintet for piano, oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon." He was relaxed and in perfect symphony and understanding with those about him.

ship. The larghetto is a superb movement in the style of an operatic aria. The finale is elegant in form and content. The five musicians played the work with complete understanding of its stylistic demands and with faultless blending of tone. Indeed, it is difficult to imagine a finer performance.

Eleazar de Carvalho, Brazilian conductor, makes his appearance Friday in the shed concert. His wife, Jocy de Oliveira, pianist, will make her North American debut playing Ravel's piano concerto. The program will also contain "La Kermesse" from the ballet of the same name by Barraud; three dances from De-Falla's "El Sombrero de Tres Picos" and the complete suite of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 2 1956

Music

Serkin Plays Schumann

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIFTH WEEK of Tanglewood began with a chamber music program last night in the Theater-Concert Hall played by Rudolf Serkin and four members of the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quintet: Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, French horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

The five artists played Mozart's quintet for piano and wind in the center of a program of which the beginning and end were the massive piano works of Schumann, the Symphonic Etudes and Carnaval.

There scarcely could be greater contrast between types of music than that presented by last night's Mozart, a superlatively joyous work, completely innocent of complicated problems, either musical or literary, and the highly dramatic sets of variations and sketches of Schumann.

* * *

singing and playing, but his immersion in the music, his expression of it, his headlong impetuosity, the gentleness of the tender episodes, the fury of the tempestuous ones, add up to a magnificent exhibition of musical exegesis.

* * *

"THE MOZART is in another world and no less a rewarding one. There is here none of the confusion of Schumann's merry-making. The adjustment of Serkin's piano to the smooth nature of the wind instruments and the skilled command of the performers made an excellent tonal grouping. Slight evidence of less than security at all points could not alter the pleasure the quintet afforded the audience. This was Mozart of the period of the great piano concertos, a mature man of 28. His insight to the potentialities of the instruments was artistically revealed last night as the graceful phrases were turned with suavity and tonal beauty.

SERKIN'S conception was on a vast canvas. His unlimited mastery of the keyboard was used solely to express the bursting emotion and passion pent up within him. If these virtues drove him at times even beyond the prowess of his own fingers, the large audience was made to sense every fibre and every particle of Schumann's intensity.

This is the centenary of Schumann's death and these particular suites were written in the early 1830s, when the composer was not yet 25. It doesn't take much imagination to discern what a commotion such writing must have caused in its day. Serkin exposed the depths of Schumann's melancholy and revealed the heights of his exuberance. The initial ominous descending arpeggio in C sharp minor of the Etudes set the stage. Serkin was not yet at his most dominant moment of the evening. Indeed, there were other instances of impatience and less than his wonted self-discipline. Even so, one could yet feel the accumulation of melodrama.

* * *

SCHUMANN stays in the lower registers here predominantly, investigating new tonal and rhythmic regions, requiring a pianism in which Serkin was superbly adequate and, for the style of music, peerless.

The Carnaval has a brilliant introduction, suggesting the opening of possibly a great masquerade. Indeed the wide skips and the variety of the episodes must have just begged for someone to use it as ballet music, for that is just what Diaghilev did in 1913. He had it orchestrated and Nijinsky achieved a memorable success as the Harlequin.

These Schumann pieces are a veritable decathlon for a pianist or, more properly, an eikosathlon. It is an unforgettable experience to hear, and witness, Serkin's performances. We do not hold out so much for his

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,140

AUG 2 1956

Violinist Performs In Sunday Concert At Tanglewood

The gracefully competent conducting of Richard Burgin, Concertmaster and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the top flight musical craftsmanship of violin soloist Ruth Posselt were features of Sunday afternoon's Berkshire Music Festival concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

In weather that can only be termed "New England at its best", a large crowd turned out to hear the afternoon presentation.

Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Ballet, second suite, Op. 64, was the first work on the program. The first number of the four played from the suite drew a clear soundpicture of the pompous nobleman striding about in his clanking suit of armor.

The second, carefree and gay number pictured the maiden Juliet and her awakening to mature emotions; the exotic dance number was followed by the last picturing Romeo at Juliet's grave, in a musical portrayal of powerful emotion all drawn out and displayed to perfection by the musiciansip of the great orchestra.

The highlight of the afternoon was the excellent performance by Ruth Posselt of the Hindemith Concerto for violin and orchestra. Miss Posselt drew from her instrument the delicate intonation and emotional sensitivity demanded in the second movement of the work with sure-fingered skill. In the third "vivace" movement, and particularly the Cadenza, the soloist demonstrated deft bowing and fingering in her execution of the lively section. Mr. Burgin piloted the orchestra through the work giving expert close support to the violinist. A loud ovation greeted Miss Posselt as she completed the work, and the audience called her back to the podium four times to acknowledge the applause.

Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 1 in D major was the afternoon's final work, with its extended development of the old children's tune "Frere Jacques." The symphony with is pastoral quality in the first movement fitted precisely into the atmosphere of the lovely wooded hills of the area.

Outrageous audience manners were displayed by a number of spectators who rose from their seats and departed before Mr. Burgin and the orchestra had even finished the final movement of the Mahler work. Their departure provided a considerable interference with the mood of the work and the enjoyment of many of the spectators of the work. We hope they arrived safely wherever they were going with such haste.

A similar lapse in courteousness, we think, occured last Friday evening during the performance of a work especially composed for the 75th Anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

As Mr. Munch was conducting the orchestra in a performance of Petrassi's Fifth Concerto the audible audience comment during the pause between the second and third movements must have been disconcerting to the players, conductor and composer, who was present.

We think they received what they deserved (the audience) when Mr. Munch half-turned on the Podium and looked-daggers at the loudmouths, refusing to continue the work until they quieted down. They eventually did so, and the performance continued. It is admittedly an extremely modern piece of orchestral music, and difficult to understand, but they might have tried, at least. There were many here who appreciated the skill of the composer, fortunately, and Goffredo Petrassi was roundly applauded as he stepped to the podium.

The audience mood was, perhaps, indicated by the fact that they broke in with applause between the first and second movements of Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 4 in F minor, Op. 36, which followed the Petrassi work. We feel that a great symphony orchestra would be lax in its duty, however, if it only programmed traditional works in the romantic idiom, and did not attempt to deliver samplings of contemporary composition to its audiences. May their policy continue.

Friday night's first work was the Beethoven Leonore Overture No. 2, Op. 22.

L.F.M.

This week's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, August 4: Leonard Bernstein, in a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum; also, Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony. Sunday afternoon, August 5: Charles Munch conducting Coplands Symphonic Ode, Tchiakosvky's Violin Concerto with Zina Francescatti, soloist, and Schumann's Second Symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 3 1956

Petrovec

REVIEWING the score of the opera, "Griffelkin," to be presented by the Berkshire Music Center opera students at Tanglewood Monday and Tuesday evenings, are Boris Goldovsky, left, who will stage the production, and Lukas Foss, the composer, who will conduct at both performances.

Concert Today In Memory of Koussevitzky

Lenox, Aug. 3—Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood. The Berkshire Festival concert is in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

As one of the most illustrious pupils of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony, Mr. Bernstein has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940, as composer, conductor and pianist.

Mr. Bernstein has scheduled two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke de Varon assisting. Soloists are Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

The three vocal soloists in the portion of Mozart's Mass which will be sung are all former students at the Berkshire Music Center who have since gone on to distinguished careers in the concert and operatic fields.

Sunday afternoon, Dr. Munch returns to the podium in a concert which will bring the eminent violinist Zino Francescatti to the stage of the Shed as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto. Dr. Munch will begin the concert with the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with the Symphony No. 2 in C Major by Schumann, performed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

Music

Berkshire Eagle Aug 3

Munch Conducts Students

TANGLEWOOD — Charles Munch made his annual appearance with the Tanglewood student orchestra in the Shed last night. He chose his own personal warhorse, Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique."

Dr. Munch led the willing students a splendid chase. They produced almost all the color and contrast he can draw from this work. From the opening expansive reveries to the concluding truly fantastic Witches Sabbath, the orchestra played with a vigor and warmth that matched Dr. Munch's own.

The audience of 2,500 loved it. They recalled Dr. Munch six times an dtalked so excitedly between the third and fourth movements he was forced to turn and stare them into silence before continuing.

* * *

BEFORE intermission, and the Berlioz, Hugh Ross directed 35 men's voices, five basses, three pianos, brass and percussion in Coro Di Morti (Chorus of Death) by Tanglewood's composition teacher, Goffredo Petrassi of Rome. The performance was a Tanglewood first.

The work is one of tensions. Monteverdi-style voice lines and modern-type orchestration are heard in moods alternately strident and lyrical. The chorus sings as the dead reflecting upon life, and death. The result is a solid and effective piece of music.

Mr. Ross, whose preparation of the group and command of the score was apparent, called the composer to the stage to share the audience's warm appreciation.

* * *

THE PROGRAM opened with a reading of Prokofieff's classical symphony by student conductor Kenneth Schermerhorn. Lack of rehearsal time and numb fingers were probably responsible in part for the fuzzy beginning. Otherwise, Mr. Schermerhorn's energetic and scoreless finger-pointing did not fully bring out the orchestra's talent for phrase-making and variety of tone and dynamics.

The final student orchestra concert will be Saturday, Aug. 11.

—S.S.R.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 3 1956

BSO Timpanist, Retiring, Spends Summers Here

Roman Szulc, first timpanist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will retire at the end of the Tanglewood season, ending 21 years' association with the orchestra, lives in Pittsfield during the Festival season. Mr. Szulc, who is 62, resides with his wife at 28 Clinton Ave. in this city during the summer. In the autumn he plans to move to Arizona to better his health. His two sons, Walter, who plays the trombone, and Andrew, formerly a pianist with dance orchestras, now operate a gasoline service station in Long Island.

Mr. Szulc was born in Warsaw, Poland. He commenced his musical studies at an early age, and played first timpani with almost every great conductor in Europe. He came to the United States in 1935, the year he joined the Boston Symphony, succeeding the timpanist Ritter. He learned what English he knew on the boat bringing him to America.

Five Men in Section

Mr. Firth, his successor, was born in Winchster and attended the New England Conservatory, Boston, and the Berkshire Music Center. At the orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood during 1950 and 1951, he first studied with Mr. Szulc, and before joining the Boston Symphony in 1952, was a pupil of Saul Goodman, head timpanist of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony.

The Boston Symphony's timpani and percussion section, now headed by Mr. Firth, comprises five men. Harold Farberman is the other timpanist. Charles Smith and Harold Thompson in the percussion trio have been joined this season by Arthur Charles Press, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., a scholarship student at the Juilliard School of Music, New York, and a student of Morris Goldenberg and Saul Goodman. Mr. Press has played with Thomas Sherman's Little Orchestra Society and was solo percussionist with the Radio City Music Hall orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2076, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
AUG 4 1956

Bernstein To Conduct

Memorial to Koussevitzky At Festival Shed Tonight

TANGLEWOOD—Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium of the Music Shed tonight in his only appearance of the season with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tonight's concert will be in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who for 25 years was conductor of the BSO. Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the late conductor, Dr. Koussevitzky, has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940—as composer, conductor and pianist. This summer he has been on leave as head of the department of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

Mozart's Mass

Mr. Bernstein has scheduled for tonight two works singularly appropriate for the occasion. The Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor, with the Festival chorus of the Music Center students, who have been trained by Hugh Ross, assisted by Lorna Cooke de Varon. Soloists will be Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

In his 25 years as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra the late Serge Koussevitzky often conducted performances of Mozart's music and it was he who conceived the idea of the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians which now traditionally precede the four weeks of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony was given its premiere American performances under Dr. Koussevitzky's direction in November, 1945. By coincidence, when the score of the symphony arrived in this country, it turned out to be written on music manuscript paper which had been sent to Russia during the war by Dr. Koussevitzky when it became known that there was a shortage in Russia of such paper.

The three vocal soloists in the portion of Mozart's Mass which will be sung are all former students at the Berkshire Music Center who have since gone on to distinguished careers in the concert and operatic fields. Miss Curtin was a student at Tanglewood in 1946, 1948 and 1951; Miss Alberts studied there in 1941, 1946, 1947, 1950 and 1951, and Mr. McCollum was a student in the opera department in 1952 and 1953.

During the past season Mr. Bernstein has added to his many and varied activities that of television personality. His several appearances during the year on the "Omnibus" program were hailed enthusiastically by both press and public. He currently is completing work on two musicals which will be produced on Broadway in the fall. One is an opera, with libretto by Lillian Hellman, based upon Voltaire's "Candide." The other is called "East Side Story."

Tanglewood Premiere

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Munch returns to the podium in a concert which will bring the eminent violinist Zino Francescatti to the stage of the Shed as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto. Dr. Munch will begin the concert with the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with the Symphony No. 2 in C Major by Schumann, performed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death, July 29, 1856.

Mr. Francescatti, who lives in near-by Monterey, can trace a direct line of violin tradition from the legendary Paganini—his first teacher was his father who had studied violin with Sivori, who in turn had been the only direct pupil of Paganini. At five Francescatti made his first public appearance. At ten he created a profound impression in the Beethoven Concerto. At twenty he made his formal debut with an orchestra in Paris. Before coming to the United States in 1939, he was already famous throughout Europe and South America. His violin is the famous "Hart" Stradivarius, dated 1727, which is one of the finest examples of the great violin maker's art.

TOMORROW'S SOLOIST at the Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Dr. Charles Munch conducting, will be Zino Francescatti, who will play Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto. Mr. Francescatti, a summer resident of Monterey, is donating his services to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund Wednesday evening in a chamber music recital in the Theater Concert Hall, Tanglewood.

Petrovec

STROLLING about the Tanglewood grounds following rehearsals this morning are Leonard Bernstein, former pupil of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who will conduct the BSO at tonight's concert in memory of the late musical director of the orchestra, and Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky, widow of the famed conductor and founder of the Berkshire Music Center.

BAYONNE, N. J.
TIMES
Circ. D. 15,175 - Sat. 14,241
AUG 29 1956

Aslanian Returns From Festival

Richard Aslanian of 812 Avenue C, will enter his senior year at the New England Conservatory of Music in the fall. Aslanian, a graduate of Bayonne High School, has just completed a course at the Berkshire Music School, Tanglewood, Mass., to which he won a full summer scholarship.

In addition to studying conducting, he was accompanist for the Tanglewood Choir at the Berkshire Music Festival. He has also served as musical assistant in the opera department of the Marlboro Music School, Marlboro, Vt., where his work included coaching singers in operatic repertoire.

Aslanian expects to give a full piano recital in Boston, December 7.

ELYRIA, OHIO
Chronicle-Telegram
Circ. D. 19,415
AUG 23 1956

Nagy Sings At Pops Concert In Cleveland

LORAIN—"It was a wonderful experience," was the reaction of Robert Nagy, 909 West 29th St., Lorain, this area's rising young tenor, to his first appearance with the Cleveland Summer Orchestra at the Pops Concert in Municipal Auditorium last night.

Nagy appeared in the Herbert-Weill-Romberg program, with Saramae Endich, soprano, and Norman Atkins, baritone. He was received with rousing applause and was called upon to take several bows after each of his numbers.

The young tenor, who has gone far since he enrolled in Cleveland Institute of Music three days after his release from the Army in September, 1952, returned 10 days ago from six weeks of "hard work" at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Mass., where he studied opera with Boris Goldovsky. Last Friday he went to Chicago as a guest of the National Music Festival there, which invites the previous year winners to return for a dinner and to take part in the program.

At Tanglewood the students worked on ten different operas, and Nagy sung a role in the third act of The Meistersingers with the Boston Symphony. This was his first experience with singing in German. He also had to work on his French and Italian to sing the arias in some of the workshop sessions.

Right now young Nagy is taking a rest before going to New York the latter part of September, where he will confer with Max Rudolf of the Metropolitan Opera about his $2,000 scholarship won in the Met Auditions this spring.

When his plans are completed, Nagy expects that his wife, Vince, and their small son, Robert Jr., will join him in New York.

Petrovec

PRINCIPAL SOLOISTS in tonight's performance of the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, who will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting are, left to right, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

[279]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
AUG 4 1956

Bernstein To Conduct

Memorial to Koussevitzky At Festival Shed Tonight

TANGLEWOOD—Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium of the Music Shed tonight in his only appearance of the season with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tonight's concert will be in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who for 25 years was conductor of the BSO. Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the late conductor, Dr. Koussevitzky, has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940—as composer, conductor and pianist. This summer he has been on leave as head of the department of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

Mozart's Mass

Mr. Bernstein has scheduled for tonight two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: The Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor, with the Festival chorus of the Music Center students, who have been trained by Hugh Ross, assisted by Lorna Cooke de Varon. Soloists will be Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

In his 25 years as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra the late Serge Koussevitzky often conducted performances of Mozart's music and it was he who conceived the idea of the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians which now traditionally precede the four weeks of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony was given its premiere American performances under Dr. Koussevitzky's direction in November, 1945. By coincidence, when the score of the symphony arrived in this country, it turned out to be written on music manuscript paper which had been sent to Russia during the war by Dr. Koussevitzky when it became known that there was a shortage in Russia of such paper.

The three vocal soloists in the portion of Mozart's Mass which will be sung are all former students at the Berkshire Music Center who have since gone on to distinguished careers in the concert and operatic fields. Miss Curtin was a student at Tanglewood in 1946, 1948 and 1951; Miss Alberts studied there in 1941, 1946, 1947, 1950 and 1951, and Mr. McCollum was a student in the opera department in 1952 and 1953.

During the past season Mr. Bernstein has added to his many and varied activities that of television personality. His several appearances during the year on the "Omnibus" program were hailed enthusiastically by both press and public. He currently is completing work on two musicals which will be produced on Broadway in the fall. One is an opera, with libretto by Lillian Hellman, based upon Voltaire's "Candide." The other is called "East Side Story."

Tanglewood Premiere

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Munch returns to the podium in a concert which will bring the eminent violinist Zino Francescatti to the stage of the Shed as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto. Dr. Munch will begin the concert with the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with the Symphony No. 2 in C Major by Schumann, performed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death, July 29, 1856.

Mr. Francescatti, who lives in near-by Monterey, can trace a direct line of violin tradition from the legendary Paganini—his first teacher was his father who had studied violin with Sivori, who in turn had been the only direct pupil of Paganini. At five Francescatti made his first public appearance. At ten he created a profound impression in the Beethoven Concerto. At twenty he made his formal debut with an orchestra in Paris. Before coming to the United States in 1939, he was already famous throughout Europe and South America. His violin is the famous "Hart" Stradivarius, dated 1727, which is one of the finest examples of the great violin maker's art.

TOMORROW'S SOLOIST at the Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Dr. Charles Munch conducting, will be Zino Francescatti, who will play Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto. Mr. Francescatti, a summer resident of Monterey, is donating his services to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund Wednesday evening in a chamber music recital in the Theater Concert Hall, Tanglewood.

Petrovec

STROLLING about the Tanglewood grounds following rehearsals this morning are Leonard Bernstein, former pupil of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who will conduct the BSO at tonight's concert in memory of the late musical director of the orchestra, and Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky, widow of the famed conductor and founder of the Berkshire Music Center.

BAYONNE, N. J.
TIMES
Circ. D. 15,175 - Sat. 14,241
AUG 29 1956

Aslanian Returns From Festival

Richard Aslanian of 812 Avenue C, will enter his senior year at the New England Conservatory of Music in the fall. Aslanian, a graduate of Bayonne High School, has just completed a course at the Berkshire Music School, Tanglewood, Mass., to which he won a full summer scholarship.

In addition to studying conducting, he was accompanist for the Tanglewood Choir at the Berkshire Music Festival. He has also served as musical assistant in the opera department of the Marlboro Music School, Marlboro, Vt., where his work included coaching singers in operatic repertoire.

Aslanian expects to give a full piano recital in Boston, December 7.

ELYRIA, OHIO
Chronicle-Telegram
Circ. D. 19,415
AUG 23 1956

Nagy Sings At Pops Concert In Cleveland

LORAIN—"It was a wonderful experience," was the reaction of Robert Nagy, 909 West 29th St., Lorain, this area's rising young tenor, to his first appearance with the Cleveland Summer Orchestra at the Pops Concert in Municipal Auditorium last night.

Nagy appeared in the Herbert-Weill-Romberg program, with Saramae Endich, soprano, and Norman Atkins, baritone. He was received with rousing applause and was called upon to take several bows after each of his numbers.

The young tenor, who has gone far since he enrolled in Cleveland Institute of Music three days after his release from the Army in September, 1952, returned 10 days ago from six weeks of "hard work" at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Mass., where he studied opera with Boris Goldovsky. Last Friday he went to Chicago as a guest of the National Music Festival there, which invites the previous year winners to return for a dinner and to take part in the program.

At Tanglewood the students worked on ten different operas, and Nagy sung a role in the third act of The Meistersingers with the Boston Smyphony. This was his first experience with singing in German. He also had to work on his French and Italian to sing the arias in some of the workshop sessions.

Right now young Nagy is taking a rest before going to New York the latter part of September, where he will confer with Max Rudolf of the Metropolitan Opera about his $2,000 scholarship won in the Met Auditions this spring.

When his plans are completed, Nagy expects that his wife, Vince, and their small son, Robert Jr., will join him in New York.

Petrovec

PRINCIPAL SOLOISTS in tonight's performance of the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, who will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting are, left to right, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

[219]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 4 1956

Bernstein To Conduct

Memorial to Koussevitzky At Festival Shed Tonight

TANGLEWOOD—Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium of the Music Shed tonight in his only appearance of the season with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tonight's concert will be in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who for 25 years was conductor of the BSO. Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the late conductor, Dr. Koussevitzky, has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940—as composer, conductor and pianist. This summer he has been on leave as head of the department of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

Mozart's Mass

Mr. Bernstein has scheduled for tonight two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: The Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor, with the Festival chorus of the Music Center students, who have been trained by Hugh Ross, assisted by Lorna Cooke de Varon. Soloists will be Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

In his 25 years as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra the late Serge Koussevitzky often conducted performances of Mozart's music and it was he who conceived the idea of the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians which now traditionally precede the four weeks of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony was given its premiere American performances under Dr. Koussevitzky's direction in November, 1945. By coincidence, when the score of the symphony arrived in this country, it turned out to be written on music manuscript paper which had been sent to Russia during the war by Dr. Koussevitzky when it became known that there was a shortage in Russia of such paper.

The three vocal soloists in the portion of Mozart's Mass which will be sung are all former students at the Berkshire Music Center who have since gone on to distinguished careers in the concert and operatic fields. Miss Curtin was a student at Tanglewood in 1946, 1948 and 1951; Miss Alberts studied there in 1941, 1946, 1947, 1950 and 1951, and Mr. McCollum was a student in the opera department in 1952 and 1953.

During the past season Mr. Bernstein has added to his many and varied activities that of television personality. His several appearances during the year on the "Omnibus" program were hailed enthusiastically by both press and public. He currently is completing work on two musicals which will be produced on Broadway in the fall. One is an opera, with libretto by Lillian Hellman, based upon Voltaire's "Candide." The other is called "East Side Story."

Tanglewood Premiere

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Munch returns to the podium in a concert which will bring the eminent violinist Zino Francescatti to the stage of the Shed as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto. Dr. Munch will begin the concert with the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with the Symphony No. 2 in C Major by Schumann, performed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death, July 29, 1856.

Mr. Francescatti, who lives in near-by Monterey, can trace a direct line of violin tradition from the legendary Paganini—his first teacher was his father who had studied violin with Sivori, who in turn had been the only direct pupil of Paganini. At five Francescatti made his first public appearance. At ten he created a profound impression in the Beethoven Concerto. At twenty he made his formal debut with an orchestra in Paris. Before coming to the United States in 1939, he was already famous throughout Europe and South America. His violin is the famous "Hart" Stradivarius, dated 1727, which is one of the finest examples of the great violin maker's art.

TOMORROW'S SOLOIST at the Berkshire Festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Dr. Charles Munch conducting, will be Zino Francescatti, who will play Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto. Mr. Francescatti, a summer resident of Monterey, is donating his services to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund Wednesday evening in a chamber music recital in the Theater Concert Hall, Tanglewood.

Petrovec

STROLLING about the Tanglewood grounds following rehearsals this morning are Leonard Bernstein, former pupil of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who will conduct the BSO at tonight's concert in memory of the late musical director of the orchestra, and Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky, widow of the famed conductor and founder of the Berkshire Music Center.

BAYONNE, N. J.
TIMES
Circ. D. 15,175 - Sat. 14,241
AUG 23 1956

Aslanian Returns From Festival

Richard Aslanian of 812 Avenue C, will enter his senior year at the New England Conservatory of Music in the fall. Aslanian, a graduate of Bayonne High School, has just completed a course at the Berkshire Music School, Tanglewood, Mass., to which he won a full summer scholarship.

In addition to studying conducting, he was accompanist for the Tanglewood Choir at the Berkshire Music Festival. He has also served as musical assistant in the opera department of the Marlboro Music School, Marlboro, Vt., where his work included coaching singers in operatic repertoire.

Aslanian expects to give a full piano recital in Boston, December 7.

ELYRIA, OHIO
Chronicle-Telegram
Circ. D. 19,415
AUG 23 1956

Nagy Sings At Pops Concert In Cleveland

LORAIN—"It was a wonderful experience," was the reaction of Robert Nagy, 909 West 29th St., Lorain, this area's rising young tenor, to his first appearance with the Cleveland Summer Orchestra at the Pops Concert in Municipal Auditorium last night.

Nagy appeared in the Herbert-Weill-Romberg program, with Saramae Endich, soprano, and Norman Atkins, baritone. He was received with rousing applause and was called upon to take several bows after each of his numbers.

The young tenor, who has gone far since he enrolled in Cleveland Institute of Music three days after his release from the Army in September, 1952, returned 10 days ago from six weeks of "hard work" at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Mass., where he studied opera with Boris Goldovsky. Last Friday he went to Chicago as a guest of the National Music Festival there, which invites the previous year winners to return for a dinner and to take part in the program.

At Tanglewood the students worked on ten different operas, and Nagy sung a role in the third act of The Meistersingers with the Boston Smyphony. This was his first experience with singing in German. He also had to work on his French and Italian to sing the arias in some of the workshop sessions.

Right now young Nagy is taking a rest before going to New York the latter part of September, where he will confer with Max Rudolf of the Metropolitan Opera about his $2,000 scholarship won in the Met Auditions this spring.

When his plans are completed, Nagy expects that his wife, Vince, and their small son, Robert Jr., will join him in New York.

Petrovec

PRINCIPAL SOLOISTS in tonight's performance of the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, who will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting are, left to right, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 4 1956

Bernstein To Conduct

Memorial to Koussevitzky At Festival Shed Tonight

TANGLEWOOD—Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium of the Music Shed tonight in his only appearance of the season with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tonight's concert will be in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who for 25 years was conductor of the BSO. Mr. Bernstein, one of the most illustrious pupils of the late conductor, Dr. Koussevitzky, has distinguished himself in three fields since he first came to Tanglewood in 1940—as composer, conductor and pianist. This summer he has been on leave as head of the department of orchestra and conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

Mozart's Mass

Mr. Bernstein has scheduled for tonight two works singularly appropriate for the occasion: The Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C minor, with the Festival chorus of the Music Center students, who have been trained by Hugh Ross, assisted by Lorna Cooke de Varon. Soloists will be Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. The remainder of the program is the Fifth Symphony, Opus 100, by Prokofieff.

In his 25 years as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra the late Serge Koussevitzky often conducted performances of Mozart's music and it was he who conceived the idea of the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians which now traditionally precede the four weeks of Berkshire Festival concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony was given its premiere American performances under Dr. Koussevitzky's direction in November, 1945. By coincidence, when the score of the symphony arrived in this country, it turned out to be written on music manuscript paper which had been sent to Russia during the war by Dr. Koussevitzky when it became known that there was a shortage in Russia of such paper.

The three vocal soloists in the portion of Mozart's Mass which will be sung are all former students at the Berkshire Music Center who have since gone on to distinguished careers in the concert and operatic fields. Miss Curtin was a student at Tanglewood in 1946, 1948 and 1951; Miss Alberts studied there in 1941, 1946, 1947, 1950 and 1951, and Mr. McCollum was a student in the opera department in 1952 and 1953.

During the past season Mr. Bernstein has added to his many and varied activities that of television personality. His several appearances during the year on the "Omnibus" program were hailed enthusiastically by both press and public. He currently is completing work on two musicals which will be produced on Broadway in the fall. One is an opera, with libretto by Lillian Hellman, based upon Voltaire's "Candide." The other is called "East Side Story."

Tanglewood Premiere

Tomorrow afternoon Dr. Munch returns to the podium in a concert which will bring the eminent violinist Zino Francescatti to the stage of the Shed as soloist in the Tchaikovsky Concerto. Dr. Munch will begin the concert with the Tanglewood premiere of Aaron Copland's Symphonic Ode, composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with the Symphony No. 2 in C Major by Schumann, performed in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death, July 29.

Mr. Francescatti, who lives near-by Monterey, can trace his direct line of violin tradition to the legendary Paganini. His teacher was his father who had studied violin with Sivori, in turn had been the only pupil of Paganini. At ten he made his first orchestral appearance. At ten he created an impression in the Vieuxtemps concerto. At twenty he followed his official debut with Toscanini's NBC Symphony. Before coming to America in 1939, he toured throughout Europe's principal cities. His American debut was with the Hartford Symphony, which is one of the lots to hear of the great violinists.

TOMORROW'S SOLOIST concert by the Boston Symphony O Munch conducting, will be Zino F Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto. M resident of Monterey, is donating h wood Revolving Scholarship Fund chamber music recital in the Theater

Petrovec

STROLLING about the Tanglewood grounds following rehearsals this morning are Leonard Bernstein, former pupil of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, who will conduct the BSO at tonight's concert in memory of the late musical director of the orchestra, and Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky, widow of the famed conductor and founder of the Berkshire Music Center.

BAYONNE, N. J.
TIMES
Circ. D. 15,175 - Sat. 14,241
AUG 29 1956

Aslanian Returns From Festival

Richard Aslanian of 812 Avenue C, will enter his senior year at the New England Conservatory of Music in the fall. Aslanian, a graduate of Bayonne High School, has just completed a course at the Berkshire Music School, Tanglewood, Mass., to which he won a full summer scholarship.

In addition to studying conducting, he was accompanist for the Tanglewood Choir at Festival. is musical ra depart- oro Music rt., where coaching epertoire. to give a in Boston,

SPECIAL 25¢ OFF
FULL-BODIED
COFFEE

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Grar... are proud parents of a daugh... born Aug. 14 at Good Samarit... Hospital, Sandusky.

Mrs. Charles Smith of Lor... was a guest last week of her b... ther, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hast...

Phone 3441

Petrovec

PRINCIPAL SOLOISTS in tonight's performance of the Kyrie and Gloria from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, who will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting are, left to right, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto, and John McCollum, tenor. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union Leader (m) & (e)
MANCHESTER, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 45,622
AUG 4 1956

MUSIC STUDENTS—Residents of New England who are studying at Lenox, Mass. at the Music Center this summer. Left to right: Eunice De Sanchez of Portland, Me., an associate in the opera department; Joan Lewitt of Nashua, a member of the Festival Chorus; Walter Tokarczyk of Woonsocket, R. I., a timpanist in the student orchestra; Madeline Palmer of 78 Ballaire street, a drama student in the opera department; June Stone, Burlington, Vt., a member of the Festival Chorus. The summer school of music is conducted by the Boston Symphony orchestra in connection with its annual concerts.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
AUG 5 1956

Second Thoughts on Music

Portions of Five Operas Performed at Tanglewood

Single Acts From 'La Rondine,' 'The Trojans,' 'Aida,' 'Don Carlo' and 'Falstaff' Heard to Advantage; Full Orchestra at Peak

By WILLIARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 4—The quality of performance at the Berkshire Music Festival continues high. One of the strongest departments in the school is the opera department, presided over by Boris Goldovsky. This past week they offered acts from five 19th-century operas including "La Rondine" by Puccini; "The Trojans" by Berlioz and "Aida," "Don Carlo" and "Falstaff" by Verdi. One heard some excellent voices and saw staging, costumes and scenery that were both ingenious and handsome.

Quite the finest offering was the second act of "Don Carlo." John Parella, baritone, handled the difficult aria of King Phillip in a thoroughly artistic manner and the "Inquisitor" of John McCurdy provided some of the finest singing of the entire evening. Another splendid singer was Shirley Carter, who sang "O Don Fatale" in an exciting manner.

Singing Excels

Mr. Goldovsky is particularly fond of "The Trojans." In fact, he offered the American premiere of this opera. In the fourth act, sung in English he offered such fine singers as Marjorie McClung, soprano, and Robert Nagy, one the best tenors we have heard here.

The concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra have been consistenly fine and worthy of larger audiences, but weather has not been kind. Charles Munch directed the orchestra in a program which included the second "Leonore" overture and Petrassi's "Fifth Concerto for Orchestra" in the first half and concluded with the Symphony No. 4 in F minor by Tchiakowsky. The Petrassi opus was one of the works commissioned by the orchestra for its 75th anniversary. Mr. Petrassi is visiting composer at the Center this summer.

To this listener, the work was not an unqualified success. It has many fine moments but there is a lack of direction and focus. It just doesn't get any place. Had we not heard Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" the week before, it is possible Mr. Petrassi's work might have attracted more interest. Mr. Munch has a way with Tchaikowsky, a very personal way. His interpretations remain intimate while not lacking in vigor.

Memorial Elegy

The following night, Mr. Munch offered as his opening work an "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" by Howard Hanson. Lacking any great imagination, this is a sincere work with moments of grandeur. This was another of the commissioned works for the 75th anniversary. Mr. Hanson has been a significant figure among American composers for a long time and, through the Eastman School, has done more than his bit for the American composer.

It was Rudolf Serkin, pianist, who was the bright star of this concert. He drew more than 9000 people to Tanglewood, the largest audience thus far. His playing of Schumann Concerto in A minor was a truly magnificent achievement. It was far more a dramatic reading than we have heard before. It was continually exciting and gave the huge audience just about everything it wanted. Honegger's fifth symphony, a particular favorite with Mr. Munch, and Debussy's "La Mer," a work in which Munch is a supreme interpreter, made up the program.

Burgin Conducts

Sunday afternoon drew some 7000 people in spite of good weather. Some strange sort of planning resulted in concertmaster Richard Burgin conducting the orchestra in a program of Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler. The soloist was violinist Ruth Posselt. (Mrs. Burgin.) Sunday afternoon is a time when Tanglewood should get its largest crowd and it should see to it that such a crowd gets the best Tanglewood has to offer. Mr. Burgin has had a long and distingusihed career, but his drawing power as a conductor is not great. Neither do we feel that Mahler's first symphony or Hindemith's violin concerto are works to attract a Sunday afternoon audience, fine as both are.

The orchestra played its best for Mr. Burgin and Miss Posselt gave a superb performance of the Hindemith violin concerto. Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" ballet suite is a glowing, brilliant work and it was played with an exciting concept. No fault can be found with this program or its performance; it just isn't the sort of program that will bring a large audience to Tanglewood on a Sunday afternoon.

"Tanglewood On Parade"

Don't forget "Tanglewood On Parade" on Thursday. There is no better opportunity to see the Berkshire concerts, chamber music and choral singing. In the evening the Boston Symphony orchestra with Festival chorus will be heard in the "Russian Easter" overture by Rimsky-Korsakoff and "Choros No. 10" by Villa-Lobos. The Brazilian conductor De Carvalho will conduct this portion of the program.

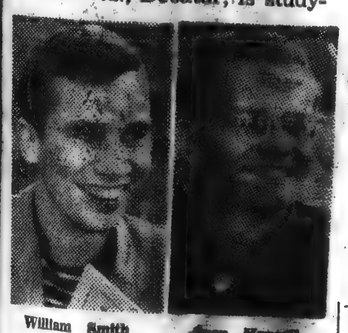
The second portion will be devoted to a real Boston "Pops" program including Gershwin's "Piano Concerto in F" played by Jesus Maria Sanroma. Ravel's "Bolero" and "La Boutique" as arranged by Resphigi, will also be heard. There will be encores. All this should make for a pleasant afternoon and evening at Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music Center will benefit.

ATLANTA, GA.
Journal & Constitution
Circ. S. 480,949
AUG 5 1956

Berkshire Center Draws 2 From Here

Two Atlanta area residents are attending the summer school of music at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

William Smith of 2670 Oak Grove Rd., Decatur, is studying composition with American composer Lukas Foss.



William Smith — Sven Hansell

Sven Hansell of 1877 Ardmore Rd., NE, is an assistant conductor and choir leader at the center. The young Atlantian received a master's degree from Pennsylvania University this spring and will do more graduate work in music at Harvard next year. He is attending Transylvania on a teaching scholarship.

The Berkshire Music Center is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and is under the direction of Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra. Aaron Copland is assistant director and Ralph Berkowitz is dean.

FRANCESCATTI BRIGHT STAR AT TANGLEWOOD

Noted Violinist's Performance Heard by Audience of 10,837

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 5—A perfect day, a fine program and a brilliant soloist attracted 10,837 people to the Berkshire Music Festival this afternoon. The parking lots looked as though each person had come in an individual car and long before the concert the areas were full.

Kreisler in Audience

Zino Francescatti was the bright star of the program. The eminent violinist provided a performance of Tschaikowsky's violin concerto that elicited a standing ovation. In this performance he was admirably assisted by the Boston Symphony players under the knowing direction of Charles Munch.

Francescatti's large, warm tone, his dazzling technique and his feeling for phrase, all mounted up to an elegant and exciting performance. Rarely have we seen an audience so moved.

In the audience was the great Fritz Kreisler, whose presence was almost as much of an attraction as Francescatti.

The program opened with a

Continued On Page 6

BALTIMORE MD.
JEWISH TIMES
AUG 24 1956

Malcolm Bernstein, Soloist With Petach Tikvah Choir

Mr. Malcolm Bernstein, who during the past three years has completed his operatic training at the Peabody, will be chief soloist with the Petach Tikvah Choir during the High Holidays. He recently served engagements with the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, under Boris Goldonsky, for which he had been selected on an R.C.A. Victor Scholarship basis; with the Boston Symphony Orchestra as soloist under Charles Munch. He has also sung leading roles with the Baltimore Civic Opera, and appears frequently in radio and television programs. The Petach Tikvah Choir is under the direction of Cantor Hillel Lipsicas.

Cantor Lipsicas and his Choir will conduct services on Slichos evening, September 1, as well as throughout the High Holiday season. The Slichos services will begin with a social gathering at midnight, at which Rabbi Benjamin G. Aexlman will explain briefly the meaning of the services.

[illegible] than to what it had to say.

Mr. Copland was on hand to share the applause with the performers.

Reflects Joy of Living

The final work was Schumann's exquisite "Symphony in C Major." Written in 1844 when the composer had emerged from a nervous breakdown, one can feel in this music his gradual convalescence. Mr. Munch directed a gracious, almost intimate, reading of the work. The delightful scherzo movement went at a breath-taking pace. The adagio was a marvel of expressivity, rich in color and suave in outline. The finale was a true affirmation of renewed health and joy of living.

Tomorrow night, the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will offer the first stage performance of the opera "Griffelkin" by Lucas Foss.

[illegible]

[28]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Union Leader (m) & (e)
MANCHESTER, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 45,622
AUG 4 1956

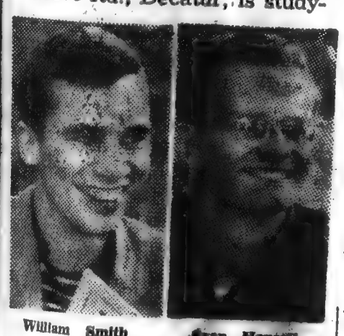
MUSIC STUDENTS—Residents of New England who are studying at Lenox, Mass. at the Music Center this summer. Left to right: Eunice De Sanchez of Portland, Me., an associate in the opera department; Joan Lewitt of Nashua, a member of the Festival Chorus; Walter Tokarczyk of Woonsocket, R. I. dent orchestra; Madeline Palmer of 78 Ballaire street, a dra department; June Stone, Burlington, Vt., a member of th summer school of music is conducted by the Boston Symph tion with its annual concerts.

ATLANTA, GA.
Journal & Constitution
Circ. S. 480,949
AUG 5 1956

Berkshire Center Draws 2 From Here

Two Atlanta area residents are attending the summer school of music at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

William Smith of 2670 Oak Grove Rd., Decatur, is studying composition with American composer Lukas Foss.



William Smith

Sven Hansell

Sven Hansell of 1877 Ardmore Rd., NE, is an assistant conductor and choir leader at the center. The young Atlantian received a master's degree from Pennsylvania University this spring and will do more graduate work in music at Harvard next year. He is attending Transylvania on a teaching scholarship.

The Berkshire Music Center is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and is under the direction of Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra. Aaron Copland is assistant director and Ralph Berkowitz is dean.

FRANCESCATTI BRIGHT STAR AT TANGLEWOOD

Noted Violinist's Performance Heard by Audience of 10,837

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Lenox, Aug. 5—A perfect day, a fine program and a brilliant soloist attracted 10,837 people to the Berkshire Music Festival this afternoon. The parking lots looked as though each person had come in an individual car and long before the concert the areas were full.

Kreisler in Audience

Zino Francescatti was the bright star of the program. The eminent violinist provided a performance of Tschaikowsky's violin concerto that elicited a standing ovation. In this performance he was admirably assisted by the Boston Symphony players under the knowing direction of Charles Munch.

Francescatti's large, warm tone, his dazzling technique and his feeling for phrase, all mounted up to an elegant and exciting performance. Rarely have we seen an audience so moved.

In the audience was the great Fritz Kreisler, whose presence was almost as much of an attraction as Francescatti.

The program opened with a

Continued On Page 6

Francescatti

Continued From Page 1

revised "Symphonic Ode" by Aaron Copland. It was revised for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. What it sounded like before revision, we do not know, but we do know that the sounds that assailed one's ears during the performance ranged from sheer noise to electrifying jumbled rhythms during which every member of the orchestra played as loudly as possible. There was no doubt that its audience impact was tremendous but it was due more to titanic tonal eruptions than to what it had to say.

Mr. Copland was on hand to share the applause with the performers.

Reflects Joy of Living

The final work was Schumann's exquisite "Symphony in C Major." Written in 1844 when the composer had emerged from a nervous breakdown, one can feel in this music his gradual convalescence. Mr. Munch directed a gracious, almost intimate, reading of the work. The delightful scherzo movement went at a breath-taking pace. The adagio was a marvel of expressivity, rich in color and suave in outline. The finale was a true affirmation of renewed health and joy of living.

Tomorrow night, the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will offer the first stage performance of the opera "Griffelkin" by Lucas Foss.

Auxiliary.

...tal children was given by the ... party for 20 Spring Grove Hospi... musical show August 21, and a... served refreshments and given a... Perry Point VA Hospital were... Chapel each week. Patients at... held at Fort George C. Meade... ans. Once Shabbat services are... Auxiliary 586, Jewish War Veter... S. and Raymond Caplan Post and... cheered by efforts of the Gerald... around Maryland are regularly... Hospitalized veterans in and

Caplan JWV Post & Auxiliary

...will take place October 24 at the... Blue Crest. Miss Lorraine Glick,... fashion commentator and co-or... ordinator, Mrs. Herman Rosen,... chairman, Mrs. William Dietz, co... chairman and Mrs. Albert Gross,... co-ordinator, will select models... and plan the show.

Mrs. Sheldon Buckner, president, has named Mrs. Emanuel Stine publicity chairman and Mrs. William Dietz liaison director.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,372
AUG 5 1956

Second Thoughts on Music

Portions of Five Operas Performed at Tanglewood

Single Acts From 'La Rondine,' 'The Trojans,' 'Aida,' 'Don Carlo' and 'Falstaff' Heard to Advantage; Full Orchestra at Peak

By WILLIARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 4—The quality of performance at the Berkshire Music Festival continues high. One of the strongest departments in the school is the opera department, presided over by Boris Goldovsky. This past week they offered acts from five 19th-century operas including "La Rondine" by Puccini; "The Trojans" by Berlioz and "Aida," "Don Carlo" and "Falstaff" by Verdi. One heard some excellent voices and saw staging, costumes and scenery that were both ingenious and handsome.

Quite the finest offering was the second act of "Don Carlo." John Parella, baritone, handled the difficult aria of King Phillip in a thoroughly artistic manner and the "Inquisitor" of John McCurdy provided some of the finest singing of the entire evening. Another splendid singer was Shirley Carter, who sang "O Don Fatale" in an exciting manner.

Singing Excels

Mr. Goldovsky is particularly fond of "The Trojans." In fact, he offered the American premiere of this opera. In the fourth act, sung in English he offered such fine singers as Marjorie McClung, soprano, and Robert Nagy, one the best tenors we have heard here.

The concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra have been consistenly fine and worthy of larger audiences, but weather has not been kind. Charles Munch directed the orchestra in a program which included the second "Leonore" overture and Petrassi's "Fifth Concerto for Orchestra" in the first half and concluded with the Symphony No. 4 in F minor by Tchiakowsky. The Petrassi opus was one of the works commissioned by the orchestra for its 75th anniversary. Mr. Petrassi is visiting composer at the Center this summer.

To this listener, the work was not an unqualified success. It has many fine moments but there is a lack of direction and focus. It just doesn't get any place. Had we not heard Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" the week before, it is possible Mr. Petrassi's work might have attracted more interest. Mr. Munch has a way with Tchaikowsky, a very personal way. His interpretations remain intimate while not lacking in vigor.

Memorial Elegy

The following night, Mr. Munch offered as his opening work an "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky" by Howard Hanson. Lacking any great imagination, this is a sincere work with moments of grandeur. This was another of the commissioned works for the 75th anniversary. Mr. Hanson has been a significant figure among American composers for a long time and, through the Eastman School, has done more than his bit for the American composer.

It was Rudolf Serkin, pianist, who was the bright star of this concert. He drew more than 9000 people to Tanglewood, the largest audience thus far. His playing of Schumann Concerto in A minor was a truly magnificent achievement. It was far more a dramatic reading than we have heard before. It was continually exciting and gave the huge audience just about everything it wanted. Honegger's fifth symphony, a particular favorite with Mr. Munch, and Debussy's "La Mer," a work in which Munch is a supreme interpreter, made up the program.

Burgin Conducts

Sunday afternoon drew some 7000 people in spite of good weather. Some strange sort of planning resulted in concertmaster Richard Burgin conducting the orchestra in a program of Prokofieff, Hindemith and Mahler. The soloist was violinist Ruth Posselt. (Mrs. Burgin.) Sunday afternoon is a time when Tanglewood should get its largest crowd and it should see to it that such a crowd gets the best Tanglewood has to offer. Mr. Burgin has had a long and distingusihed career, but his drawing power as a conductor is not great. Neither do we feel that Mahler's first symphony or Hindemith's violin concerto are works to attract a Sunday afternoon audience, fine as both are.

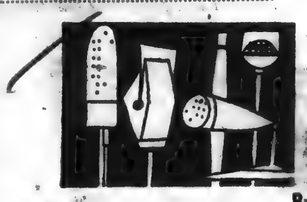
The orchestra played its best for Mr. Burgin and Miss Posselt gave a superb performance of the Hindemith violin concerto. Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" ballet suite is a glowing, brillian work and it was played with an exciting concept. No fault can be found with this program or its performance; it just isn't the sort of program that will bring a large audience to Tanglewood on a Sunday afternoon.

"Tanglewood On Parade"

Don't forget "Tanglewood On Parade" on Thursday. There is no better opportunity to see the Berkshire concerts, chamber music and choral singing. In the evening the Boston Symphony orchestra with Festival chorus will be heard in the "Russian Easter" overture by Rimsky-Korsakoff and "Choros No. 10" by Villa-Lobos. The Brazilian conductor De Carvalho will conduct this portion of the program.

The second portion will be devoted to a real Boston "Pops" program including Gershwin's "Piano Concerto in F" played by Jesus Maria Sanroma. Ravel's "Bolero" and "La Boutique" as arranged by Resphigi, will also be heard. There will be encores. All this should make for a pleasant afternoon and evening at Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music Center will benefit.

New England Newspaper Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 61,159
AUG 5 1956



TURNING the DIALS

By FRED H. RUSSELL

Robert Bailey was a sideshow barker, theater usher, plumber's helper, waiter, continuity writer, vacuum cleaner salesman, [illegible] show lecturer, guide, policeman, drummer, g[illegible] attendant, motion picture writer and a profess[illegible]minton player before he took over the starring role of CBS radio's adventure series, "Yours Truly, Johnny Dollar." He didn't make much money—but he had a lot of fun. His acting career began when he was four and he was able to do a walk-on child's role with his parents in their stock company. At 15, when his family had settled more or less permanently in Chicago, Bailey began his venture into the associated arts.

His sideshow barking began when the proprietor of a Wild West carnival hired him to lure the customers off a carnival midway into the Wild West tent. When sufficient tickets had been sold, he ran around to the back entrance and came in to double as an Indian.

Bob next went through a course of ushering and junior theater management offered to youngsters of clean habits by the Publix Theaters Corp. After successfully completing the course, he took a job as a waiter-guide on the grounds of the Chicago World's Fair.

Bob's mother, meantime, had quit her stage work for a fairly successful career on the radio over local Chicago stations and introduced Bob to several of the directors at the station.

Radio, it turned out, was young Bailey's forte. He became modestly successfully virtually overnight and was soon playing two and three different roles on the same program.

After seven years of Chicago air work, Bob went to Hollywood and was signed to a long-term contract as a motion picture actor by 20th Century-Fox film company. In 1953, the many-talented Mr. Bailey was signed to do the screenplay of the RKO Radio film "Underwater," was so well received that he stayed on to write three more films.

When asked which of his occupations he liked the best, Bob replied: "I like them all. The most important ingredients in doing anything well are interest and aptitude. I've been very fortunate because I am interested in just about everything."

Program Extended

The Italian program conducted Sunday afternoons over WADS, Ansonia, zy Nino Bellassai, has been meeting with such success it has been extended a half-hour. Starting today the program will be heard from 1 to 3:30 p.m.

Little Night Music

Noises and sounds of the night, as well as its dreamy qualities, will feature Ruth Steinkraus' "Music for a Sunday Evening" tonight over WICC radio. Miss Steinkraus says the title is a pun on a Mozart serenade called "Eine Kleine Nacht Muski" or in English, "Small Night Music."

In addition to the Mozart, the numbers will include "Serenade for Tenor and French Horn," by Benjamin Britten; "Italian Serenade" for string quartet by Hugo Wolfe; "Nocturnes" for orchestra, by Debussy; and a group of nocturnes by Chopin, the first composer to write this type of music, played by Josef Hoffman, Rachmaninoff, Lipati and Horowitz, pianists.

The program will also highlight a group of songs, and a recording of Aaron Copland's "Prairie Night."

Figures of Past

Actual voices of famous figures at past presidential conventions will be a dramatic highlight of a CBS radio special broadcast "Convention Fever," Thursday, from 10:05 to 11 p.m.

Excerpts from speeches delivered by such distinguished campaigners as William Jennings Bryan, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, William Howard Taft, Wendell L. Wilkie and Woodrow Wilson will be heard again in the atmosphere of drama, humor, tension and pageantry of the Presidential convention.

Clare Boothe Luce, currently United States ambassador to Italy, will be heard as she addressed the Republican convention in 1948, and India Edwards, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee in 1952, will be heard as she gave her party's delegation a lecture on manners.

Robert Trout, "anchor man" for CBS radio's broadcast of the 1956 conventions, will be narrator.

Helsinki Festival

The sound of the kantele, multi-stringed native instrument of Finland, will open CBS radio's "World Music Festivals," broadcasting the first of two programs from the 1956 Sibelius Festival at Helsinki, Finland, this afternoon at 2:06 o'clock. Sibelius himself, now in his 91st year, listens to these performances on his radio at his villa in nearby Jarvenpaa.

The program will open with a performance of the rarely played "Symphony No. 6 in D Minor" by Jean Sibelius, with Nils-Eric Fougstad conducting the Sibelius Festival orchestra.

A group of Sibelius songs for voice and orchestra will be sung by the visiting French baritone Gerard Souzay. With the Festival orchestra, Mr. Souzay will sing "The Diamond," "The Blue Anemine" and "Hymn to Thais, the Unforgettable."

The program will close with the first American broadcast of the "Symphony No. 3" by the Finnish composer Leevi Madetoja, who died nine years ago. The work will be conducted by the Finnish musical director Marrtti Similar, leading the Helsinki City Symphony orchestra.

Party for Crane

WICC staffers are busy plotting a farewell party for Bob Crane, who leaves the station Aug. 12 for KNX, Hollywood, Key CBS outlet. The party is set for Wednesday at the University club, with Cameron Mackenzie in charge of arrangements.

Eileen Farrell Sings

Guest soloist Eileen Farrell, the soprano from Willimantic, will sing "Vissi d'arte" from Puccini's "Tosca" as her principal selection on the "Telephone Hour" tomorrow night at 9 o'clock over NBC radio. Accompanied by Donald Voorhees and the orchestra she will sing two songs by Ernest Charles—"When I Have Sung My Songs" and "The House on a Hill"—and Duparc's "Chidyle." The orchestra will present the first radio performance of "Romance and Hora" by Leon Lewis during their part of the program. Jerome Kern's "Why Was I Born?" and "Nocturne" from Delibes' ballet "Coppelia" will complete the broadcast.

Boston Symphony

Two selections by contemporary composers will be performed by the Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, on the Berkshire Festival broadcast Monday night at 8:15 o'clock over WRCA. The compositions are Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Bohuslav's "Fantaisies Symphoniques." The latter was commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary last season.

The Farm Vote

Six newsmen from various farming areas of the country will report on "Who Will Get the Farm Vote," on the "Campaign Listening Post" series of pre-convention broadcasts focusing on the political problems that will affect the Presidential conventions tonight at 7:35 o'clock over ABC radio.

Each will report on the likely trend of the farmers' ballots and will come from such areas as Louisiana, Missouri, New York, Nebraska, California and Illinois.

Springfield Sun. Republican
Sun. Aug. 5

10A

VISITS in OUR VALLEY

By BRIAN F. KING

Our boss, Walter R. Graham, managing editor of The Republican, gave us something to think about during the course of a casual conversation held in his office of a recent morning.

We were discussing the current concert programs at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, when Mr. Graham suddenly asked, "Did you know there are people who don't realize there's a covered concert shed at Tanglewood?"

The question took us somewhat by surprise and we were groping for a reply when Mr. Graham came to our rescue. "Let me explain," he said. "To begin with, for years now, many newspapers and magazines have been featuring pictures of the crowds listening to concerts on the Tanglewood lawns. They're been good pictures with lots of reader interest, but there have been so many of them that quite a few people who've never been to Tanglewood think that concert-goers listen to programs out on the lawns under the open sky. You'd be surprised at how many people there are who don't realize Tanglewood has a covered music shed with seating accommodations for 6000 listeners."

* * *

The more we thought about it, the more we realized that Mr. Graham had a sound reason for his observation. But, just to satisfy our own curiosity, we did a little investigating on our own.

Our first opportunity to bring up the subject came when we attended an outdoor barbecue at the home of Holyoke friends a few nights later. There were eight people in the dinner party, five of whom had never been to a Tanglewood concert. Querying members of the latter group, we discovered that two of them were aware there was a protected music shed at Tanglewood. But, just as Mr. Graham had predicted, the other three were of the opinion that people sat on the lawns to enjoy the Festival concerts.

"We had thought about going up to Lenox one night last week," one of the group told us. "But we cancelled our plans because it looked like it might rain and we didn't want to get soaked sitting out in the open."

All three members of the group seemed surprised when we pointed out that Tanglewood has fine seating accommodations in the roofed music shed. "Well, I never knew Tanglewood had a covered shed," one of them commented. Then she went on to support Mr. Graham's observation with the remark that in nearly all of the pictures taken at Tanglewood that she had seen, the ones she remembered most vividly showed people listening to concerts under the open sky.

"So, naturally, I thought the orchestra was protected by a music shell, but that listeners sat on the lawns. Which would be delightful in good weather but pretty precarious if the skies appeared stormy."

Taking all things into consideration, we feel this is a good time to point out that one needn't worry about idiosyncrasies of the weather at a Tanglewood concert. For, as we've already pointed out, excellent seating accommodations—enough for 6000 people—are available in the comfortable, roofed music shed. Many people do prefer to listen to the music of the Boston Symphony on the lawns—we among them—weather permitting, of course. And it's a wonderful experience when the skies are clear overheard.

If there are readers who hesitate about traveling to Lenox because skies are threatening, they needn't feel that way, for protected seats are obtainable at all Festival programs. It's a good thing to keep in mind during the waning current season and for the seasons ahead. We hope our explanation will encourage people who have never been to Tanglewood to eliminate any doubt from their mind about ordering concert tickets in advance. For, if they specify shed seats, they need have no fear of being inconvenienced by stormy weather.

* * *

DE CARVALHO CONCERT SET ON THURSDAY

Springfield Union Aug 6

Scheduled as First Half of 'Tanglewood On Parade' Program

Lenox, Aug. 5—Eleazar de Carvalho, the artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Thursday evening in the first half of the gala concert which will conclude this season's "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Mr. de Carvalho will conduct Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, the Choros No. 10 by Villa-Lobos.

Mr. de Carvalho has returned to Tanglewood this summer, after a five-year absence, as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center. Since his last guest-conducting appearance at the Berkshire Festival in 1951, he has conducted primarily in his own country and in Europe, especially in Paris, Brussels, London and Berlin. At the end of the current season at the Berkshire Festival, Mr. de Carvalho will return to Brazil for three weeks with his orchestra. In September, with Herbert von Karajan and Karl Bohm, he will conduct the Berlin Philharmonic during the Festival of Berlin.

This season Mr. de Carvalho also conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire Festival concert Friday and portions of the concerts by the student symphony orchestra of Department I on Thursday evenings.

On the second half of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive "Tanglewood on Parade" appearance, playing a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque" arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini, Ravel's "Bolero" and the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist.

During the afternoon simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments — student symphony, chorus, original compositions, opera and the amateur division, or Tanglewood Study Group.

GENTLE BEAVERS

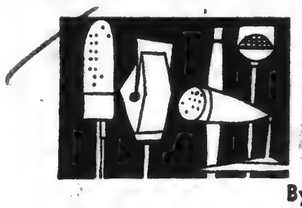
Beavers usually are gentle toward human beings. Even if handled, they are likely to use flailing tails rather than their chisel-like teeth in self-defense.

[281]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 61,159

AUG 5 1956



TURNING the DIALS

By FRED H. RUSSELL

Robert Bailey was a sideshow barker, theater usher, plumber's helper, waiter, continuity writer, vacuum cleaner salesman, medicine show lecturer, guide, policeman, drummer, gas station attendant, motion picture writer and a professional badminton player before he took over the starring role of CBS radio's adventure series, "Yours Truly, Johnny Dollar." He didn't make much money—but he had a lot of fun. His acting career began when he was four and he was able to do a walk-on child's role with his parents in their stock company. At 15, when his family had settled more or less permanently in Chicago, Bailey began his venture into the associated arts.

His sideshow barking began when the proprietor of a Wild West carnival hired him to lure the customers off a carnival midway into the Wild West tent. When sufficient tickets had been sold, he ran around to the back entrance and came in to double as an Indian.

Bob next went through a course of ushering and junior theater management offered to youngsters of clean habits by the Publix Theaters Corp. After successfully completing the course, he took a job as a waiter-guide on the grounds of the Chicago World's fair.

Bob's mother, meantime, had quit her stage work for a fairly successful career on the radio over local Chicago stations and introduced Bob to several of the directors at the station.

Radio, it turned out, was young Bailey's forte. He became modestly successfully virtually overnight and was soon playing two and three different roles on the same program.

After seven years of Chicago air work, Bob went to Hollywood and was signed to a long-term contract as a motion picture actor by 20th Century-Fox film company. In 1953, the many-talented Mr. Bailey was signed to do the screenplay of the RKO Radio film "Underwater," was so well received that he stayed on to write three more films.

When asked which of his occupations he liked the best, Bob replied: "I like them all. The most important ingredients in doing anything well are interest and aptitude. I've been very fortunate because I am interested in just about everything."

Program Extended

The Italian program conducted Sunday afternoons over WADS, Ansonia, zy Nino Bellassai, has been meeting with such success it has been extended a half-hour. Starting today the program will be heard from 1 to 3:30 p.m.

Little Night Music

Noises and sounds of the night, as well as its dreamy qualities, will feature Ruth Steinkraus' "Music for a Sunday Evening" tonight over WICC radio. Miss Steinkraus says the title is a pun on a Mozart serenade called "Eine Kleine Nacht Muski" or in English, "Small Night Music."

In addition to the Mozart, the numbers will include "Serenade for Tenor and French Horn," by Benjamin Britten; "Italian Serenade" for string quartet by Hugo Wolfe; "Nocturnes" for orchestra, by Debussy; and a group of nocturnes by Chopin, the first composer to write this type of music, played by Josef Hoffman, Rachmaninoff, Lipati and Horowitz, pianists.

The program will also highlight a group of songs, and a recording of Aaron Copland's "Prairie Night."

Figures of Past

Actual voices of famous figures at past presidential conventions will be a dramatic highlight of a CBS radio special broadcast "Convention Fever," Thursday, from 10:05 to 11 p.m.

Excerpts from speeches delivered by such distinguished campaigners as William Jennings Bryan, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, William Howard Taft, Wendell L. Wilkie and Woodrow Wilson will be heard again in the atmosphere of drama, humor, tension and pageantry of the Presidential convention.

Clare Boothe Luce, currently United States ambassador to Italy, will be heard as she addressed the Republican convention in 1948, and India Edwards, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee in 1952, will be heard as she gave her party's delegation a lecture on manners.

Robert Trout, "anchor man" for CBS radio's broadcast of the 1956 conventions, will be narrator.

Helsinki Festival

The sound of the kantele, multi-stringed native instrument of Finland, will open CBS radio's "World Music Festivals," broadcasting the first of two programs from the 1956 Sibelius Festival at Helsinki, Finland, this afternoon at 2:05 o'clock. Sibelius himself, now in his 91st year, listens to these performances on his radio at his villa in nearby Jarvenpaa.

The program will open with a performance of the rarely played "Symphony No. 6 in D Minor" by Jean Sibelius, with Nils-Eric Fougstad conducting the Sibelius Festival orchestra.

A group of Sibelius songs for voice and orchestra will be sung by the visiting French baritone Gerard Souzay. With the Festival orchestra, Mr. Souzay will sing "The Diamond," "The Blue Anemine" and "Hymn to Thais, the Unforgettable."

The program will close with the first American broadcast of the "Symphony No. 3" by the Finnish composer Leevi Madetoja, who died nine years ago. The work will be conducted by the Finnish musical director Marrtti Similar, leading the Helsinki City Symphony orchestra.

Party for Crane

WICC staffers are busy plotting a farewell party for Bob Crane, who leaves the station Aug. 12 for KNX, Hollywood, Key CBS outlet. The party is set for Wednesday at the University club, with Cameron Mackenzie in charge of arrangements.

Eileen Farrell Sings

Guest soloist Eileen Farrell, the soprano from Willimantic, will sing "Vissi d'arte" from Puccini's "Tosca" as her principal selection on the "Telephone Hour" tomorrow night at 9 o'clock over NBC radio. Accompanied by Donald Voorhees and the orchestra she will sing two songs by Ernest Charles—"When I Have Sung My Songs" and "The House on a Hill"—and Duparc's "Chidyle." The orchestra will present the first radio performance of "Romance and Hora" by Leon Lewis during their part of the program. Jerome Kern's "Why Was I Born?" and "Nocturne" from Delibes' ballet "Coppelia" will complete the broadcast.

Boston Symphony

Two selections by contemporary composers will be performed by the Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, on the Berkshire Festival broadcast Monday night at 8:15 o'clock over WRCA. The compositions are Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Bohuslav's "Fantaisies Symphoniques." The latter was commissioned for the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary last season.

The Farm Vote

Six newsmen from various farming areas of the country will report on "Who Will Get the Farm Vote," on the "Campaign Listening Post" series of pre-convention broadcasts focusing on the political problems that will affect the Presidential conventions tonight at 7:35 o'clock over ABC radio.

Each will report on the likely trend of the farmers' ballots and will come from such areas as Louisiana, Missouri, New York, Nebraska, California and Illinois.

DE CARVALHO CONCERT SET ON THURSDAY

Scheduled as First Half of 'Tanglewood On Parade' Program

Lenox, Aug. 5—Eleazar de Carvalho, the artistic director and permanent conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Thursday evening in the first half of the gala concert which will conclude this season's "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Mr. de Carvalho will conduct Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" and, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students trained by Hugh Ross, the Choros No. 10 by Villa-Lobos.

Mr. de Carvalho has returned to Tanglewood this summer, after a five-year absence, as acting head of the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center. Since his last guest-conducting appearance at the Berkshire Festival in 1951, he has conducted primarily in his own country and in Europe, especially in Paris, Brussels, London and Berlin. At the end of the current season at the Berkshire Festival, Mr. de Carvalho will return to Brazil for three weeks with his orchestra. In September, with Herbert von Karajan and Karl Bohm, he will conduct the Berlin Philharmonic during the Festival of Berlin.

This season Mr. de Carvalho also conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire Festival concert Friday and portions of the concerts by the student symphony orchestra of Department I on Thursday evenings.

On the second half of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will make their third consecutive "Tanglewood on Parade" appearance, playing a suite from the ballet "La Boutique Fantasque" arranged by Respighi from music by Rossini, Ravel's "Bolero" and the Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin with Jesus Maria Sanroma as soloist.

During the afternoon simultaneous demonstrations will be given of the work of all five departments — student symphony, chorus, original compositions, opera and the amateur division, or Tanglewood Study Group.

GENTLE BEAVERS

Beavers usually are gentle toward human beings. Even if handled, they are likely to use flailing tails rather than their chisel-like teeth in self-defense.

Springfield Sun. Republican
Sun. Aug. 5

10A

Our boss, Walter R. Graham, managing editor of The Republican, gave us something to think about during the course of a casual conversation, held in his office of a recent morning.

We were discussing the current concert programs at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, when Mr. Graham suddenly asked, "Did you know there are people who don't realize there's a covered concert shed at Tanglewood?"

The question took us somewhat by surprise and we were groping for a reply when Mr. Graham came to our rescue. "Let me explain," he said. "To begin with, for years now, many newspapers and magazines have been featuring pictures of the crowds listening to concerts on the Tanglewood lawns. They're been good pictures with lots of reader interest, but there have been so many of them that quite a few people who've never been to Tanglewood think that concert-goers listen to programs out on the lawns under the open sky. You'd be surprised at how many people there are who don't realize Tanglewood has a covered music shed with seating accommodations for 6000 listeners."

* * *

The more we thought about it, the more we realized that Mr. Graham had a sound reason for his observation. But, just to satisfy our own curiosity, we did a little investigating on our own.

Our first opportunity to bring up the subject came when we attended an outdoor barbecue at the home of Holyoke friends a few nights later. There were eight people in the dinner party, five of whom had never been to a Tanglewood concert. Querying members of the latter group, we discovered that two of them were aware there was a protected music shed at Tanglewood. But, just as Mr. Graham had predicted, the other three were of the opinion that people sat on the lawns to enjoy the Festival concerts.

"We had thought about going up to Lenox one night last week," one of the group told us. "But we cancelled our plans because it looked like it might rain and we didn't want to get soaked sitting out in the open."

All three members of the group seemed surprised when we pointed out that Tanglewood has fine seating accommodations in the roofed music shed. "Well, I never knew Tanglewood had a covered shed," one of them commented. Then she went on to support Mr. Graham's observation with the remark that in nearly all of the pictures taken at Tanglewood that she had seen, the ones she remembered most vividly showed people listening to concerts under the open sky.

"So, naturally, I thought the orchestra was protected by a music shell, but that listeners sat on the lawns. Which would be delightful in good weather but pretty precarious if the skies appeared stormy."

Taking all things into consideration, we feel this is a good time to point out that one needn't worry about idiosyncrasies of the weather at a Tanglewood concert. For, as we've already pointed out, excellent seating accommodations—enough for 6000 people—are available in the comfortable, roofed music shed. Many people do prefer to listen to the music of the Boston Symphony on the lawns—we among them—weather permitting, of course. And it's a wonderful experience when the skies are clear overheard.

If there are readers who hesitate about traveling to Lenox because skies are threatening, they needn't feel that way, for protected seats are obtainable at all Festival programs. It's a good thing to keep in mind during the waning current season and for the seasons ahead. We hope our explanation will encourage people who have never been to Tanglewood to eliminate any doubt from their mind about ordering concert tickets in advance. For, if they specify shed seats, they need have no fear of being inconvenienced by stormy weather.

* * *

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 6 1956

GUEST SOLOIST at the Tanglewood on Parade program at the Music Shed Thursday night will be Jesus Maria Sanroma, who will appear with the Boston Pops Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fiedler in a performance of Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F. Mr. Sanroma is making his first Tanglewood appearance since 1942. Proceeds of Thursday's event will go to the Berkshire Music Center.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 8 1956

More Boxholders Are Listed for Tanglewood Benefit

Additional boxholders for Tanglewood on Parade tomorrow have been announced by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, chairman of the box committee.

They are Mr. and Mrs. Alvin G. Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Alan J. Blau, Mr. and Mrs. Simon England and Donald B. Miller of Pittsfield; Col. and Mrs. H. George Wilde and Mrs. Charles Bassett, Lenox; Miss Mabel Choate, Miss Marion Kemp and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Percival, Stockbridge; Howard Bessette, Sheffield; Mr. and Mrs. Zino Francescatti, Monterey.

Also, George Sokolsky, Otis; Mrs. Scoville Firuski, Lakeville, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. George E. Judd, Cannonsville, N.Y.; Mrs. Sidney Howard, Tyringham; Mrs. John Talbot, Mr. and Mrs. Julian K. Sprague and Mrs. Robert C. Sprague, Williamstown; Dr. and Mrs. William J. Mulligan, Brookline; and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Little Boar's Head, N.H.

Tickets Available

Box seat tickets, which may be purchased individually, still are available.

Grounds will open at 4 in the afternoon. Holders of box and reserved seats are invited to an opera by students of the Berkshire Music Center. At 5:45, simultaneous sessions of each of the center's departments will be in operation at various points on the grounds. The main concert will be at 8:15 in the Shed, when both the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston Pops Orchestra will play.

Tanglewood on Parade is a benefit for the center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 14th year.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 8 1956

Francescatti, Pianist Balsam On Chamber Program Tonight

TANGLEWOOD—The final concert of the Wednesday evening chamber music series in the 1956 Berkshire Festival will be played tonight by violinist Zino Francescatti and pianist Artur Balsam in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Mr. Francescatti, who is making the second of two appearances at this summer's Festival, is donating his services for the benefit of the Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center. The program of sonatas for violin and piano will include the Sonata No. 1 by Faure and the Sonatas by Ravel and Franck.

Mr. Francescatti, who lives in nearby Monterey, first came to the United States in 1939 after great successes in Europe and South America. Ever since, he has been one of the most popular figures on the American concert stage, appearing annually in recital and with orchestra in most of our principal cities. He plays the famous "Hart" Stradivarius, dated 1727, which is one of the finest examples of the great violinmaker's art.

Tomorrow is Tanglewood on Parade, the gala benefit for the Berkshire Music Center. Festivities commence with a performance—for boxholders and purchasers of reserved seats—of scenes from 20th century operas in the formal gardens at 4 p.m. Starting at 6 p.m. there will be simultaneous demonstrations by the student symphony orchestra, chorus, composition, and opera departments of the music school. The evening concert features Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On the second half of the program Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops Orchestra. The Piano Concerto in F by George Gershwin will be played by Jesus Maria Sanroma.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844

AUG 8 1956

Music

2 Tanglewood Concerts Draw 22,000

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

TWENTY-TWO THOUSAND people heard two exhilarating concerts at Tanglewood over the weekend. Slightly over eleven thousand heard Leonard Bernstein conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival chorus in a program of Mozart and Prokofieff Saturday night and just a few less than that number heard Charles Munch yesterday afternoon in a program of Copland, Tchaikovsky and Schumann.

Both concerts devoted a part of their programs to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky: Bernstein played a part of the Mozart C minor Mass, (K427) and the fifth Prokofieff symphony which the late Boston conductor had introduced to this country; Munch opened his program with the Ode that Copland wrote in 1929 for the Boston orchestra's 50th anniversary and then revised last year for the occasion of the orchestra's 75th anniversary.

* * *

COPLAND was called to the stage by Munch to acknowledge the applause the huge audience accorded his Ode but it appeared to us in some degree a succes d'estime. It is heavily orchestrated and reaches levels of proud triumph toward the end. The destination however, was not always clear and it was long arriving there. After a sustained episode of full power, Copland, surely a master of his metier, provides a contrast but asks the strings to apply mutes against a complete reed section playing without restraint. Such devices leave queries in the minds of listeners who have not been dulled by the excessive insistence on one idiom. The rhythmic pattern was extremely complex and Munch led to devote his main attention to his score.

The Tchaikovsky violin concerto with Zino Francescatti as soloist was a tremendous performance. The violinist and the conductor functioned as parts of the same operation.

Aaron Copland

Francescatti's tone was large and full, warm and sensitive, and his command of his instrument so complete that not a single note was slighted or given less than its exact value. His bow always seemed to have great reserves, and his conception was a genuine and thorough one. He seemed to play from inside the fiddle, if that were possible, instead of upon it. The terrifying difficulties were dashed off with clarity, dexterity and fire, and the canzona was melting in its warmth and appeal.

* * *

ONE MIGHT have debated the validity of the extreme speed he took in the finale but that in itself was no obstacle at all. The orchestra under Munch gave him most agile support. The heavy-heeled Russian dance of Tchaikovky in this version became a lighter, less meaningful piece of ballet music.

The final half of the program was devoted to the memory of Robert Schumann, whose death occurred just a century ago. The two central movements of the second symphony are most characteristic. The scherzo has a light vivacity we commonly attribute to Mendelssohn; the adagio is a typical Schumann Lied of deep compassion. The Boston string section was brilliant and poetically lyrical in the respective movements. Munch struck extremely happy tempi in both cases. The first trio showed off the Boston reed choir in all its glory and it was an added pleasure to hear delicacy amidst two programs which were predominantly percussion and brass a tutta force.

* * *

THE CHORUS Saturday night had been trained by Hugh Ross and Lorne Cooke de Varon. They responded to Bernstein's intense and violent demands with great body of tone and often with effective climaxes. The soloists were placed at the back of the stage on the top row of the bleachers and that location proved to be an excellent place from which to be heard. Phyllis Curtin, was in spendid voice and her solo was projected without effort. Mozart gives the soprano an unusual tonal range, descending to registers not commonly called upon. On the other hand, the contralto, Eunice Alberts, later has a solo which is operatic in its florid passages and poaches well into the territory of her soprano colleague. Miss Alberts encompassed her grateful assignment with extraordinary competence. Tenor John McCollum had but one allotment, and that only in concert with his two partners.

Bernstein was not content to let the Kyrie and the Gloria, the sections sung Saturday, remain conventionally sober and devout, an attitude in which Mozart, in this particular instance, gave him much abetment. The result was a fervid and excited Mass, more animated and fiery than normally expected of devotional music, but tonally glowing and pulsating.

* * *

KOUSSEVITZKY introduced the Prokofieff fifth symphony to Tanglewood less than a year after he had given it its first American performance in Boston, and he repeated it twice here thereafter. Bernstein kept demanding greater responses from the men of the orchestra, insisting on more volume, pleading for more intensity, begging for more warmth, appealing for more vibrancy. The methods he used by which he hoped to receive these boons were highly dramatic, emotionally graphic and physically shameless. When the strings had pressed their bows to the wood, and the wind expended their last puff of breath, Bernstein was not satisfied and asked for more. When it was apparent to all but Bernstein that it could not be forthcoming, it became apparent to the audience that he was conducting them and not the orchestra. The validity of this procedure has not been proven. That the audience approved of it is not debatable for they recalled him and gave him and overwhelming ovation.

* * *

PROKFIEFF'S symphony is highly impressive and entertaining music. It was war time, 1944, when Prokofieff was working on it and the Russians were still locked in combat with the Nazis and men were deeply troubled. Prokofieff gave it no program background but the moods of introspection and exaltation can be traced easily to the fury of the military struggle. Bernstein evoked these tempers vividly.

[280

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 198,749

AUG- 9 1956

(Photos by Joe Petrovec)

MUSIC BY THE TON — The Boston Symphony's forthcoming concert tour behind the Iron Curtain involves transporting of eight tons of musical instruments, music, clothing and personal effects. New, specially designed luggage simplifies the big moving job. Left to right are scenes as the Symphony prepares for travel: Cellist Karl Zeise gingerly places his intrument in its traveling case; Leslie Rogers, Symphony librarian since 1912, checks his music trunk; Harvey Genereux wrestles with one of the big tympani and then wrestles the huge case containing a harp, and finally, Arthur Charles Press and Harold Farberman load their instruments into the specially-designed trunk for percussion instruments. Twenty-five special wardrobe trunks for musicians clothes replace the 100 formerly used.

Hub Symphony Never Lost A Chord

By PAUL GANLEY

Some 100 dignified men once hastily changed clothes in broad daylight while grinning policemen shooed spectators away.

It was an unscheduled performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Dressing room space was limited at the theater, so the musicians had to don their evening clothes on the very public back lawn.

The orchestra's heavy luggage served as makeshift dressing room walls.

It wasn't the first time the orchestra's tons of luggage figured in unprogrammed adventures. And it will happen again.

When the orchestra leaves on its European tour this summer the luggage goes along.

Everything from toothbrushes to tubas are loaded in some 80 containers.

The fun begins in Europe.

The eight tons of equipment must be unpacked for every performance. A few hours later it must be repacked and bundled off for shipment for another concert in another city or nation.

The packing and unpacking is relatively easy, according to Stage Manager Harvey Genereux.

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood closes Aug. 12. The luggage will be loaded on the Nieuw Amsterdam here Aug. 14.

"Plenty of time," Genereux says.

It takes only one hour to pack. That includes all the instruments, sheets of music and a few odds and ends.

The odds and ends include two church bells weighing 250 and 150 pounds.

No instrument has ever been lost—permanently—during all the packing and repacking.

Chances are more in favor of the orchestra gaining a few instruments as it voyages across Europe and plays in other orchestra's home halls.

It happened once when a "forgotten" violin was picked up after a concert in Washington.

A frantic exchange of letters followed and the red-faced Boston Symphony shipped it back to Washington and its owner in a hurry.

The biggest danger is that of the more than $200,000 worth of luggage getting separated from the orchestra in transit.

On the orchestra's first European tour in 1952, a baggage truck became snarled in a bicycle race.

The truck ran a rather poor race and a London concert was delayed two hours.

The equipment might be late, but it arrives in good condition.

The baggage is sturdy and well-padded inside to prevent damage to instruments. It is suitable for either air or train travel.

It has to be rugged to stand the rigors of European tour. The old-fashioned construction of some of the concert halls on the continent leads to problems.

Stairs are frequently narrow and winding.

Once in Metz all the trunks had to be carried up two flights of steep stairs—a rough job.

Orchestra men made the job easier when it was time to leave the hall. They merrily slid the trunks down the two flights of stairs in toboggan style.

As a sidelight on international travel, the orchestra recently learned it will have to move by train in Russia on this tour.

They had originally hoped to fly to Leningrad and Moscow. Plans were changed when it developed baggage equipment at Red airports would have difficulty handling the heavy luggage.

The large amount of luggage has always posed a problem for the orchestra.

In trips to nearby New York a few years ago the orchestra had to lug some 100 personal trunks and many other pieces of baggage.

Now, for the European jaunt, the pieces of orchestral luggage total about 80, not counting some personal bags.

This saves money. Truckers charge by the number of pieces carried rather than by weight.

Maintenance Supt. Edward E. Charron at Symphony Hall is the man credited with the improvement.

He designed a new wardrobe trunk capable of holding the clothes of four musicians. There are 25 of these trunks, which take the place of the 100 individual trunks formerly used by musicians.

These trunks proved their value on the orchestra's first European tour and since have been copied by the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra.

The instruments also are packed in trunks. If a trunk gets lost the orchestra still will be able to play.

Each trunk carries an assortment of instruments — enough to preserve the balance of the orchestra.

Thus, violins and violas are mixed together in each of the three string trunks.

The brass wardrobe trunks each carry two French horns, two trombones, a tuba and a number of trumpets.

Some of the trunks and instrument cases also hold clothing.

The cello cases are especially handy. The cello goes in one side while the other side is a complete wardrobe trunk. It can hold four suits, plenty of shirts and other clothing. It even has compartments at the bottom.

Clothes also can be hung in the harp case.

The giant bass case is large enough for a man to hide in.

Orchestra men won't have to worry about one of their biggest traveling problems on this tour. The 75 music stands, weighting 1,000 pounds, can be left in Boston.

European agents have assured the orchestra that sufficient music stands will be available at all halls on this trip.

However, the conductor's stand will definitely be taken on the tour.

It's vital because conductors become used to a stand of a certain height, width and size.

An energetic conductor, his mind concentrated on the music, could be thrown off pace by having to balance on a strange stand.

The orchestra on this trip will be the first in the world to crack the Iron Curtain and play inside Russia.

They're hoping no disillusioned Muscovite tries to stow away in that man-sized bass case. It could happen!

'Tanglewood On Parade' Today

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held today at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The principal event is a concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston 'Pops' Orchestras at 8:15 p. m. in the Music Shed with Eleazar de Carvallo and Arthur Fiedler conducting. Jesus Maria Sanroma will be soloist in George Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F.

The Parade begins with a fanfare and a welcoming address at 5:45 p. m., followed by three simultaneous programs by departments of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 p. m. A chorus will sing at 7 p. m., during an interval set aside for picnic suppers on the lawn, and dancing will follow the evening concert. There will also be an outdoor performance of opera for holders of box and reserved seats for the main concert, and a program by the Tanglewood Study Group, both at 4 p. m.

'ANNUAL SHEBANG' IS HELD IN LENOX

Times Aug 10

10,000 Attend Tanglewood on Parade and Aid Fund to Tune of $24,000

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9—Many words have been written about Tanglewood on Parade, but the most concise and well-written bit of prose about the event that has come to this writer's attention appears on the bulletin board of the Berkshire Music Center. The notice says:

"Tanglewood on Parade is an annual shebang to benefit the Berkshire Music Center. The proceeds go to the school, and all concerned contribute their services to this noble cause. You are urged to bring all the friends, parents, cousins and landladies who are willing to pay the tariff of $2.50 to get in, since they will, of course, recognize the dual pleasure of hearing the music and having the moral satisfaction of knowing they are helping a good cause."

The students must have gone to work. About 10,000 persons attended today's parade, and it brought more than $24,000 to the school's fund.

Festivities started at 4 o'clock this afternoon and, as always, it was a combination of circus, picnic, family gathering and holiday outing. Until the final concert in the Shed, it was all the students' doing.

Simultaneous Events

First there were, simultaneously, the Tanglewood study group in the Barn and a series of operatic excerpts in the formal gardens. Then, at 5:45 P. M., a fanfare and an address by Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

At 6 o'clock, simultaneously, there were the student orchestra directed by student conductors, scenes from several operas and new music by young composers working on the premises. At 7, a concert by the Tanglewood Choir. At 8:15, a concert in the Music Shed shared by the Boston Symphony under Eleazar de Carvalho and the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler. In the latter part of this concert, Jesus Maria Sanroma was soloist in the Gershwin Piano Concerto.

Strolling around the premises during the afternoon, one heard good things and bad things, but above all one heard the enthusiastic music-making of eager young musicians. Nearly all are talented, a few are about ready to step into active careers, and they did their best, with heart and soul. It was a most encouraging spectacle.

One of the youngsters all set and ready to go is 26-year-old Kenneth D. Schermerhorn of Syracuse, N. Y. He is a conductor and has been named this year's winner of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship. He also won it last year. This is the first time that a Koussevitzky scholarship winner has repeated his feat.

He conducted the school orchestra today in Prokofieff's "Classical Symphony." His beat and mannerisms are a cross between a Koussevitzky jitter and a Bernstein shuffle. It is easy to see from where his stick technique derives.

Called Very Gifted

Mr. Schermerhorn is very gifted. His work has real personality, and he is able to communicate his ideas—and quite decided ideas they are. It remains to be seen whether he will develop into a virtuoso or a musician, but he has one priceless attribute that cannot be taught, and that is a degree of electricity that carries over the footlights.

At tonight's concert, Senhor de Carvalho led the Boston Symphony in energetic performances of Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter" Overture and the Villa-Lobos Choros No. 10. When the Brazilian conductor came out he glared at the podium, grasped it in a strenuous one-hand lift and deposited it out of the way. The audience got the idea. Senhor de Carvalho wished to conduct without score.

He had introduced the Villa-Lobos work some years ago. It is slick and effective, with a choral background and full of carefully manicured exotic effects—a Brazilian primitive in white tie and tails, smoking imported Havanas and talking in an Oxford accent.

Mr. Fiedler's pieces with the "Pops" were the Rossini-Respighi "Boutique Fantasque" and Ravel's "Bolero," in addition to the Gershwin concerto. Mr. Sanroma played the solo part brilliantly—with an appropriately hard tone, technique to burn and a propulsive rhythmic quality. The applause probably could have been heard in Boston.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
CLOSING CONCERTS
Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra
SAT., Aug. 11, at 8:30—FREED—BRAHMS—ENESCO—STRAUSS (MONTEUX)
SUN., Aug. 12, at 2:30—BEETHOVEN—WAGNER (MUNCH)
Tickets: Wed., $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $1)
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

Berkshire Eagle Aug 11 '56

[234]

Knickerbocker News, Albany - Aug 11/56

The Summer Circuit

Drama, Music, Dance

By ORMONDE PLATER

A SHARP-EARED army invaded the lawns, clipped hedges and mysterious barns of Tanglewood Thursday for the Berkshire Festival's annual letting-down-of hair, Tanglewood on Parade.

If similarities must be drawn, let us draw them to Coney Island on a Sunday afternoon or to William Inge's "Picnic." We didn't notice any comely transients charming any local daughters, but they may well have done so. At any rate the grounds were covered with a mob of music lovers.

JAMES PEASE — The basso will sing in the opening and final scenes of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at Tanglewood.

Music has a strange effect on some persons. It stirred a covey of children to loud noises. A man fainted. There were no fights, which was unusual, because there's much in music to fight about. For instance, should Pierre Monteaux shave his mustache? Should Beethoven's Fifth Symphony be substituted for the National Anthem?

Determined to find the answers to these and other questions, we arrived at Tanglewood about 5:45 p. m., were shuttled to a parking place by a Tanglewood representative, poked our nose in the press room (filled with idle typewriters), passed hurriedly by the supper line (packed with hungry music lovers), tried to incade the student supper line (and were turned away) and, by a circuitous route, found a seat in the Chamber Music Hall.

There was no chamber music, but a young man named Ramon Zupko was seated at a piano next to an even younger young man (name not on the program), who was to turn the pages. Mr. Zupko, a student composer, was to play one of his compositions, a piano sonata. Just before he began, Rudolf Serkin, balding and smiling, slipped into the back of the room.

• • •

MR. ZUPKO attacked the piano. The sonata wasn't exactly pleasing to the ear, but it was filled with intricate syncopation and scampering trickery, which made one want to stomp his foot on the half beat. We got the impression that Mr. Zupko was wreaking vengeance on pianos in general, but he went about it with the assurance of a building demolisher.

At the final crash we glanced at Mr. Serkin. Still balding, still smiling.

Meanwhile, the Tanglewood lot was hub-bub of conflicting sounds. Sopranos warbled, violins throbbed, pianos plunked. In the Theater-Concert Hall students were singing excerpts from Verdi, Tchaikovsky, Puccini operas. In the Music Shed a student orchestra, conducted by students (one of whom was Kenneth D. Schermerhorn of Schenectady), was playing Beethoven, Franck, Prokofieff.

Taking advantage of the increased activity, we hastened to the supper line, which had diminished somewhat and gobble minished somewhat, and gobbled two egg salad sandwiches, two milks, chocolate ice cream, chocolate cookies. Enough till breakfast.

Gastronomically sated, we returned to the cultural scene. In front of the Tanglewood administration building a large crowd had gathered, those in the inner circle seated on the grass. The Tanglewood Choir also conducted by students was giving a concert, which only those in the inner circle could hear. Stepping on an old lady, we pressed to the inner circle.

• • •

HUGH ROSS, the choir director, was speaking. The next song, he said, has to do with mice and elephants and they're not pleasant. The choir, which was pleasant, then sang Robert Starer's "I Wish I Were." What they wished they were were mice, elephants and some other creatures. Nonsense.

The choir also sang Poulenc's "Exultate Deo," a rhythmical tune in the old ecclesiastical style, and Offenbach's "Beggar's Canon," in which they asked for bread. Asking this over and over, the choir circled the inner circle. Several music lovers threw them some crumbs.

With the flinging of the crumbs the crowd, both around the choir and in every nook and cranny of Tanglewood, began to gravitate toward the spacious Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra filtered into place, the lights dimmed and Eleazer de Carvalho, the conductor for the night, rushed on stage and, with one hand, removed the music stand from in front of the podium. The music lovers cheered.

Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" led the program, with its great surges of Russian flavor. It was obvious that Sr. de Carvalho needed no music stand. It was further obvious that, as Serge Koussevitsky once predicted, the Brazilian is one of the leading conductors in this country.

Sr. de Carvalho, in harmony with the orchestra, brought out the warmth and intonation of the eastern work. The violins swelled to a full bell tone, the trumpets blared and the drums thumped as Sr. de Carvalho proved himself as much a master as Rimsky-Korsakoff.

• • •

THE BRAZILIAN found himself much at home with the work of a countryman, Chores No. 7 by Villa-Lobos. It is divided into two sections — an orchestral introduction and chorus, sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

The introduction is tropical, full of the smells and sounds of the Brazilian jungle. From the heavy rain to the muggy heat, from the shrieks of parrots to the rustle of myriads of insects, it brings even the bright colors to view through music.

The chorus, on the other hand, takes one right to Rio de Janeiro of all things, the carnival or Mardi Gras atmosphere. Or so we thought from the music. We haven't run into anyone who could understand the Portuguese singing. The Tanglewood people should really have cleared away the seats for a mass rhumba. One gets so little opportunity to go native with classical music.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and Sr. de Carvalho then made way for the Boston Pops Orchestra and Arthur Fiedler, iron gray man of that organization. But in the interim a fellow named William Cox got up to announce that more than 10,000 persons had paid more than $24,000 to attend Tanglewood on Parade. At tickets from $2.50 to $5, you figure that one out. Maybe there were a lot of freeloaders like us.

* * *

MR. COX also called upon a sweet young thing to draw ticket stubs for 10 door prizes, ranging from a high-fidelity set to a children's wading pool. Needless to say, we didn't know any of the winners. At 1,000-to-1 odds, though, you're not as well off as at Saratoga. But then there aren't any symphony orchestras at Saratoga.

Getting back to the theme of the evening from such picnic entertainment, the Pops slipped to the stage. There were three possibilities: (1) The musicians were the same as in the BSO, (2) somebody backstage was playing a joke with a makeup kit or (3) we needed a new pair of glasses.

Anyway, Mr. Fiedler drove into view. (He didn't remove the music stand with one hand, or even two.) As you may know, the Pops maestro is honorary chief of the Otoe Indians and an honorary colonel in the Confederate Air Force. The Indians are still going strong, though a bit subdued, but the Rebel birdmen must have gone underground, or turned gophers.

Mr. Fiedler's conducting is certainly not jet age. (After all, the Confederates had only a few observation balloons here and there.) And, indeed, the Pops portion of the concert took as long as a horse ride from Bull Run to the Shenandoah Valley.

Rossini's "La Boutique Fantasque" was light fancy, familiar to Pops listeners, and Ravel's "Bolero" was the old whirling of that Spanish girl friend of Ravel's, even more familiar. The drummers got carried away with the latter piece and Mr. Fiedler almost had to knock them on their noggins to keep them in line. Some persons in the audience got carried away too, but Mr. Fiedler paid them no mind.

The biggest—and lengthiest—even of the Pops portion was Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F. Jesus Maria Sanroma played the piano in a rollicking Gershwin fashion.

• • •

THE CONCERTO might be described in turns of color. Sr. Sanroma wore a pink dinner jacket. The concerto is blues dissolving into whites, or rather, the bursting of a spectrum. The pianist got applause after the first movement and deserved it, even if he did stand up and take a bow.

Departing from the Tanglewood field rules, the Pops offered some lagniappe—namely, "Surrey With a Fringe on the Top," Offenbach's "Genevieve Gallop" (the original "Halls of Montezuma"), an excerpt from "My Fair Lady" and Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Except for the Gershwin work, the Pops didn't schedule anything worth chugging to Tanglewood for, but once there, one had good cause to stick around till the last note.

ALBERT DA COSTA AND MRS. DA COSTA — The Metropolitan Opera tenor, 2, a native of Amsterdam, rests with his wife on the Tanglewood grounds. He will sing the role of Walther in concert scenes from Act III of "Die Meistersinger" tomorrow.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

AUG 13 1956

Students Win Prizes For Music

Awards Made At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11—Outstanding students in the 1956 session of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood received scholarship awards and cash prizes from Aaron Copland, assistant director Saturday afternoon at the last student orchestra concert of the season before audience of more than 2,000. Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, twenty-six, of Schenectady, N. Y., who conducted part of the program, received the $500 Koussevitsky Memorial Scholarship which he had also won last summer.

Two cellists, David Spinks, twenty-one, of Albany, and Janet McCarron, nineteen, of Havertown, Pa., shared the $300 Gregor Piatigorsky Prize. Nancy Chillo, twenty, violinist from Brooklyn, won the "High Fidelity Magazine" Scholarship of $300. The $250 Serge Koussevitsky Composition Prize for a work composed at Tanglewood this season went to Robert Lombardo, of Hartford, Conn., and Yoshi Ishiyanagi of Tokyo. Mary Bucci, of New York, received the $300 Samuel Wechsler Commission. She will write a twenty-minute opera to be produced at Tanglewood next summer. Regina Sarfaty, twenty-one, New York soprano won the $250 Boyden Easton Scholarship.

The two Ann M. Hanneman Scholarships of $200 each, intended for living expenses for former service men, went to Norman Schmidt, baritone, of Dayton, Ohio, and André Come, trumpeter, of Newton, Mass.

Thirty states and eighteen foreign countries were represented in this summer's enrollment of 350 students at the center. This summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra was founded by the late Serge Koussevitsky in 1940.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

AUG 15 1956

Boston Symphony At Lenox in 1957

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will return to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for another Berkshire Music Festival next summer, from July 5 through Aug. 11, it was announced yesterday. Details of the programs will be announced in February.

In the 1956 festival, which closed Sunday, the six Wednesday night chamber music programs drew their largest attendance. Of the receipts of $14,889, approximately $12,000 will go to the Boston Symphony's summer school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center. The six chamber orchestra concerts drew 17,697 persons, with record receipts of $39,699. The Center gained $22,500 from the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit of August 9. The largest audiences for the twelve concerts by the full orchestra numbered 11,104 and 10,837 on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 4 and 5.

[295]

Knickerbocker News, Albany - Aug 11/56

The Summer Circuit

Drama, Music, Dance

By ORMONDE PLATER

A SHARP-EARED army invaded the lawns, clipped hedges and mysterious barns of Tanglewood Thursday for the Berkshire Festival's annual letting-down-of hair, Tanglewood on Parade.

If similarities must be drawn, let us draw them to Coney Island on a Sunday afternoon or to William Inge's "Picnic." We didn't notice any comely transients charming any local daughters, but they may well have done so. At any rate the grounds were covered with a mob of music lovers.

JAMES PEASE — The basso will sing in the opening and final scenes of Act III of "Die Meistersinger" at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at Tanglewood.

Music has a strange effect on some persons. It stirred a covey of children to loud noises. A man fainted. There were no fights, which was unusual, because there's much in music to fight about. For instance, should Pierre Monteaux shave his mustache? Should Beethoven's Fifth Symphony be substituted for the National Anthem?

Determined to find the answers to these and other questions, we arrived at Tanglewood about 5:45 p. m., were shuttled to a parking place by a Tanglewood representative, poked our nose in the press room (filled with idle typewriters), passed hurriedly by the supper line (packed with hungry music lovers), tried to incade the student supper line (and were turned away) and, by a circuitous route, found a seat in the Chamber Music Hall.

There was no chamber music, but a young man named Ramon Zupko was seated at a piano next to an even younger young man (name not on the program), who was to turn the pages. Mr. Zupko, a student composer, was to play one of his compositions, a piano sonata. Just before he began, Rudolf Serkin, balding and smiling, slipped into the back of the room.

• • •

MR. ZUPKO attacked the piano. The sonata wasn't exactly pleasing to the ear, but it was filled with intricate syncopation and scampering trickery, which made one want to stomp his foot on the half beat. We got the impression that Mr. Zupko was wreaking vengeance on pianos in general, but he went about it with the assurance of a building demolisher.

At the final crash we glanced at Mr. Serkin. Still balding, still smiling.

Meanwhile, the Tanglewood lot was hub-bub of conflicting sounds. Sopranos warbled, violins throbbed, pianos plunked. In the Theater-Concert Hall students were singing excerpts from Verdi, Tchaikovsky, Puccini operas. In the Music Shed a student orchestra, conducted by students (one of whom was Kenneth D. Schermerhorn of Schenectady), was playing Beethoven, Franck, Prokofieff.

Taking advantage of the increased activity, we hastened to the supper line, which had diminished somewhat and gobble minished somewhat, and gobbled two egg salad sandwiches, two milks, chocolate ice cream, chocolate cookies. Enough till breakfast.

Gastronomically sated, we returned to the cultural scene. In front of the Tanglewood administration building a large crowd had gathered, those in the inner circle seated on the grass. The Tanglewood Choir also conducted by students was giving a concert, which only those in the inner circle could hear. Stepping on an old lady, we pressed to the inner circle.

• • •

HUGH ROSS, the choir director, was speaking. The next song, he said, has to do with mice and elephants and they're not pleasant. The choir, which was pleasant, then sang Robert Starer's "I Wish I Were." What they wished they were were mice, elephants and some other creatures. Nonsense.

The choir also sang Poulenc's "Exultate Deo," a rhythmical tune in the old ecclesiastical style, and Offenbach's "Beggar's Canon," in which they asked for bread. Asking this over and over, the choir circled the inner circle. Several music lovers threw them some crumbs.

With the flinging of the crumbs the crowd, both around the choir and in every nook and cranny of Tanglewood, began to gravitate toward the spacious Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra filtered into place, the lights dimmed and Eleazer de Carvalho, the conductor for the night, rushed on stage and, with one hand, removed the music stand from in front of the podium. The music lovers cheered.

Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter Overture" led the program, with its great surges of Russian flavor. It was obvious that Sr. de Carvalho needed no music stand. It was further obvious that, as Serge Koussevitsky once predicted, the Brazilian is one of the leading conductors in this country.

Sr. de Carvalho, in harmony with the orchestra, brought out the warmth and intonation of the eastern work. The violins swelled to a full bell tone, the trumpets blared and the drums thumped as Sr. de Carvalho proved himself as much a master as Rimsky-Korsakoff.

• • •

THE BRAZILIAN found himself much at home with the work of a countryman, Choros No. 10 by Villa-Lobos. It is divided into two sections — an orchestral introduction and chorus, sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

The introduction is tropical, full of the smells and sounds of the Brazilian jungle. From the heavy rain to the muggy heat, from the shrieks of parrots to the rustle of myriads of insects, it brings even the bright colors to view through music.

The chorus, on the other hand, takes one right to Rio de Janeiro of all things, the carnival or Mardi Gras atmosphere. Or so we thought from the music. We haven't run into anyone who could understand the Portuguese singing. The Tanglewood people should really have cleared away the seats for a mass rhumba. One gets so little opportunity to go native with classical music.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and Sr. de Carvalho then made way for the Boston Pops Orchestra and Arthur Fiedler, iron gray man of that organization. But in the interim a fellow named William Cox got up to announce that more than 10,000 persons had paid more than $24,000 to attend Tanglewood on Parade. At tickets from $2.50 to $5, you figure that one out. Maybe there were a lot of freeloaders like us.

* * *

MR. COX also called upon a sweet young thing to draw ticket stubs for 10 door prizes, ranging from a high-fidelity set to a children's wading pool. Needless to say, we didn't know any of the winners. At 1,000-to-1 odds, though, you're not as well off as at Saratoga. But then there aren't any symphony orchestras at Saratoga.

Getting back to the theme of the evening from such picnic entertainment, the Pops slipped to the stage. There were three possibilities: (1) The musicians were the same as in the BSO, (2) somebody backstage was playing a joke with a makeup kit or (3) we needed a new pair of glasses.

Anyway, Mr. Fiedler drove into view. (He didn't remove the music stand with one hand, or even two.) As you may know, the Pops maestro is honorary chief of the Otoe Indians and an honorary colonel in the Confederate Air Force. The Indians are still going strong, though a bit subdued, but the Rebel birdmen must have gone underground, or turned gophers.

Mr. Fiedler's conducting is certainly not jet age. (After all, the Confederates had only a few observation balloons here and there.) And, indeed, the Pops portion of the concert took as long as a horse ride from Bull Run to the Shenandoah Valley.

Rossini's "La Boutique Fantasque" was light fancy, familiar to Pops listeners, and Ravel's "Bolero" was the old whirling of that Spanish girl friend of Ravel's, even more familiar. The drummers got carried away with the latter piece and Mr. Fiedler almost had to knock them on their noggins to keep them in line. Some persons in the audience got carried away too, but Mr. Fiedler paid them no mind.

The biggest—and lengthiest—even of the Pops portion was Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F. Jesus Maria Sanroma played the piano in a rollicking Gershwin fashion.

• • •

THE CONCERTO might be described in turns of color. Sr. Sanroma wore a pink dinner jacket. The concerto is blues dissolving into whites, or rather, the bursting of a spectrum. The pianist got applause after the first movement and deserved it, even if he did stand up and take a bow.

Departing from the Tanglewood field rules, the Pops offered some lagniappe—namely, "Surrey With a Fringe on the Top," Offenbach's "Genevieve Gallop" (the original "Halls of Montezuma"), an excerpt from "My Fair Lady" and Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Except for the Gershwin work, the Pops didn't schedule anything worth chugging to Tanglewood for, but once there, one had good cause to stick around till the last note.

ALBERT DA COSTA AND MRS. DA COSTA — The Metropolitan Opera tenor, 2, a native of Amsterdam, rests with his wife on the Tanglewood grounds. He will sing the role of Walther in concert scenes from Act III of "Die Meistersinger" tomorrow.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

AUG 13 1956

Students Win Prizes For Music

Awards Made At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11.—Outstanding students in the 1956 session of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood received scholarship awards and cash prizes from Aaron Copland, assistant director Saturday afternoon at the last student orchestra concert of the season before audience of more than 2,000. Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, twenty-six, of Schenectady, N. Y., who conducted part of the program, received the $500 Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship which he had also won last summer.

Two cellists, David Synkin, twenty-one, of Albany, and Janet McCarron, nineteen, of Havertown, Pa., shared the $300 Gregor Piatigorsky Prize. Nancy Cirillo, twenty, violinist from Brooklyn, won the "High Fidelity Magazine" Scholarship of $300. The $250 Serge Koussevitzky Composition Prize for a work composed at Tanglewood this season went to Robert Lombardo, of Hartford, Conn., and Toshi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo. Mark Bucci, of New York, received the $300 Samuel Wechsler Commission. He will write a twenty-minute opera to be produced at Tanglewood next summer. Regina Sarfaty, twenty-one, New York soprano won the $250 Florence Easton Scholarship.

The two Ann M. Gannett Scholarships of $200 each, intended for living expenses for former service men, went to Norman Schmidt, baritone, of Dayton, Ohio, and André Côme, trumpeter, of Newton, Mass.

Thirty states and eighteen foreign countries were represented in this summer's enrollment of 350 students at the center. This summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra was founded by the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

AUG 15 1956

Boston Symphony At Lenox in 1957

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will return to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for another Berkshire Music Festival next summer, from July 5 through Aug. 11, it was announced yesterday. Details of the programs will be announced in February.

In the 1956 festival, which closed Sunday, the six Wednesday night chamber music programs drew their largest attendance. Of the receipts of $14,889, approximately $12,000 will go to the Boston Symphony's summer school at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Center. The six chamber orchestra concerts drew 17,697 persons, with record receipts of $39,699. The Center gained $22,500 from the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit of August 9. The largest audiences for the twelve concerts by the full orchestra numbered 11,104 and 10,837 on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 4 and 5.

Music

Worcester Telegram
Aug 12

Varied Tanglewood Fare Best Answer to N. Y. Critic

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

The overseers at the Berkshire Music Festival are still smarting quietly over the recent article in the New York Herald Tribune by Jay S. Harrison, in which he asserted that "Tanglewood is in desperate need of an esthetic face-lifting."

It is Mr. Harrison's opinion, given with the utmost frankness, that the Boston Symphony is dishing out to its Tanglewood audiences a "lousy carbon copy" of its winter season.

He illustrates with the July 16 program which consisted of Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" Overture, Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," Ravel's Second "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite and Brahms' "Symphony No. 2 in D major."

Concerning these, Mr. Harrison says: "Granted, these are all great works, staples of the repertory, marvels of their kind. But to ask an audience to travel hundreds of miles to hear them performed is sheer effrontery and nothing less. There is not a radio station throughout the land that does not, through first-rate records, air them once weekly at least, and symphonic groups from coast to coast give them hearings at regular intervals."

Problem Is Examined

Let's study this problem fairly and squarely. This afternoon's concert will be the 19th and concluding one. I am not including the professional chamber music series or the dozens of programs by the students of the Berkshire Music Center.

These 19 Berkshire Music Festival programs have included 65 works, of which 20 may be classified as "modern." Their composers were Martinu, Cowell, Ives, Hanieff, Webern, Bartok, Petrassi, Hanson, Honegger, Hindemith, Stravinsky, Copland, Creed, Piston, Rabaud, Respighi, Villa-Lobos, Gershwin and Ravel.

It cannot be denied that this is a handsome representation of contemporary music.

A good percentage of this music has been recorded, but it is not heard over the radio once a week in any one location — not by a long shot.

Furthermore, an orchestra would be hard-pressed indeed if it had to restrict itself to music that is [illegible] be heard on records.

No Duplication

The record shows that the most popular composer at Tanglewood has been Beethoven. Something as a critic who goes to concerts now and then, we are glad to hear the Boston Symphony any other orchestra duplicate performance any one work. And in the festival we have reviewed the Boston Symphony the conductors — Charles Munch, Leonard Bernstein, Richard Burgin, Eleazar de Carvalho, Pierre Monteux and Arthur Fiedler (Boston Pops).

No matter how many times you have heard the Boston Symphony under these conductors it is impossible to predict the quality of the performance you are about to hear. If this were not so, critics would be out of business. It would suffice to reprint the review of the initial presentation.

Festival Shows Courage

There is only one reason for a festival — to attract and please an audience. We can vouch for the uneasiness, even resentment, that spread through the audience at Tanglewood during Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra, and Aaron Copland's noisy and disorganized Symphonic Ode. Both audiences were soothed by music of Tchaikovsky.

Those in charge of programming must have had more than an inkling of what would be the reaction to these works. They included them to satisfy the demands of those who insist on new music.

With so much at stake, the Berkshire Festival showed genuine courage in devoting one-third of its programs to contemporary music, some of it untried and unproven.

Besides, more than half of the 19 programs contained one or more of these works.

LEXINGTON, KY.
HERALD - LEADER
AUG 12 1956

TRANSYLVANIA INSTRUCTOR AT TANGLEWOOD — Norman Schmidt, right,, a voice instructor at Transylvania College is one of the recipients of a $200 Ann M. Gannett Scholarship at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Schmidt is from Dayton, Ohio. Pictured with him is Miss Regina Sarafaty of New York City, who won the Florence Easton Scholarship to the center. The 14 students who were presented awards yesterday were chosen from among 350 students enrolled this year from 30 states and 18 foreign countries.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • CLOSING CONCERTS

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

TODAY at 2:30

FRI. Aug. 10, at 8:30—HAYDN—PISTON—STRAUSS—DUKAS (MUNCH)
SAT. Aug. 11, at 8:30—FREED—BRAHMS—ERESCO—STRAUSS (MONTEUX)
SUN. Aug. 12, at 2:30—BEETHOVEN—WAGNER (MUNCH)
NEXT WED. Aug. 8 (Theatre) at 8:30—ZINO FRANCESCATTI, ARTUR BALSAM
Tickets: Wed. $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano

TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 800
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
CLOSING CONCERTS

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

FRI., AUG. 10, at 8:30—HAYDN—PISTON—STRAUSS—DUKAS—(MUNCH)
SAT., Aug. 11, at 8:30—FREED—BRAHMS—ERESCO—STRAUSS (MONTEUX)
SUN., Aug. 12, at 2:30—BEETHOVEN—WAGNER (MUNCH)
Tickets: Wed., $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano

TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 800
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

OPEN REHEARSAL SAT. AT 10 A.M. — ADMISSION $1.00

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
Record & Bay Ridge Rec'rd

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.

SEP 1956

Center Draws Foreign Students

Lenox, Mass.—Young musicians, the majority of them newcomers, came from 30 states and 18 foreign countries to study this year at the 14th annual session of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

Founded in 1940 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Tanglewood was established as a campus where young musicians could add to their professional training and artistic experience under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, was director this year of the center. Aaron Copland was assistant director. Ralph Berkowitz, dean; and Gail W. Rector, executive secretary.

The faculty included Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Lukas Foss, Irving Fine, Boris Goldovsky, Ingolf Dahl, Seymour Lipkin, and members of the Boston Symphony. Goffredo Petrassi, composer-in-residence at the American Academy in Rome, was guest composer this summer.

A record number of foreign students attended this summer's session. Six came from Canada, four from Great Britain, four from Uruguay, three from Brazil, three from Argentina, and two from Cuba, Puerto Rico, the Philippines, and Japan. Israel, Lebanon, Colombia, Germany, France, Peru, Egypt, Hungary, Finland, Austria, and Australia were represented by one student each.

New York, Massachusetts, and Pennsylvania were most heavily represented in the season's enrollment. Registration from the West increased considerably this year, however, with students coming from California, Oregon, Washington, and Utah. Large contingents attended from Illi[illegible] Ohio, and Texas, with small[illegible] bers from other states.

Tuition scholarships, awar[illegible] the basis of national comp[illegible] were provided by the Tang[illegible] Revolving Scholarship Fund, [illegible] tained through contributions re[illegible] from Friends of the Berkshire [illegible] Center. For several other stu[illegible] the experience at Tanglewood [illegible] made possible through schola[illegible] awarded by home-town areas. [illegible] student from Australia attende[illegible] the recipient of the William K[illegible] Memorial Scholarship and a [illegible] bright Travel Award.

The drive has as its goal 5,000 Academy Memberships or double the 1955-'56 total. Both Donald G. C. Sinclair, and Robert E. Blum, President of Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, of which the Academy of Music, Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Brooklyn Museum and Children's Museum are component parts, are highly confident that the goal will be attained in view of initial results to date.

Academy Membership insures free admission to more than 250 outstanding music, dance, theater, travel and other attractions during the season. In addition, Membership offers substantial savings in tickets for special events and various subscription series presentations including the Boston Symphony ~~Orchestra~~ Concerts and Major Concert Series, sponsored annually by the Institute.

Music

Worcester Telegram
Aug 12

Varied Tanglewood Fare Best Answer to N. Y. Critic

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

The overseers at the Berkshire Music Festival are still smarting quietly over the recent article in the New York Herald Tribune by Jay S. Harrison, in which he asserted that "Tanglewood is in desperate need of an esthetic face-lifting."

It is Mr. Harrison's opinion, given with the utmost frankness, that the Boston Symphony is dishing out to its Tanglewood audiences a "hazy carbon copy" of its winter season.

He illustrates with the July 19 program which consisted of Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" Overture, Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," Ravel's Second "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite and Brahms' "Symphony No. 2 in D major."

Concerning these, Mr. Harrison says: "Granted, these are all great works, staples of the repertory, marvels of their kind. But to ask an audience to travel hundreds of miles to hear them performed is sheer effrontery and nothing less. There is not a radio station throughout the land that does not, through first-rate records, air them once weekly at least, and symphonic groups from coast to coast give them hearings at regular intervals."

Problem Is Examined

Let's study this problem fairly and squarely. This afternoon's concert will be the 19th and concluding one. I am not including the professional chamber music series or the dozens of programs by the students of the Berkshire Music Center.

These 19 Berkshire Music Festival programs have included 65 works of which 20 may be classified as "modern." Their composers were Martinu, Cowell, Ives, Hsieff, Webern, Bartok, Petrassi, Hanson, Honegger, Hindemith, Stravinsky, Copland, Freed, Piston, Rabaud, Respighi, Villa-Lobos, Gershwin and Ravel.

It cannot be denied that this is a handsome representation of contemporary music.

A good percentage of this music has been recorded, but it is not heard over the radio once a week in any one location — not by a long shot.

Furthermore, an orchestra would be hard-pressed indeed if it had to restrict itself to music that is not to be heard on records.

No Duplication

The record shows that the most popular composer at Tanglewood has been Beethoven. Speaking as a critic who goes to concerts now and then, we are glad to hear the Boston Symphony or any other orchestra play a duplicate performance of any one work. And in this festival we have reviewed the Boston Symphony under conductors—Charles Munch, Leonard Bernstein, Richard Burgin, Eleazar de Carvalho, Pierre Monteux and Arthur Fiedler (Boston Pops).

No matter how many times you have heard the Boston Symphony under these conductors it is impossible to predict the quality of the performance you are about to hear. If this were not so, critics would be out of business. It would suffice to reprint the review of the initial presentation.

Festival Shows Courage

There is only one reason for a festival — to attract and please an audience. We can vouch for the uneasiness, even resentment, that spread through the audience at Tanglewood during Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra, and Aaron Copland's noisy and disorganized Symphonic Ode. Both audiences were soothed by music of Tchaikovsky.

Those in charge of programming must have had more than an inkling of what would be the reaction to these works. They included them to satisfy the demands of those who insist on new music.

With so much at stake, the Berkshire Festival showed genuine courage in devoting one-third of its programs to contemporary music, some of it untried and unproven.

Besides, more than half of the 19 programs contained one or more of these works.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.
CLOSING CONCERTS
Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra
FRI., AUG. 10, at 8:30—HAYDN—PISTON—STRAUSS—DUKAS—(MUNCH)
SAT., Aug. 11, at 8:30—FREED—BRAHMS—ENESCO—STRAUSS (MONTEUX)
SUN., Aug. 12, at 2:30—BEETHOVEN—WAGNER (MUNCH)
Tickets: Wed., $2, $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records
OPEN REHEARSAL SAT. AT 10 A.M. — ADMISSION $1.00

LEXINGTON, KY,
HERALD - LEADER
AUG 12 1956

TRANSYLVANIA INSTRUCTOR AT TANGLEWOOD — Norman Schmidt, right, a voice instructor at Transylvania College is one of the recipients of a $200 Ann M. Gannett Scholarship at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Schmidt is from Dayton, Ohio. Pictured with him is Miss Regina Sarafaty of New York City, who won the Florence Easton Scholarship to the center. The 14 students who were presented awards yesterday were chosen from among 350 students enrolled this year from 30 states and 18 foreign countries.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. •CLOSING CONCERTS
Berkshire Festival
BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
SHED CONCERTS by the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
TODAY at 2:30
FRI. Aug. 10, at 8:30—HAYDN—PISTON—STRAUSS—DUKAS (MUNCH)
SAT. Aug. 11, at 8:30—FREED—BRAHMS—ENESCO—STRAUSS (MONTEUX)
SUN. Aug 12, at 2:30—BEETHOVEN—WAGNER (MUNCH)
NEXT WED. Aug. 8 (Theatre) at 8:30—ZINO FRANCESCATTI; ARTUR BALSAM
Tickets: Wed. $2; $3; Shed $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)
"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—THURS. AUG. 9
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors: Eleazar de Carvalho; Arthur Fiedler
Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma, Piano
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
Record & Bay Ridge Rec'rd
Circ. W. 9,300

AUG 31 1956

Music Academy Adds Leaders In Members Drive

Five additional Chairmen of the all-Brooklyn community committees for the 1956-'57 Brooklyn Academy of Music Membership Campaign Drive were announced today by Donald G. S. Sinclair, Chairman of the Governing Committee.

The new Chairmen and their respective areas are as follows: Ervin M. Burrow, Bay Ridge Savings Bank, Bay Ridge; Hugh L. M. Cole, Milbank, Tweed, Hope and Hadley, Brooklyn Heights; Frederick L. Kriete, The Williamsburgh Savings Bank, Clinton Hill; Judge Harold J. McLaughlin, Marine Park; and Henry Weber, The Dime Savings Bank of Williamsburg, Williamsburg.

The Academy's three - month Membership Campaign launched August 1, is headed by Borough President John Cashmore, Honorary Chairman, Frederic H. J. Rider, Manager of Publicity and Advertising, The Brooklyn Union Gas Company, Regional Chairman and Walter Obersterbrink, Liebmann Breweries Inc., Queens Chairman.

Additional Area Committee Chairmen for the three-month Membership Drive recently announced include: Leo B. Stein, The Dime Savings Bank of Brooklyn, Beach area; William M. Taylor and Dr. Gardner G. Taylor, Bedford-Stuyvesant; Stanley Jordan, Bensonhurst National Bank, Bensonhurst; Judge Emil N. Baar, Crown Heights; Raynar Sundholm, Prudential Savings Bank, East Flatbush; Thomas J. Perry, The Brooklyn Union Gas Company, Mrs. David Weynberg and Mrs. William F. Wathall, Flatbush; Benjamin Chancy, Midwood; Carl H. Hollefsen, Park Slope; and Godfrey A. Stamm, Downtown Brooklyn Association for Clinton Hill.

The drive has as its goal 6,000 Academy Memberships or double the 1955-'56 total. Both Donald G. C. Sinclair, and Robert E. Blum, President of Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, of which the Academy of Music, Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Brooklyn Museum and Children's Museum are component parts, are highly confident that the goal will be attained in view of initial results to date.

Academy Membership insures free admission to more than 250 outstanding music, dance, theater, travel and other attractions during the season. In addition, Membership offers substantial savings in tickets for special events and various subscription series presentations including the Boston Symphony ~~Orchestra~~ Concerts and Major Concert Series, sponsored annually by the Institute.

Berkshire Festival Ends; Boston Symphony at Its Best

Lenox, Mass.—What the Berkshire Festival offered in its second half was, primarily, superb playing by the Boston Symphony. It continued a review of the pieces written for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra. In many ways it served as a preparation for the European tour which began almost immediately after.

One of the most memorable performances of the entire festival occurred when Rudolf Serkin played the Schumann Piano Concerto at the July 28 concert. Both he and Charles Munch were so inspired that they lifted the orchestra to an extraordinary realization of this remantic work. Among them they created Schumann's balance of the parts, for the interplay between the piano and the instrumental soloists was unusual. As for Mr. Serkin, he combined his electrifying brilliance with his true sense of poetry. He played the cadenza of the first movement in an incredible manner.

This whole concert found the orchestra at its peak. The program began with Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky", one of his finer pieces. It included the singular Fifth Symphony of the late Arthur Honegger, which never fails to make a profound impression, especially when conducted by Mr. Munch. It ended with Debussy's "La Mer".

Richard Burgin conducted the July 29 concert. He sustained the contemporary accent with a program consisting of the Second Suite from Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet"; the Hindemith Violin Concerto, with Ruth Posselt as soloist; and Mahler's First Symphony. Mr. Burgin showed especial affinity for the Mahler and accompanied his wife astutely in the Hindemith. She played with the conviction and finish characteristic of her espousal of modern music. The Hindemith did not appear to be wearing too well in spite of this performance.

Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 was the feature of the Friday concert of this weekend. Because the

(Continued on page 30)

Joe Petrovec

At the Berkshire Music Center this summer Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky and Eleazar de Carvalho, second from left, chat with three student conductors —Jean Louis Le Roux, left, of Uruguay; Kenneth Schermerhorn, second from right, Schenectady, N. Y., and Donald Wooldridge, London, England

ture", as well as Brahms, Enesco and Strauss.

The Festival closed on a triumphant note with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the final scene from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger". These two great works were richly played, the Wagner more symphonically than operatically, the "Eroica" impressively. The Wagner performance began with the Quintet just before the final scene and eliminated the character of Beckmesser. James Pease quite dominated the performance as Sachs, when the orchestra did not overpower the singers generally. He has increased his stature as a Wagnerian singer so as to qualify among the best. Marguerite Willauer and Albert Da Costa were the other leading singers, with three Berkshire Music Center students in lesser roles: Rosalind Hupp, John McCurdy, and Robert Nagy.

Foss's "Griffelkin" Staged

The opera department had a less distinguished season. It presented a variety bill with five complete acts from 19th-century operas for its first program, and the first stage performance of Lukas Foss's "Griffelkin" as its major event. On stage, "Griffelkin" appeared no stronger than in its premiere on TV last March. Though it has charm, wit, and appeal, the Statistically, the peak attendance of the festival came on Aug. 4 and 5, with well over 10,000 attending each event. The over-all total for the festival fell somewhat below that of last season, but the Wednesday chamber concerts set a new record.

Officials of the Boston Symphony announced that the orchestra would return for another Berkshire Music Festival next summer, from July 5 through Aug. 11. Details of the programs will be announced in February. —Miles Kastendieck

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
SEP 11 1956

BSO Thanks Board For Its Assistance

STOCKBRIDGE—The Selectmen have received two letters of appreciation from Norman S. Shirk, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, on behalf of the orchestra.

The first letter thanks the local board for its "support and interest" during the recent Tanglewood season.

The second letter thanks the Selectmen for bringing to the BSO's attention a complaint that beer was sold to a minor at Tanglewood on Parade last month. The complaint had been investigated by local police.

Coffee Cups

Rev. and Mrs. J. Herbert Owen have returned from their vacation at Lenox and Williamstown, Massachusetts in the Berkshire Hills and Lake Luzerne in the Adirondacks, in New York State. They attended the Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

The Tanglewood Story

Sept 56

From our vantage point in New York, Tanglewood is about four hours away, but it is a whole world away in its beautiful setting for its six-week festival of music. The 1956 Berkshire Festival was the 19th of the series — the 17th since the Boston Symphony first participated in 1936. It was also the 14th season of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony.

Tanglewood is a beautiful 200-acre estate, marked by green lawns and studded with evergreens. The music making is of different categories, and often, several things are going on simultaneously. Basically, the two divisions are the professional performances, which are the Festival Concerts, and the student performances. But let there be no mistake about it — there was nothing amateurish about the student performances.

There were 24 Festival concerts in all. We were unable to attend the six Wednesday evening Chamber music concerts. However, here is a list of the performers: the Kroll String Quartet, Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet, Brass Ensemble, Margaret Harshaw and Ralph Berkowitz, Beau Arts Trio, Rudolf Serkin and Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet, and Zino Francescatti, Artur Balsam. The music ranged from Gabrieli to Bartok, and the concerts attracted a total audience of over 10,000 people, more than in any previous season.

The first two week-ends of concerts were given in the intimate 1,200 seat Theatre-Concert Hall, with the Chamber Orchestra chiefly featuring Bach and Mozart. July 6, Benny Goodman made his Tanglewood debut in an excellent performance of Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet. Charles Munch was expert in providing the orchestral counterpart and in his readings of Symphonies in G minor (K. 550) and D major (K. 504). July 7, Dr. Munch conducted the first half of the program, Mozart's Symphony in D major (K. 385) and the same composer's Sinfonia Concertante (K. 297b); Hugh Ross, who conducted the second half, engaged in a contrasting idiom, Martinu's "Military Mass," and Cowell's Thanksgiving Psalm, from "The Dead Sea Scrolls," in which the Yale Glee Club also participated. On July 8, Lukas Foss conducted the Chamber Orchestra in selections by Haydn, Fine, Haieff, Ives, and concluded with Bach's Piano Concerto in D minor, in which he doubled as piano soloist.

Second Week-end: Three pianists of the same family were featured at the July 13 concert. The program included Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos, with duo-pianists Pierre Luboshutz and his wife Genia Nemenoff as soloists, along with their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, who is head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. The works performed were three movements from the "Posthorn" Serenade; the Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos, K. 242; the Piano Concerto in A Major, K. 488; and the Concerto in E Flat Major for Two Pianos, K. 365. Mr. Goldovsky conducted all except the A Major Concerto, in which he was soloist and Mr. Luboshutz conducted. The balance of the week-end (July 14 and 15) was devoted to Bach, with Charles Munch conducting the Chamber Orchestra. This was brought to a climax with a magnificent performance of Bach's Passion According to St. John, a Tanglewood premiere. In addition to the orchestra, participants included the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross, and soloists Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

Third Week-End: On July 20, the Festival Concerts moved to the big Shed, which seats over 6,000 people. The 106-mem-

(Continued on page 30)

[287]

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N. Y.
SEP 1956

Berkshire Festival Ends; Boston Symphony at Its Best

Lenox, Mass.—What the Berkshire Festival offered in its second half was, primarily, superb playing by the Boston Symphony. It continued a review of the pieces written for the 75th anniversary of the orchestra. In many ways it served as a preparation for the European tour which began almost immediately after.

One of the most memorable performances of the entire festival occurred when Rudolf Serkin played the Schumann Piano Concerto at the July 28 concert. Both he and Charles Munch were so inspired that they lifted the orchestra to an extraordinary realization of this remantic work. Among them they created Schumann's balance of the parts, for the interplay between the piano and the instrumental soloists was unusual. As for Mr. Serkin, he combined his electrifying brilliance with his true sense of poetry. He played the cadenza of the first movement in an incredible manner.

This whole concert found the orchestra at its peak. The program began with Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky", one of his finer pieces. It included the singular Fifth Symphony of the late Arthur Honegger, which never fails to make a profound impression, especially when conducted by Mr. Munch. It ended with Debussy's "La Mer".

Richard Burgin conducted the July 29 concert. He sustained the contemporary accent with a program consisting of the Second Suite from Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet"; the Hindemith Violin Concerto, with Ruth Posselt as soloist; and Mahler's First Symphony. Mr. Burgin showed especial affinity for the Mahler and accompanied his wife astutely in the Hindemith. She played with the conviction and finish characteristic of her espousal of modern music. The Hindemith did not appear to be wearing too well in spite of this performance.

Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra No. 5 was the feature of the Friday concert of this weekend. Because the

(Continued on page 30)

Joe Petrovec

At the Berkshire Music Center this summer Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky and Eleazar de Carvalho, second from left, chat with three student conductors —Jean Louis Le Roux, left, of Uruguay; Kenneth Schermerhorn, second from right, Schenectady, N. Y., and Donald Wooldridge, London, England

ture", as well as Brahms, Enesco and Strauss.

The Festival closed on a triumphant note with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the final scene from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger". These two great works were richly played, the Wagner more symphonically than operatically, the "Eroica" impressively. The Wagner performance began with the Quintet just before the final scene and eliminated the character of Beckmesser. James Pease quite dominated the performance as Sachs, when the orchestra did not overpower the singers generally. He has increased his stature as a Wagnerian singer so as to qualify among the best. Marguerite Willauer and Albert Da Costa were the other leading singers, with three Berkshire Music Center students in lesser roles: Rosalind Hupp, John McCurdy, and Robert Nagy.

Foss's "Griffelkin" Staged

The opera department had a less distinguished season. It presented a variety bill with five complete acts from 19th-century operas for its first program, and the first stage performance of Lukas Foss's "Griffelkin" as its major event. On stage, "Griffelkin" appeared no stronger than in its premiere on TV last March. Though it has charm, wit, and appeal, the Statistically, the peak attendance of the festival came on Aug. 4 and 5, with well over 10,000 attending each event. The over-all total for the festival fell somewhat below that of last season, but the Wednesday chamber concerts set a new record.

Officials of the Boston Symphony announced that the orchestra would return for another Berkshire Music Festival next summer, from July 5 through Aug. 11. Details of the programs will be announced in February.

—Miles Kastendieck

The Tanglewood Story

From our vantage point in New York, Tanglewood is about four hours away, but it is a whole world away in its beautiful setting for its six-week festival of music. The 1956 Berkshire Festival was the 19th of the series — the 17th since the Boston Symphony first participated in 1936. It was also the 14th season of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony.

Tanglewood is a beautiful 200-acre estate, marked by green lawns and studded with evergreens. The music making is of different categories, and often, several things are going on simultaneously. Basically, the two divisions are the professional performances, which are the Festival Concerts, and the student performances. But let there be no mistake about it — there was nothing amateurish about the student performances.

There were 24 Festival concerts in all. We were unable to attend the six Wednesday evening Chamber music concerts. However, here is a list of the performers: the Kroll String Quartet, Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet, Brass Ensemble, Margaret Harshaw and Ralph Berkowitz, Beau Arts Trio, Rudolf Serkin and Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet, and Zino Francescatti, Artur Balsam. The music ranged from Gabrieli to Bartok, and the concerts attracted a total audience of over 10,000 people, more than in any previous season.

The first two week-ends of concerts were given in the intimate 1,200 seat Theatre-Concert Hall, with the Chamber Orchestra chiefly featuring Bach and Mozart. July 6, Benny Goodman made his Tanglewood debut in an excellent performance of Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet. Charles Munch was expert in providing the orchestral counterpart and in his readings of Symphonies in G minor (K. 550) and D major (K. 504). July 7, Dr. Munch conducted the first half of the program, Mozart's Symphony in D major (K. 385) and the composer's Sinfonia Concertante (K. 297b); Hugh Ross, who conducted the second half, engaged in a contrasting idiom, Martinu's "Military Mass," and Cowell's Thanksgiving Psalm, from "The Dead Sea Scrolls," in which the Yale Glee Club also participated. On July 8, Lukas Foss conducted the Chamber Orchestra in selections by Haydn, Fine, Haieff, Ives, and concluded with Bach's Piano Concerto in D minor, in which he doubled as piano soloist.

Second Week-end: Three pianists of the same family were featured at the July 13 concert. The program included Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos, with duo-pianists Pierre Luboshutz and his wife Genia Nemenoff as soloists, along with their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, who is head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. The works performed were three movements from the "Posthorn" Serenade; the Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos, K. 242; the Piano Concerto in A Major, K. 488; and the Concerto in E Flat Major for Two Pianos, K. 365. Mr. Goldovsky conducted all except the A Major Concerto, in which he was soloist and Mr. Luboshutz conducted. The balance of the week-end (July 14 and 15) was devoted to Bach, with Charles Munch conducting the Chamber Orchestra. This was brought to a climax with a magnificent performance of Bach's Passion According to St. John, a Tanglewood premiere. In addition to the orchestra, participants included the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross, and soloists Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

Third Week-End: On July 20, the Festival Concerts moved to the big Shed, which seats over 6,000 people. The 106-mem-

(Continued on page 30)

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
SEP 11 1956

BSO Thanks Board For Its Assistance

STOCKBRIDGE—The Selectmen have received two letters of appreciation from Norman S. Shirk, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, on behalf of the orchestra.

The first letter thanks the local board for its "support and interest" during the recent Tanglewood season.

The second letter thanks the Selectmen for bringing to the BSO's attention a complaint that beer was sold to a minor at Tanglewood on Parade last month. The complaint had been investigated by local police.

MELBOURNE, FLA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 4,748
SEP 9 1956

Coffee Cups

Rev. and Mrs. J. Herbert Owen have returned from their vacation at Lenox and Williamstown, Massachusetts in the Berkshire Hills and Loon Lake in the Adirondacks, in New York State. They attended the Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Milanov Signed

National Artists

Sept 56

The Tanglewood Story

From our vantage point in New York, Tanglewood is about four hours away, but it is a whole world away in its beautiful setting for its six-week festival of music. The 1956 Berkshire Festival was the 19th of the series — the 17th since the Boston Symphony first participated in 1936. It was also the 14th season of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony.

Tanglewood is a beautiful 200-acre estate, marked by green lawns and studded with evergreens. The music making is of different categories, and often, several things are going on simultaneously. Basically, the two divisions are the professional performances, which are the Festival Concerts, and the student performances. But let there be no mistake about it — there was nothing amateurish about the student performances.

There were 24 Festival concerts in all. We were unable to attend the six Wednesday evening Chamber music concerts. However, here is a list of the performers: the Kroll String Quartet, Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet, Brass Ensemble, Margaret Harshaw and Ralph Berkowitz, Beau Arts Trio, Rudolf Serkin and Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet, and Zino Francescatti, Artur Balsam. The music ranged from Gabrieli to Bartok, and the concerts attracted a total audience of over 10,000 people, more than in any previous season.

The first two week-ends of concerts were given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall, with the Chamber Orchestra chiefly featuring Bach and Mozart. July 6, Benny Goodman made his Tanglewood debut in an excellent performance of Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet. Charles Munch was expert in providing the orchestral counterpart and in his readings of Symphonies in G minor (K. 550) and D major (K. 504). July 7, Dr. Munch conducted the first half of the program, Mozart's Symphony in D major (K. 385) and the same composer's Sinfonia Concertante (K. 297b); Hugh Ross, who conducted the second half, engaged in a contrasting idiom, Martinu's "Military Mass," and Cowell's Thanksgiving Psalm, from "The Dead Sea Scrolls," in which the Yale Glee Club also participated. On July 8, Lukas Foss conducted the Chamber Orchestra in selections by Haydn, Fine, Haieff, Ives, and concluded with Bach's Piano Concerto in D minor, in which he doubled as piano soloist.

Second Week-end: Three pianists of the same family were featured at the July 13 concert. The program included Mozart concertos for one, two and three pianos, with duo-pianists Pierre Luboshutz and his wife Genia Nemenoff as soloists, along with their nephew, Boris Goldovsky, who is head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. The works performed were three movements from the "Posthorn" Serenade; the Concerto in F Major for Three Pianos, K. 242; the Piano Concerto in A Major, K. 488; and the Concerto in E Flat Major for Two Pianos, K. 365. Mr. Goldovsky conducted all except the A Major Concerto, in which he was soloist and Mr. Luboshutz conducted. The balance of the week-end (July 14 and 15) was devoted to Bach, with Charles Munch conducting the Chamber Orchestra. This was brought to a climax with a magnificent performance of Bach's Passion According to St. John, a Tanglewood premiere. In addition to the orchestra, participants included the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center trained by choral department head Hugh Ross, and soloists Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan and James Joyce, basses.

Third Week-End: On July 20, the Festival Concerts moved to the big Shed, which seats over 6,000 people. The 106-mem-

(Continued on page 30)

Eleazar de Carvalho ope... weekend of ... with ... be termed a p... gan noisily with ... messe", from ... and continuous so... dances from "The Three-Corn... Hat". The Brazilian conductor cau... the flavor of these Spanish pieces ... generated excitement through co... and rhythm. Jocy de Oliveira, ... wife, played Ravel's Piano Con... in a somewhat perfunctory ... The concert ended with S... "Petrouchka", played mo... rhythm and color. ... full of good spirits ... zing-boom from the ...

Another highlight ... the fest... came with Leonard ...ernstein's ... pearance for the Koussevitzky ... orial Concert. He conducted a m... nificent performance of the Prok... Fifth Symphony, which Koussevi... introduced to this country, and ... proved that the work qualifies ... one of the great symphonies ... this century. The "Kyrie" and ... ria" from Mozart's Mass in C mi... d less successfully. Phyllis C... h-nice Alberts, and Joh... m were the soloists wi... estival chorus.

Schumann Anniver...

Mr. Munch cond... y concert offering ... ym-phonic Ode", the Tch... oli- Concerto, with Zino ... tti as soloist; and Schumann's ... ym-phony—the last, as ... niversary gesture.

For the final weeken... sustained the annivers... with Piston's Sixth Symphon... -made work which further en... spect for this composer. ... aydn, Strauss, and Dukas s... were typical. Pierre Monteux ... ed the solid music-making of the Saturday concert, recognizing Isadore Freed by playing his agreeable "Festival Overture", as well as Brah... Enesco and Strauss.

The Festival closed on a trium-phant note with ... ethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and ... final scene from Wagner's "Die ...stersinger". These two great works ... ere richly played, the Wagner more ... mphonically than operatically, ... "Eroica" impres-sively. The Wa... performance be-gan with the ... et just before the final scene and eliminat... the char-acter of Beckmesser. James Pease quite dominated the performance as Sachs, when the orchestra did not overpower the singers generally. He has increased his stature as a Wagnerian singer so as to qualify among the best. Marguerite Willauer and Albert Da Costa were the other leading singers, with three Berkshire Music Center students in lesser roles: Rosalind Hupp, John McCurdy, and Robert Nagy.

Foss's "Griffelkin" Staged

The opera department had a less distinguished season. It presented a variety bill with five complete acts from 19th-century operas for its first program, and the first stage performance of Lukas Foss's "Griffelkin" as its major event. On stage, "Griffelkin" appeared no stronger than in its premiere on TV last March. Though it has charm, wit, and appeal, the score fails ... create the world of fantasy ... An excellent production ... O'Hearn, costumes ... Witsen, and staged ... Boris Goldovsky, made it visually interesting. A cast of 23 in addition to chorus and dancers, worked hard. Mr. Foss himself conducted the student orchestra. The fact that the work drew one of the small-est audiences to attend this annual event might be worth noting.

"Tanglewood on Parade", for the benefit of the Music Center, drew a near-record crowd. Besides its simultaneous performances by the students of the orchestra, opera and composition departments, and a concert by the Tanglewood choir, it brought Mr. Carvalho, conducting the Boston Symphony in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter" Overture, and Villa-Lobos' Choros No. 10, and Arthur Fiedler, conducting the Boston Pops orchestra in a characteristic program. This included a brilliant performance of the Gershwin Piano Concerto by Jesus Maria Sanroma.

Statistically, the peak attendance of the festival came on Aug. 4 and 5, with well over 10,000 attending each event. The over-all total for the festival fell somewhat below that of last season, but the Wednesday chamber concerts set a new record.

Officials of the Boston Symphony announced that the orchestra would return for another Berkshire Music Festival next summer, from July 5 through Aug. 11. Details of the programs will be announced in February. —Miles Kastendieck

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,844
SEP 11 1956

BSO Thanks Board For Its Assistance

STOCKBRIDGE—The Selectmen have received two letters of appreciation from Norman S. Shirk, assistant manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, on behalf of the orchestra.

The first letter thanks the local board for its "support and interest" during the recent Tanglewood season.

The second letter thanks the Selectmen for bringing to the BSO's attention a complaint that beer was sold to a minor at Tanglewood on Parade last month. The complaint had been investigated by local police.

Coffee Cups

Rev. and Mrs. J. Herbert Owen have returned from their vacation at Lenox and Williamstown, Massachusetts in the Berkshire Hills and Lake ... in the Adirondacks, in New York State. They attended the Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

[287]

New York

(Continued from page 2)

ber Boston Symphony played two wholly orchestral programs: On Friday, Dr. Munch conducted works by Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms; on July 22, Pierre Monteux conducted works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert. On Saturday night, July 21, however, the second half of the program was devoted to a concert version of the first act of "Die Walkure." Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass, were soloists, with Dr. Munch again conducting. In complete contrast the first half of the program was devoted to contemporary music, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies.

Fourth Week-End: Dr. Munch's program on July 27 included the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, Italian composer who was guest teacher of composition this season at the Berkshire Music Center, the Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5. There were also works by Beethoven and Tschaikowsky. On July 28, Dr. Munch conducted a varied program, including works by Hanson, Honegger and Debussy, but the highlight of the program was the Schuman Piano Concerto, which was played to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. Rudolf Serkin was the soloist, and though superlatives are sometimes dangerous we must say that we cannot think of anyone who can do this lyrical work more beautifully. On July 29, Richard Burgin, who is the concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, was exceptionally fine in the role of conductor. And the conductor was no doubt proud of Ruth Posselt (privately Mrs. Burgin), who gave an effective performance of Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin also gave musical interpretations of Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Suite No. 2 and Mahler's First Symphony.

Fifth Week-End: Three conductors led the Boston Symphony this week-end. On Aug. 3, Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, was in charge. Mr. de Carvalho has also been acting as head of the Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting, in place of Leonard Bernstein who is on sabbatical. The program included Ravel's Piano Concerto, with Jocy de Oliveira as soloist, the complete ballet "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky, and works by Marraud and Falla. On Aug. 4, Leonard Bernstein conducted. Mr. Bernstein devoted his concert as a memorial to the former conductor of Boston Symphony, Serge Koussevitzky. He selected Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the U. S., and the Mozart Mass in C minor (K.427), Kyrie and Gloria, in its Tanglewood premiere, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein's interpretations were deeply emotional and vigorous in their extremes of expression. Zino Francescatti was soloist, under Dr. Munch, Aug. 5, in the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto. Of course, Francescatti did a beautiful job, and Dr. Munch gave him sympathetic support. There was also the Tanglewood premiere of Copland's "Symphonic Ode" and Schumann's Second Symphony.

Sixth Week-End: For us, this week-end started on Aug. 9 with Tanglewood on Parade, a marvelous affair that began at 4:00 p.m. with scenes from various operas performed by Boris Goldovsky's opera department, and ended at 11:00 p.m. with Ravel's "Bolero" by the Boston Pops. At 5:45 p.m., the fanfare by a group from the orchestra department summoned people to the outdoor dais where Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the Berkshire Music Center, welcomed everyone to the event. Then we scattered, for simultaneously, the orchestra, opera and composition departments were displaying their wares. At 7:00 p.m., many of us picnicked on the lawn and were serenaded by Hugh Ross's Choral department, in which several student conductors took charge for one or more selections. We were very much impressed with the students of the Music Center, who number 400, and who are 18 years of age and up—no top limit. We spent most of the time in the composition department, and thought the work there was outstanding. At 8:15, there was the Gala Concert in the Shed: Eleazar de Carvalho conducted Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Russian Easter," and Villa-Lobos Chorus No. 10. The Villa-Lobos was particularly good, and the strong rhythms set us all vibrating in time. Then Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra played Rossini-Respighi's "La Boutique Fantasque," Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as the electric soloist, and, as we said before, Ravel's "Bolero." There was plenty of wonderful music-making during the rest of the week-end. On Aug. 10, Dr. Munch conducted an orchestral program, with works by Haydn, Piston, Strauss and Dukas. Aug. 11, Pierre Monteux featured the Brahms Third, with shorter works by Freed, Enesco and Richard Strauss. We thought the piece de resistance of the week-end was Dr. Munch's interpretation of the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony. It rang with sincerity and integrity, and fully conveyed to us the depth of meaning of this immortal masterpiece. The program also contained scenes from Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," but we did not find this as satisfactory, for there was not a proper balance between the voices of James Pease, Albert Da Costa, Marguerite Willauer and the orchestra. The instruments sounded marvelous, but the voices were drowned out much of the time.

Summary: First of all, we marveled anew at the wonderful acoustics in the Shed. Secondly, the musical fare was fully up to the standard of indoor winter events. But added to this was the beautiful atmosphere at Tanglewood. We also want to make special note of the contemporary music presented. Except for the final concert, every concert played by the full Boston Symphony in the Shed had at least one work of the 20th century, and five works newly-composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony received their Tanglewood premieres. These were the "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6) by Bohuslav Martinu; Goffredo Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra No. 5; Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony; and the Symphony Ode by Aaron Copland. In all, it was a splendid summer festival. For information about the 1957 Berkshire Festival or the Berkshire Music Center, write to the Boston Symphony, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
OCT 1956

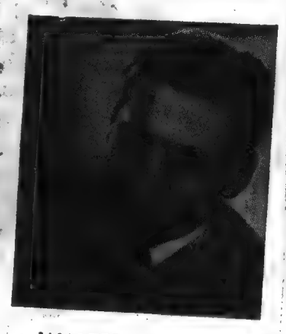
C

New Menotti Opera for TV

Gian-Carlo Menotti has accepted another commission from the National Broadcasting Company to compose an opera for television. The opera is to be one hour to an hour and one-half in length. Menotti has agreed to deliver the work before Aug. 31, 1957.

Other NBC News

The concluding broadcasts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as transcribed at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, were offered on Sept. 19 and 26. Charles Munch conducted both concerts. The first of these broadcasts was devoted to the works of Debussy and Ravel, the second featured Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.



WALTER H. STERN

"A Man and His Music," presenting concerts in classical and traditional music in an informal, variety program format, was the Sept. 3 presentation of WRCA-TV's experimental program series "Television Workshop." Among the artists who appeared were mezzo-soprano Martha Lipton, duo-pianists Whittemore and Lowe, and Skitch Henderson, pianist in the lighter vein.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will return to the air on NBC radio beginning Oct. 3. This season Mr. Munch will be joined by the following guest conductors: Richard Burgin, Arthur Fiedler, Ernest Ansermet, Pierre Monteux, and Leonard Bernstein. Among the soloists scheduled to appear with the Bostonians are Rudolf Serkin, Mischa Elman, Aldo Ciccolini, Eugene Istomin, Artur Rubinstein, Leonard Rose and Zino Francescatti. A highlight of the series will be a performance of the "Requiem" by Gabriel Faure.

Around the Globe with CBS

The Bach Festival of Ansbach, Germany, was heard for the first time on American radio, when its all-Bach program was broadcast on "World Music Festivals," with James Fassett as music commentator, on Sept. 25. The series this month began with a broadcast on Sept. 4 from the Peninsula Festival at Fish Creek, in northern Wisconsin. There Thor Johnson conducted the Peninsula Festival Orchestra, with the young Illinois pianist, Mayne Miller, and the Canadian soprano, Lois Marshall, as soloists. On Sept. 11, excerpts from the Red Rocks Festival, near Denver, were heard on the series. Saul Caston conducted the Denver Symphony Orchestra, with Richard Tucker, tenor, and pianist Jorge Bolet, as soloists.

New WQXR Series

"The Sound of Genius" is a new weekly WQXR series which will show great music personalities rehearsing and then in finished performance. Each program will also present Goddard Lieberson, executive vice president of the sponsoring Columbia Records, Inc., in what has been termed "Aisle Sitter Essays, far-from-serious commentaries on music and musicians." Bruno Walter was the featured genius on the opening program Sept. 28. It took [illegible] to the recording session where Dr. Walter and the Columbia Symphony Orchestra rehearsed for the finished performance of Mozart's Symphony

The Association of German Broadcasters, representing eight community-controlled networks in West Germany, will begin a series of musical programs over WQXR which will afford listeners a view of the whole range of German music from the old masters to the contemporary composers. The weekly series will be known as "Music from Germany."

"Orchestral Capitals of the World," a new series which will take listeners each week to the home of a world-famous orchestra, began over WQXR on Sept. 2. The Paris Conservatory Orchestra led off in the series, followed by the Danish State Radio Orchestra in Copenhagen, the Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orchestra, the Pittsburgh Symphony and the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra of London.

[288]

New York

(Continued from page 2)

ber Boston Symphony played two wholly orchestral programs: On Friday, Dr. Munch conducted works by Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms; on July 22, Pierre Monteux conducted works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert. On Saturday night, July 21, however, the second half of the program was devoted to a concert version of the first act of "Die Walkure." Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass, were soloists, with Dr. Munch again conducting. In complete contrast, the first half of the program was devoted to contemporary music, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies.

Fourth Week-End: Dr. Munch's program on July 27 included the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, Italian composer who was guest teacher of composition this season at the Berkshire Music Center, the Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5. There were also works by Beethoven and Tschaikowsky. On July 28, Dr. Munch conducted a varied program, including works by Hanson, Honegger and Debussy, but the highlight of the program was the Schuman Piano Concerto, which was played to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. Rudolf Serkin was the soloist, and though superlatives are sometimes dangerous we must say that we cannot think of anyone who can do this lyrical work more beautifully. On July 29, Richard Burgin, who is the concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, was exceptionally fine in the role of conductor. And the conductor was no doubt proud of Ruth Posselt (privately Mrs. Burgin), who gave an effective performance of Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin also gave musical interpretations of Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Suite No. 2 and Mahler's First Symphony.

Fifth Week-End: Three conductors led the Boston Symphony this week-end. On Aug. 3, Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, was in charge. Mr. de Carvalho has also been acting as head of the Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting, in place of Leonard Bernstein who is on sabbatical. The program included Ravel's Piano Concerto, with Jocy de Oliveira as soloist, the complete ballet "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky, and works by Barraud and Falla. On Aug. 4, Leonard Bernstein conducted. Mr. Bernstein devoted his concert as a memorial to the former conductor of Boston Symphony, Serge Koussevitzky. He selected Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the U. S., and the Mozart Mass in C minor (K.427), Kyrie and Gloria, in its Tanglewood premiere, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein's interpretations were deeply emotional and vigorous in their extremes of expression. Zino Francescatti was soloist, under Dr. Munch, Aug. 5, in the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto. Of course, Francescatti did a beautiful job, and Dr. Munch gave him sympathetic support. There was also the Tanglewood premiere of Copland's "Symphonic Ode" and Schumann's Second Symphony.

Sixth Week-End: For us, this week-end started on Aug. 9 with Tanglewood on Parade, a marvelous affair that began at 4:00 p.m. with scenes from various operas performed by Boris Goldovsky's opera department, and ended at 11:00 p.m. with Ravel's "Bolero" by the Boston Pops. At 5:45 p.m., the Fanfare by a group from the orchestra department summoned people to the outdoor dais where Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the Berkshire Music Center, welcomed everyone to the event. Then we scattered, for simultaneously, the orchestra, opera and composition departments were displaying their wares. At 7:00 p.m., many of us picnicked on the lawn and were serenaded by Hugh Ross's Choral department, in which several student conductors took charge for one or more selections. We were very much impressed with the students of the Music Center, who number 400, and who are 18 years of age and up—no top limit. We spent most of the time in the composition department, and thought the work there was outstanding. At 8:15, there was the Gala Concert in the Shed: Eleazar de Carvalho conducted Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Russian Easter," and Villa-Lobos Chorus No. 10. The Villa-Lobos was particularly good, and the strong rhythms set us all vibrating in time. Then Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra played Rossini-Respighi's "La Boutique Fantasque," Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as the electric soloist, and, as we said before, Ravel's "Bolero." There was plenty of wonderful music-making during the rest of the week-end. On Aug. 10, Dr. Munch conducted an orchestral program, with works by Haydn, Piston, Strauss and Dukas. Aug. 11, Pierre Monteux featured the Brahms Third, with shorter works by Freed, Enesco and Richard Strauss. We thought the piece de resistance of the week-end was Dr. Munch's interpretation of the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony. It rang with sincerity and integrity, and fully conveyed to us the depth of meaning of this immortal masterpiece. The program also contained scenes from Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," but we did not find this as satisfactory, for there was not a proper balance between the voices of James Pease, Albert Da Costa, Marguerite Willauer and the orchestra. The instruments sounded marvelous, but the voices were drowned out much of the time.

Summary: First of all, we marveled anew at the wonderful acoustics in the Shed. Secondly, the musical fare was fully up to the standard of indoor winter events. But added to this was the beautiful atmosphere at Tanglewood. We also want to make special note of the contemporary music presented. Except for the final concert, every concert played by the full Boston Symphony in the Shed had at least one work of the 20th century, and five works newly-composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony received their Tanglewood premieres. These were the "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6) by Bohuslav Martinu; Goffredo Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra No. 5; Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony; and the Symphony Ode by Aaron Copland. In all, it was a splendid summer festival. For information about the 1957 Berkshire Festival or the Berkshire Music Center, write to the Boston Symphony, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.

OCT 1955

C

New Menotti Opera for TV

Gian-Carlo Menotti has accepted another commission from the National Broadcasting Company to compose an opera for television. The opera is to be one hour to an hour and one-half in length. Menotti has agreed to deliver the work before Aug. 31, 1957.

Other NBC News

The concluding broadcasts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as transcribed at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, were offered on Sept. 19 and 26. Charles Munch conducted both concerts. The first of these broadcasts was devoted to the works of Debussy and Ravel, the second featured Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

WALTER H. STERN

"A Man and His Music," presenting concerts in classical and traditional music in an informal, variety program format, was the Sept. 3 presentation of WRCA-TV's experimental program series "Television Workshop." Among the artists who appeared were mezzo-soprano Martha Lipton, duo-pianists Whittemore and Lowe, and Skitch Henderson, pianist in the lighter vein.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will return to the air on NBC radio beginning Oct. 3. This season Mr. Munch will be joined by the following guest conductors: Richard Burgin, Arthur Fiedler, Ernest Ansermet, Pierre Monteux, and Leonard Bernstein. Among the soloists scheduled to appear with the Bostonians are Rudolf Serkin, Mischa Elman, Aldo Ciccolini, Eugene Istomin, Artur Rubinstein, Leonard Rose and Zino Francescatti. A highlight of the series will be a performance of the "Requiem" by Gabriel Faure.

Around the Globe with CBS

The Bach Festival of Ansbach, Germany, was heard for the first time on American radio, when its all-Bach program was broadcast on "World Music Festivals," with James Fassett as music commentator, on Sept. 25. The series this month began with a broadcast on Sept. 4 from the Peninsula Festival at Fish Creek, in northern Wisconsin. There Thor Johnson conducted the Peninsula Festival Orchestra, with the young Illinois pianist, Mayne Miller, and the Canadian soprano, Lois Marshall, as soloists. On Sept. 11, excerpts from the Red Rocks Festival, near Denver, were heard on the series. Saul Caston conducted the Denver Symphony Orchestra, with Richard Tucker, tenor, and pianist Jorge Bolet, as soloists.

New WQXR Series

"The Sound of Genius" is a new weekly WQXR series which will show great music personalities rehearsing and then in finished performance. Each program will also present Goddard Lieberson, executive vice president of the sponsoring Columbia Records, Inc., in what has been termed "Aisle Sitter Essays, far-from-serious commentaries on music and musicians." Bruno Walter was the featured genius on the opening program Sept. 28. It took listeners to the recording session where Dr. Walter and the Columbia Symphony Orchestra rehearsed for the finished performance of Mozart's Symphony

---

The Association of German Broadcasters, representing eight community-controlled networks in West Germany, will begin a series of musical programs over WQXR which will afford listeners a view of the whole range of German music from the old masters to the contemporary composers. The weekly series will be known as "Music from Germany."

"Orchestral Capitals of the World," a new series which will take listeners each week to the home of a world-famous orchestra, began over WQXR on Sept. 2. The Paris Conservatory Orchestra led off in the series, followed by the Danish State Radio Orchestra in Copenhagen, the Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orchestra, the Pittsburgh Symphony and the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra of London.

---

[258]

New York

(Continued from page 2)

ber Boston Symphony played two wholly orchestral programs: On Friday, Dr. Munch conducted works by Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel and Brahms; on July 22, Pierre Monteux conducted works by Rossini, Bartok and Schubert. On Saturday night, July 21, however, the second half of the program was devoted to a concert version of the first act of "Die Walkure." Margaret Harshaw, soprano, Albert Da Costa, tenor, and James Pease, bass, were soloists, with Dr. Munch again conducting. In complete contrast, the first half of the program was devoted to contemporary music, Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Martinu's Symphonic Fantasies.

Fourth Week-End: Dr. Munch's program on July 27 included the Tanglewood premiere of a work by Goffredo Petrassi, Italian composer who was guest teacher of composition this season at the Berkshire Music Center, the Concerto for Orchestra, No. 5. There were also works by Beethoven and Tschaikowsky. On July 28, Dr. Munch conducted a varied program, including works by Hanson, Honegger and Debussy, but the highlight of the program was the Schuman Piano Concerto, which was played to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the composer's death. Rudolf Serkin was the soloist, and though superlatives are sometimes dangerous we must say that we cannot think of anyone who can do this lyrical work more beautifully. On July 29, Richard Burgin, who is the concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, was exceptionally fine in the role of conductor. And the conductor was no doubt proud of Ruth Posselt (privately Mrs. Burgin), who gave an effective performance of Hindemith's Violin Concerto. Mr. Burgin also gave musical interpretations of Prokofieff's "Romeo and Juliet" Suite No. 2 and Mahler's First Symphony.

Fifth Week-End: Three conductors led the Boston Symphony this week-end. On Aug. 3, Eleazar de Carvalho, conductor of the Brazil Symphony Orchestra, was in charge. Mr. de Carvalho has also been acting as head of the Music Center's department of orchestra and conducting, in place of Leonard Bernstein who is on sabbatical. The program included Ravel's Piano Concerto, with Jocy de Oliveira as soloist, the complete ballet "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky, and works by Harraud and Falla. On Aug. 4, Leonard Bernstein conducted. Mr. Bernstein devoted his concert as a memorial to the former conductor of Boston Symphony, Serge Koussevitzky. He selected Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, which Dr. Koussevitzky introduced to the U. S., and the Mozart Mass in C minor (K.427), Kyrie and Gloria, in its Tanglewood premiere, with the assistance of the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Eunice Alberts and John McCollum. Mr. Bernstein's interpretations were deeply emotional and vigorous in their extremes of expression. Zino Francescatti was soloist, under Dr. Munch, Aug. 5, in the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto. Of course, Francescatti did a beautiful job, and Dr. Munch gave him sympathetic support. There was also the Tanglewood premiere of Copland's "Symphonic Ode" and Schumann's Second Symphony.

Sixth Week-End: For us, this week-end started on Aug. 9 with Tanglewood on Parade, a marvelous affair that began at 4:00 p.m. with scenes from various operas performed by Boris Goldovsky's opera department, and ended at 11:00 p.m. with Ravel's "Bolero" by the Boston Pops. At 5:45 p.m., the Fanfare by a group from the orchestra department summoned people to the outdoor dais where Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the Berkshire Music Center, welcomed everyone to the event. Then we scattered, for simultaneously, the orchestra, opera and composition departments were displaying their wares. At 7:00 p.m., many of us picnicked on the lawn and were serenaded by Hugh Ross's Choral department, in which several student conductors took charge for one or more selections. We were very much impressed with the students of the Music Center, who number 400, and who are 18 years of age and up—no top limit. We spent most of the time in the composition department, and thought the work there was outstanding. At 8:15, there was the Gala Concert in the Shed: Eleazar de Carvalho conducted Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Russian Easter," and Villa-Lobos Chorus No. 10. The Villa-Lobos was particularly good, and the strong rhythms set us all vibrating in time. Then Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra played Rossini-Respighi's "La Boutique Fantasque," Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F, with Jesus Maria Sanroma as the electric soloist, and, as we said before, Ravel's "Bolero." There was plenty of wonderful music-making during the rest of the week-end. On Aug. 10, Dr. Munch conducted an orchestral program, with works by Haydn, Piston, Strauss and Dukas. Aug. 11, Pierre Monteux featured the Brahms Third, with shorter works by Freed, Enesco and Richard Strauss. We thought the piece de resistance of the week-end was Dr. Munch's interpretation of the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony. It rang with sincerity and integrity, and fully conveyed to us the depth of meaning of this immortal masterpiece. The program also contained scenes from Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," but we did not find this as satisfactory, for there was not a proper balance between the voices of James Pease, Albert Da Costa, Marguerite Willauer and the orchestra. The instruments sounded marvelous, but the voices were drowned out much of the time.

Summary: First of all, we marveled anew at the wonderful acoustics in the Shed. Secondly, the musical fare was fully up to the standard of indoor winter events. But added to this was the beautiful atmosphere at Tanglewood. We also want to make special note of the contemporary music presented. Except for the final concert, every concert played by the full Boston Symphony in the Shed had at least one work of the 20th century, and five works newly-composed for the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony received their Tanglewood premieres. These were the "Fantaisies Symphoniques" (Symphony No. 6) by Bohuslav Martinu; Goffredo Petrassi's Concerto for Orchestra No. 5; Howard Hanson's "Elegy in Memory of Serge Koussevitzky," Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony; and the Symphony Ode by Aaron Copland. In all, it was a splendid summer festival. For information about the 1957 Berkshire Festival or the Berkshire Music Center, write to the Boston Symphony, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
OCT 1955

New Menotti Opera for TV

Gian-Carlo Menotti has accepted another commission from the National Broadcasting Company to compose an opera for television. The opera is to be one hour to an hour and one-half in length. Menotti has agreed to deliver the work before Aug. 31, 1957.

Other NBC News

The concluding broadcasts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as transcribed at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, were offered on Sept. 19 and 26. Charles Munch conducted both concerts. The first of these broadcasts was devoted to the works of Debussy and Ravel, the second featured Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

WALTER H. STERN

"A Man and His Music," presenting concerts in classical and traditional music in an informal, variety program format, was the Sept. 3 presentation of WRCA-TV's experimental program series "Television Workshop." Among the artists who appeared were mezzo-soprano Martha Lipton, duo-pianists Whittemore and Lowe, and Skitch Henderson, pianist in the lighter vein.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will return to the air on

A six concert series by the Symphony of the Air under Leonard Bernstein's baton has been announced, running between Nov. 9 and Apr. 18. Among works scheduled is a first New York performance of Bernstein's Serenade, with Isaac Stern soloist, on Apr. 18.

Apparently everybody who could, dashed to the assorted festivals held in Europe. Rise Stevens, soprano, was heard as Orpheus, Anna Tassopoulou of the Duesseldorf Opera took the part of Euridice, and Vilma Georgious, of the Met, that of Eros at the Athens Music Festival. Dino Yannopoulos of the Metropolitan, is managing the festivities . . . The Mormon Tabernacle Choir of Salt Lake City has been in the Netherlands, England and Germany. They sang to packed, enthusiastic houses.

The beginning of October will mark the start of the recital season in New York. An early one will be a solo recital by Anahid Ajemian, violinist. The program will feature the first American performance of Partita in A by Ulysses Kay, Prix de Rome winner . . . Lilly Windsor, soprano, whom we have not heard since her recital in Chicago in 1950, will give her second New York recital on Oct. 14. The program is composed of many lieder. Arpad Sandor is at the Steinway . . . The Brooklyn Philharmonia announced their second season under the baton of Siegfried Landau. The first program on Nov. 1 will be devoted to (you guess!) Mozart.

Opera is now spoofed in a new cartoon series on napkins. The brainchild of Alix B. Williamson, press agent for noted Metropolitan Opera stars and publicity director for Lewisohn Stadium Concerts and the New York City Opera Company. She has chosen arias from the most popular operas and worked "double-entendre" around them. Pas mal . . . We learn that Kenneth Allen and Jay Adams have joined forces. The two organizations will continue to operate independently, except that Mr. Allen will handle opera bookings for both firms.

The Association of German Broadcasters, representing eight community-controlled networks in West Germany, will begin a series of musical programs over WQXR which will afford listeners a view of the whole range of German music from the old masters to the contemporary composers. The weekly series will be known as "Music from Germany."

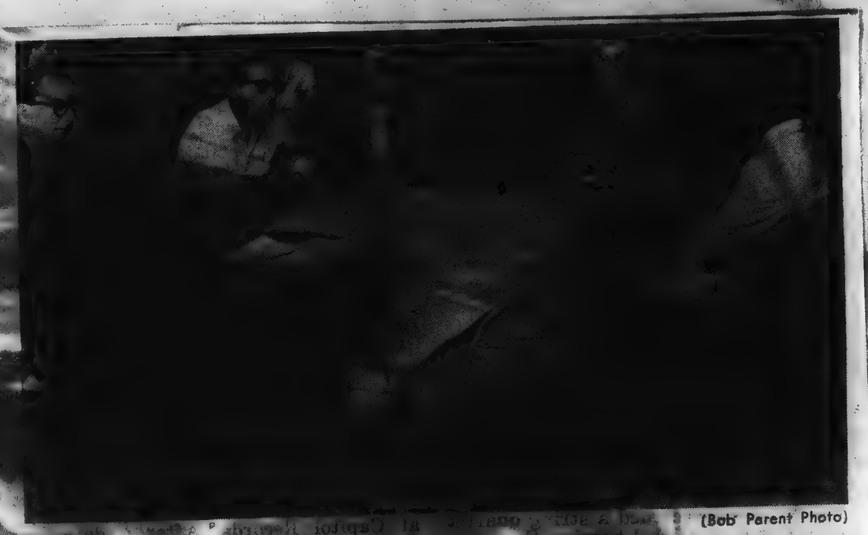
"Orchestral Capitals of the World," a new series which will take listeners each week to the home of a world-famous orchestra, began over WQXR on Sept. 2. The Paris Conservatory Orchestra led off in the series, followed by the Danish State Radio Orchestra in Copenhagen, the Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orchestra, the Pittsburgh Symphony and the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra of London.

[288]

DOWN BEAT
CHICAGO, ILL.

OCT 17 1956

Jazz At The Lenox Music Barn



(Bob Parent Photo)

Music Barn panelists here include moderators John McLellan (back to camera), John Mehegan, Max Roach, Wilbur DeParis, Oscar Pettiford, Bill Russo, Dizzy Gillespie (barely showing), Sonny Rollins, and Rex Stewart.

JOHN [illegible] Quartet inte[illegible] Sept. 2, at t[illegible] Music Barn sea[illegible]

"This past we[illegible] most exciting ev[illegible] know, the history[illegible] had panels of music[illegible] ing to each other [illegible] problems and makin[illegible] tion. This kind of [illegible] very rare for us. We [illegible] very seldom, and when [illegible] generally crying on each [illegible] ers, talking about no gigs a[illegible] But this week we talke[illegible] music."

Lewis was referring t[illegible] setting series of five pa[illegible] on all but one of which [illegible] were musicians only.

The panels were h[illegible] Inn, owned by Stephanie and Phil [illegible] ber, who also operate the nearby Music Barn, where concerts are held.

THE GUESTS AT the Inn, near Lenox, Mass., not allowed to participate in the panels, could listen if they chose. As a result the musicians didn't have to stop to define music terms, and each night appeared to forget at some time that there was an audience at all. Each panel lasted more than three hours.

Fortunately, all the panels were taped, and as soon as transcripts of the panels are available, edited portions of them will appear in Down Beat. These were the musicians who participated and the subjects they discussed.

Monday: Improvisation — Charlie Mingus, Milt Jackson, Dick Katz, [illegible] Giuffre, Pee Wee Russell, John Lewis, Sanford Gold, Oscar Pettiford.

Tuesday: Composition and Instrumentation — Bill Russo, Giuffre, Teddy Charles, Tee Macero, Quincy Jones, Lewis, Willie (The Lion) Smith, Oscar Pettiford.

Wednesday: Rhythm — Price, Connie Kay, Percy Heath, Katz, Wilbur De Paris, Ray Brown, Max Roach, Giuffre.

Thursday: Instrumental Tradition and the Development of Instrumental Techniques — Rex Stewart, Sonny Rollins, Roach, De Paris, Russo, John Mehegan, John (Dizzy) Gillespie, Pettiford.

Friday: Jazz and Its Audience — Communication — Gillespie, Willis Conover, Pete Cameron, De Paris, George Wein, Morris Levy, Russo, Leonard Feather, Nesuhi Ertegun.

Conover of the Voice of America moderated the first three panels. John McLellan of WHDH in Boston moderated the fourth, and Bill Coss of Metronome was in charge of the fifth.

On Aug. 30 in the Music Barn a unique jam session was held, with all the proceeds distributed equally among the musicians participating. The session was unusual in its mixing of styles and personalities.

AFTER A SOLO recital by Willie "The Lion" Smith, the second set had Ruby Braff, Pee Wee Russell, and Wilbur De Paris blowing over a rhythm section of Max Roach, Ray Brown, and Sammy Price. Rex Stewart was added and a high point of the evening followed as Pee Wee Russell and Oscar Pettiford, backed by [illegible] and George [illegible] with the same rhythm section and a front line of the [illegible] eloquent blues duet.

[illegible] special project involved [illegible] Tee Macero, Giuffre [illegible], and Bill Russo in improvising a Body and Soul with no rhythm section for the opening and close. In between, Brown, Dick Katz, and Kay made up their rhythm team.

PETTIFORD ON CELLO, flutist Herbie Mann, Brown, Kay, and Katz then proceeded with their version of Body and Soul, to be played, Pettiford pointedly announced, with a pulsating beat and the melody."

Teddy Charles appeared and played a number with Giuffre, Kay, and Heath, plus a jamming piece with Katz, Macero, and Russo.

This singular concert ended with a set composed of Gillespie, Rollins, Milt Jackson, Brown, Roach, and Lewis. It was an unusual series of unexpected, spontaneous experiences. The concert was taped for the Voice of America.

A second more thoroughly planned concert took place Sept. 2. It was opened well by the Modern Jazz Quartet. An especial, fresh hit was scored by jazz dancer-choreographer Lee Becker with Jackie Walcott and John Foster. The three dancers turned out to be, as announcer Conover predicted, "three new instruments."

They danced to records of Gerry Mulligan's Bark for Barksdale, Dinah Washington's Love for Sale, Bud Powell's Un Poco Loco, the Modern Jazz Quartet's One Bass Hit, the drum section from the MJQ's La Ronde, and George Shearing's Tiempo de Cierro. The Becker group danced with pulsating lines, leaping, and mime-explosive humor, and pointed drama. One observer noted that they "made the music seem as if it were watching them."

MULLIGAN BROKE INTO his own set to declare: "I want to say something about Lee Becker. She kills me."

Gerry blew with wit and warmth accompanied by the Modern Jazz Quartet, and later with Giuffre added. The concert ended as Giuffre combined with MJQ in three new pieces, the most notable of which were Lewis' A Fugue for Music Inn and Giuffre's Fun, which begins with a smiling line and continues happily to develop in an unusual variety of color, dynamics, and structural humanity.

The foregoing chronicle of just one week at Music Inn and the Music Barn is all the more remarkable when viewed against the entire summer season there. The Barrons had been presenting a series of Sunday night jazz concerts at the barn beginning with Louis Armstrong June 17 and a corollary series of Wednesday night programs starting with Count Basie July 4.

Among others heard during the season—not [illegible] together in one "mammoth festival," but singly—were Chico Hamilton, Dave Brubeck, Erroll Garner, Duke Ellington, and others. There were also folk music concerts by artists such as Richard Dyer-Bennett and an evening of calypso, West Indian, and Cuban music.

AT THE INN, for the two weeks before the musicians' panels, there had been lectures by Marshall Stearns and Prof. Willis James on jazz and prejazz history; a seminar on Jazz as a Social Force with James, Stearns, Langston Hughes, the Rev. Alvin Kershaw, and literary critic Stanley Edgar Hyman; a talk about the culture of Pakistan by a visitor from that country, and a jazz quintet headed by Sammy Price.

—nat

DOWN BEAT
CHICAGO, ILL.

OCT 17 1956

Jazz At The Lenox Music Barn

(Bob Parent Photo)

Music Barn panelists here include moderators John McLellan (back to camera), John Mehegan, Max Roach, Wilbur DeParis, Oscar Pettiford, Bill Russo, Dizzy Gillespie (barely showing), Sonny Rollins, and Rex Stewart.

JOHN LEWIS' Modern Jazz Quartet interrupted the final concert, Sept. 2, at this summer's Berkshire Music Barn season to say:

"This past week has been one of the most exciting events so far in, as far as I know, the history of jazz. We've had panels of musicians, musicians talking to each other about their musical problems and making real communication. This kind of communication is very rare for us. We see each other very seldom, and when we do, we're generally crying on each other's shoulders, talking about no gigs and no money. But this week we talked about our music."

Lewis was referring to a precedent-setting series of five panels, Aug. [illegible] on all but one of which the participants were musicians only.

The panels were held in the Music Inn, owned by Stephanie and Phil Barber, who also operate the nearby Music Barn, where concerts are held.

THE GUESTS AT the Inn, near Lenox, Mass., not allowed to participate in the panels, could listen if they chose. As a result the musicians didn't have to stop to define basic terms, and each night appeared to forget after a time that there was an audience at all. Each panel lasted more than three hours.

Fortunately, all the panels were taped, and as soon as transcripts of the panels are available, edited portions of them will appear in Down Beat. These were the musicians who participated and the subjects they discussed.

Monday: Improvisation — Charlie Mingus, Milt Jackson, Dick Katz, Jimmy Giuffre, Pee Wee Russell, John Lewis, Sammy Price, Oscar Pettiford.

Tuesday: Composition and Instrumentation — Bill Russo, Giuffre, Teddy Charles, Teo Macero, Quincy Jones, Lewis, Willie (The Lion) Smith, Oscar Pettiford.

Wednesday: Rhythm — Price, Connie Kay, Percy Heath, Katz, Wilbur De Paris, Ray Brown, Max Roach, Giuffre.

Thursday: Instrumental Tradition and the Development of Instrumental Techniques — Rex Stewart, Sonny Rollins, Roach, De Paris, Russo, John Mehegan, John (Dizzy) Gillespie, Pettiford.

Friday: Jazz and Its Audience—Communication—Gillespie, Willis Conover, Pete Cameron, De Paris, George Wein, Monte Kay, Russo, Leonard Feather, Nesuhi Ertegun.

Conover of the Voice of America moderated the first three panels. John McLellan of WHDH in Boston moderated the fourth, and Bill Coss of Metronome was in charge of the fifth.

On Aug. 30 in the Music Barn a unique jam session was held, with all the proceeds distributed equally among the musicians participating. The session was unusual in its mixing of styles and personalities.

AFTER A SOLO recital by Willie (The Lion) Smith, the second set had Ruby Braff, Pee Wee Russell, and Wilbur De Paris blowing over a rhythm section of Max Roach, Ray Brown, and Sammy Price. Rex Stewart was added, and a high point of the evening followed as Jimmy Giuffre and Pee Wee Russell played a moving blues duet backed by Connie Kay, Oscar Pettiford, and George Wein. The first half ended with the same rhythm section and a front line of the sharply eloquent Stewart and Giuffre doubling tenor.

The equally provocative second half opened with John (Dizzy) Gillespie, Sonny Rollins, Pettiford, Roach, and John Mehegan. The quintet became a trio with Rollins, and George Morrow played Sonny's convincing jazz waltz.

A second special project involved composer-instrumentalists Teo Macero, Giuffre (baritone), and Bill Russo improvising on Body and Soul with no rhythm section for the opening and close. In between, Brown, Dick Katz, and Kay made up their rhythm team.

PETTIFORD ON CELLO, flutist Herbie Mann, Brown, Kay, and Katz then proceeded with their version of Body and Soul, to be played, Pettiford pointedly announced, "with a pulsating beat and the melody."

Teddy Charles appeared and played one number with Giuffre, Kay, and Heath, plus a jamming piece with Katz, Macero, and Russo.

This singular concert ended with a band composed of Gillespie, Rollins, Milt Jackson, Brown, Roach, and Lewis. It was an unusual series of unexpected spontaneous experiences. The concert was taped for the Voice of America.

A second more thoroughly planned concert took place Sept. 2. It was opened well by the Modern Jazz Quartet. An especial, fresh hit was scored by jazz dancer-choreographer Lee Becker with Jackie Walcott and John Foster. The three dancers turned out to be, as announcer Conover predicted, "three new instruments."

They danced to records of Gerry Mulligan's Bark for Barksdale, Dinah Washington's Love for Sale, Bud Powell's Un Poco Loco, the Modern Jazz Quartet's One Bass Hit, the drum section from the MJQ's La Ronde, and George Shearing's Tiempo de Cierro. The Becker group danced with pulsating lines, leaping and mime-explosive humor, and pointed drama. One observer noted that they "made the music seem as if it were watching them."

MULLIGAN BROKE INTO his own set to declare: "I want to say something about Lee Becker. She kills me."

Gerry blew with wit and warmth accompanied by the Modern Jazz Quartet and later with Giuffre added. The concert ended as Giuffre combined with MJQ in three new pieces, the most notable of which were Lewis' A Fugue for Music Inn and Giuffre's Fun, which begins with a smiling line and continues happily to develop in an unusual variety of colors, dynamics, and structural ingenuity.

The foregoing chronicle of just one week at Music Inn and the Music Barn is all the more remarkable when viewed against the entire summer season there. The Barbers had been presenting a series of Sunday night jazz concerts at the barn, beginning with Louis Armstrong July 1 and a corollary series of Wednesday night programs starting with Count Basie July 4.

Among others heard during the season—not jumbled together in one "mammoth festival," but singly—were Chico Hamilton, Dave Brubeck, Erroll Garner, Duke Ellington, and others. There were also folk music concerts by artists such as Richard Dyer-Bennett and an evening of calypso, West Indian, and Cuban music.

AT THE INN, for the two weeks before the musicians' panels, there had been lectures by Marshall Stearns and Prof. Willis James on jazz and prejazz history; a seminar on Jazz as a Social Force with James, Stearns, Langston Hughes, the Rev. Alvin Kershaw, and literary critic Stanley Edgar Hyman; a talk about the culture of Pakistan by a visitor from that country, and a jazz quintet headed by Sammy Price.

—nat

DYNAMIC CONDUCTOR—Charles Munch of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival in Massachusetts.

Two Great Conductors At Berkshire Festival

By LAWRENCE DAME

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. — Certainly one of the greatest pleasures in listening to some of the concerts of the Berkshire Festival this summer has been the chance of studying both Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and his old friend, Pierre Monteux, now 81 and still a wizard on the podium.

Two figures could hardly be less alike. Munch, now 65, a tall man with strong shoulders and thin hips who can be capable of intense dynamics when his baton waves, looks like a titan indeed against roly-poly, relatively plain and easy-going "Papa" Monteux.

Munch gives the impression of tremendous authority, actually "playing" upon the orchestra as though it were a single instrument, and often spinning into histrionic movements himself. Monteux, who directed his orchestra from 1919 to 1924, restrains his gestures, holds out his short arms to it lovingly and seems to wheedle what he wishes the members to do. Perhaps the days of fire have gone for him, but certainly the great knowledge is left, and "Papa" with his black dyed hair and snow white walrus mustache, can perform wonders without apparent effort.

Both conductors will go along with the air-steamer and train tour of Europe, including Russia, that starts for the Boston Symphony after the close of the Berkshire Festival Aug. 12. And both, the tall Alsatian who was a German soldier in World War One and the little Frenchman who has had a life of good works, know their European audiences extremely well. While some of the foreign critics may look down their noses at an American orchestra, as they did during the tour of four years ago, they can hardly impugn the musicianship of the two chiefs.

Munch, whose name means monk in Old German and who is a French citizen, has often said that being a conductor is a dedicated and even sacred profession. midst of a battlefield," he has declared. "You are Saint Sebastian exposed to the Roman arrows.

"If after 40 years of conducting you are still struck to the heart before every concert by fear and panic, if you feel this formidable transport of anguish still more intensely each time, you are still making progress . . ."

The tall, gray-maned conductor, who walks like a tired waiter to the podium and then becomes a creature of consummate grace and easy though vigorous movement, knows that he alone it is who must breathe life into the score, whose thought must radiate with such force that the players assume the same wishes and desires as he.

Thus, watching Munch is indeed like watching some artistic dynamo. Sometimes, as in the splendid "Roman Carnival" of Berlioz, one of his favorite composers, he slashes the air with his baton as though it were a saber and he were leading a cavalry charge. He will sweep the wand from a position well behind his right shoulder and the arc is followed nicely by his large but supple body. He jiggles it up and down frantically, and often he seems to jump into the air from the platform, his shoulders vibrating and his whole body diffusing new energy into the musicians.

The man can be gentle, too, as soft and subtle passages are called for. Thus we see that, with no disparagement of the great gifts of his late predecessor, Serge Koussevitsky, he is no autocrat at heart, but a dedicated musician whose heart and soul are attuned to great music and who conveys and lives the great thoughts of composers as best he can, in a sort of spiritual transport, while he is before the orchestra.

Koussevitzky was a disciplinarian, hard to approach haughty in manner. You sometimes feel that Munch is the same way when you see him at work. Actually, this lonely man, still attractive to the ladies, is shy, gallant when need be, tender and compassionate.

I happened to see him relaxed the other day. Cocktails were being served on the lovely terrace of my hostess' estate. Of a sudden a tall man appeared in the doorway. It was Munch.

"I have lost my way," he exclaimed in French, and like a little boy he walked swiftly, gracefully, to the lady's chaise-longue and sat on its foot.

"Can't I stay here a few minutes before going on to dinner?" he asked. So the great lion of the Berkshires, who could eat out every meal including breakfast, and who would kill himself if he accepted an eighth of the invitations, revealed himself to be a humble human being as well as one of the world's greatest musicians.

[290]

T. 56

MUSICAL AMERICA
AUGUST, 1956

National Report

(Continued from page 3)

year and a much happier affair. Frances Yeend in the title role was first rate in every way. She sang fluently with vocal beauty of high order and was a commanding figure on the stage. Ruggero Schileo, a newcomer, was heard to better advantage as Calaf than in "Rigoletto", and sang the role impressively. Elena Gesco, as Liù, was adequate in the role. William Wilderman's Timur was a fine portrayal. Frank Valentino, Virginio Assandri, and George Tallone as Ping, Pang, and Pong, provided effective moments. Carlo Moresco handled his major task with competent concern.

"Traviata" Opens Season

"La Traviata", which opened the season, June 30; "Madama Butterfly", July 7; "Carmen", with Risë Stevens, July 15; "La Bohème", July 18; and "Faust", July 26, received high ranking performances due to fine casts and authoritative conducting. Fausto Cleva conducted "Traviata", "Butterfly", "Carmen", and "Bohème"; Nicholas Rescigno conducted "Faust".

again a highlight, but he needs more experience dramatically. Mr. Cleva conducted.

"Carmen" on July 13 had Risë Stevens in the name role. Attendance broke all records for any season with even a group of attendees seated on a side section of the stage. Not the traditional Carmen, Miss Stevens displayed the sumptuous voice the role needs and the verve and beauty that make her Carmen outstanding. Charles Kullman was Don José; Helen George, Micaëla, both veterans in these roles here. William Wilderman's Zuniga and Mr. Bardelli's Escamillo were of major importance. Mr. Cleva conducted this performance, his last appearance of the season.

One of the most memorable "Faust" presentations on record at Zoo Opera was given July 26. New sets and staging made it a fresher pro-portrayal. Frank Valentino's Rigoletto, was distinguished by fine acting and persuasive singing. Ruggero Schileo, made his debut here as the Duke. His voice was beautiful in quality but uneven in scale so that the top register when forced mars the otherwise good impression he makes. Irene Kramarich was a lush-voiced Maddalena; Valfrido Patacchi, the Sparafucile; Marcelle Bolman and Lloyd Harris, an attractive Count and Countess Ceprano; Edward Doe, the Monterone; Wilfred Engelman, Marullo; Ruth Thorsen, Giovanna; and George Tallone, Borsa. Mr. Rescigno conducted.

Tristam; and John Alexander, as Lionel. Eleanor Knapp was a fine Nancy; John Brownlee, the Plunkett; and Wilfred Engelman, the Sheriff. Mr. Rescigno conducted. "Martha" is usually selected to attract the operetta lovers but as frequently happens what attracts one year fails to do so the next.

During the added week there were repeats, with cast changes, of "Butterfly", with Herva Nelli, Ruth Thorsen, John Alexander and Cesare Bardelli; "Bohème", with Miss George, Miss Lind, Mr. Conley, Frank Guarrera; "Turandot", with Herva Nelli singing the name role for the first time anywhere; "Traviata", with Miss Conner, Mr. Morell and Mr. Bardelli; "Carmen", with Regina Resnik, Miss George, Mr. Petrak, and Mr. Guarrera.

NASM To Convene In Cleveland

Cleveland.—The 32nd annual meeting of the National Association of Schools of Music will be held at the Statler Hotel here on Nov. 23 and 24. The two-day sessions will include a presentation by Howard Hanson, director of the Eastman School of Music, of ways and means of improving efficiency in teaching through audio-visual aids, use of radio and televison, and a new plan for reaching the talented student.

Academy Bought In Philadelphia

Philadelphia.—The Academy of Music in Philadelphia, one of the nation's oldest and most famous musical theaters, will be purchased by a new nonprofit corporation called the Academy of Music of Philadelphia, Inc. The corporation has agreed to pay $787,000 to the present owner of the building, the American Academy of Music.

Contemporary Motif Marks Programs at Tanglewood

By Miles Kastendieck

Lenox, Mass.—After concentrating on Berlioz and Beethoven respectively in the past two seasons, the Berkshire Festival reverted to a traditional pattern this year. When first announced, no motif dominated the programs. They were to constitute a series of weekends with the Boston Symphony in the Music Shed.

Then a last-minute change in a program for the first Shed weekend brought into focus the fact that a generous portion of contemporary music had been listed and that a feature of the concerts was the playing of five works commissioned by the orchestra for its 75th Anniversary. The highlighting of these had not been previously publicized. Could it be that calling attention to the scheduling of this much contemporary music might have made people hesitate to attend?

When the all-Wagner program for July 21 was changed to include Barber's Adagio for Strings and Martinu's "Fantaisies Symphoniques" in the first half, not only did the whole weekend acquire a more contemporary tinge but the first performances at Tanglewood of the available anniversary pieces consolidated the over-all pattern of the festival. The contemporary aspect was further enhanced by two concerts of modern chamber music presented in the Theater-Concert Hall under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation. Each program presented two compositions commissioned by the foundation.

Tradition dictated procedure for the first two festival weekends. The Bach-Mozart series in the Theater-Concert Hall adhered closely to these composers except for the program conducted by Lukas Foss during the first weekend. Charles Munch opened the orchestral series with an all-Mozart program on July 6.

The program listed the G minor and "Prague" symphonies, and the [291]

National Report

Clarinet Concerto K. 622, with Benny Goodman as soloist. Bad weather kept the crowd down to 2,051 in spite of curiosity about Mr. Goodman's performance. The famous "King of Swing" revealed his inherently musical nature as well as his technical mastery of the clarinet. He conveyed little of the flavor of the piece though he played the notes faithfully. It was a conscientious performance, admirably handled. Mr. Munch drove his musicians hard so that often the listener found it hard to believe that Mozart was the composer of the music being played. The good moments were infrequent and tenseness prevailed.

Cowell Premiere

Much more relaxed the next night, Mr. Munch conducted ingratiating performances of the "Haffner" Symphony and of the Sinfonia Concertante, with Ralph Gomberg playing the oboe, Gino Cioffi the clarinet, James Stagliano the horn, and Sherman Walt the bassoon. Neither Martinu's "Military Mass" nor the first performance of Cowell's "A Thanksgiving Psalm from 'The Dead Sea Scroll' ", which Hugh Ross conducted, were so well performed as they might have been because the Yale Glee Club did not appear up to form.

Mr. Foss placed three fine examples of contemporary music within a framework of Haydn's Symphony No. 86 and Bach's Piano Concerto in D minor, for the final concert on July 8. Irving Fine's "Serious Song: Lament for String Orchestra" revealed beautifully sustained melodic writing. Alexei Haieff's Divertimento had the wit, flavor, and style to delight the audience. Charles Ive's "The Unanswered Question" left its mystic imprint on the listener, who could only marvel at the originality of the composer almost a half century ago.

Functioning as both conductor and pianist, Mr. Foss excelled as pianist. His sculpturing technique fitted Bach better than Haydn. Indeed, his playing of the fast movements in the concerto proved so exhilarating that the audience cheered spontaneously at the end. The concert drew 2,167 people, about a thousand less than the night before. The weather was fine.

The Mozart concert that opened the second weekend featured Pierre Luboshutz, Genia Nemenoff, and Boris Goldovsky in the "family" program with which they had toured the country during this Mozart year. The works included the Concerto for three Pianos K. 242, the Piano Concerto K. 488, and the Concerto for two Pianos K. 365. The men took turns conducting.

Two Bach Concerts

Mr. Munch devoted the next two concerts to Bach. The instrumental program of July 14 listed the Second Brandenburg Concerto; the Violin Concerto in E, with William Kroll as soloist; the Suite No. 2, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as flute soloist; and the Suite No. 3. Conductor and soloists were in the vein, and the Bach enthusiasts turned out 4,530 strong. The next day brought the first Tanglewood performance of Bach's "Passion According to St. John", with Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Mac Morgan, and James Joyce as soloists. The intimacy of the performance stemmed from Mr. Munch's humility and reverence. Everyone responded to his feeling and created a moving performance. Mr. McCollum excelled as the Evangelist. For some strange reason the work was sung in German, whereas it is customarily sung here in English.

The Sheed concerts opened on July 20 with a thoroughly conventional program of Berlioz, Debussy, Ravel, and Brahms, played in typical Bostonian fashion under Mr. Munch. On the next night the Barber and Martinu contrasted strikingly with the first act of Wagner's "Die Walküre". Mr. Munch and the orchestra were in top form. The personal feeling that he can communicate came through the performances of the modern works and the theatrical intensity fired the Wagner, though he paced it somewhat deliberately. Margaret Harshaw gave an inspired performance as Sieglinde. Albert Da Costa gave a remarkable account vocally of Siegmund in his first performance of this role. James Pease revealed a new depth of voice and sense of authority as Hunding. The music surged richly through the orchestra.

Pierre Monteux conducted the Sunday concert featuring Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra and Schubert's Seventh Symphony. The precision that he extracted from the Bartok contrasted notably with the romanticism of the Schubert in two distinguished performances. The program opened with a lively account of Rossini's Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri".

Music by Britten, Copland, and Ravel was performed at the first Fromm concert. The commissioned works were Ben Weber's Serenade for String Quintet and Alvin Epstein's "Sabrina Fair", a suite for tenor, strings, and piano. Music by Barber, Milhaud, Petrassi, and Stravinsky was performed at the second concert. The commissioned works were Leland Smith's Quintet for Bassoon and Strings and Julian Orbon's "Himnus at Galli Cantum" (Hymn for the Crowing of the Cock). Epstein and Orbon were formerly students of the Berkshire Music Center.

—Miles Kastendieck

Joe Petrovec

At Tanglewood three eminent composers are on the faculty of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school. From left to right, Ingolf Dahl, who heads the Tanglewood Study Group; Aaron Copland, assistant director of the school; and Goffredo Petrassi, guest teacher of composition proved very popular, and Mr Ormandy urged the orchestra to give some of its tonally finest playing. Zino Francescatti performed the Violin Concerto with exceptionally brilliant style in the Tchaikovsky concert, and the conductor led the Fourth Symphony and "Romeo and Juliet". The Brahms concert had no soloist but drew well nevertheless, with the First Symphony, the 'Academic Festival' Overture, and the Variations on a Theme by Haydn.

Inge Borkh was Mr. Ormandy's soloist on July 19, singing with great power and almost inexhaustible vocal resource Beethoven's "Ah! Perfido", "Ozean, du Ungeheuer" from "Oberon", "Voi lo sapete" from "Cavalleria Rusticana", Strauss's "Cäcilie", and two encores, Lehar's "Eva", and Dvorak's "Songs My Mother Taught Me". Mr. Ormandy led the orchestra persuasively in his arrangement of Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D Minor, Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, and the suite from Strauss's "Der Rosenkavalier".

Marian Anderson was soloist with Mr. Ormandy on July 12, and a large audience of admirers responded to her art in Bizet's "Agnus Dei", "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" from "Samson and Delilah", Tchaikovsky's "None But the Lonely Heart", "Believe [291]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 1 & 1956

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL OF 1956 OFFERS MUSIC OF WIDE APPEAL

From early July to mid-August, 24 concerts of wide variety and appeal are scheduled in the 1956 Berkshire Festival sponsored at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Programs of chamber music will be presented in the Theatre-Concert Hall on six successive Wednesday evenings from July 4 through August 8. Among the performers already scheduled in this series are the Kroll String Quartet, Benny Goodman and the Boston Symphony String Quartet, the Brass Ensemble with Margaret Harshaw, the Beaux Arts Trio and Rudolf Serkin and the Boston Symphony Woodwind Quartet.

Six "Bach-Mozart" concerts will be performed in the Theatre-Concert Hall during week-ends, July 6-7-8 and July 13-14-15. Four will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, one by Lukas Foss and one by Boris Goldovsky and Pierre Luboshutz.

Mr. Munch, Pierre Monteux, Richard Burgin, Eleazar De Carvalho and Leonard Bernstein will direct 12 concerts by the Boston Symphony to be given in the Music Shed on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 20 throught August 12. The groups of dates for the Music Shed events are July 20-21-22, July 27-28-29, August 3-4-5 and August 10-11-12.

In addition to a distinguished list of soloists, the Festival will offer two outstanding choral groups, the Berkshire Festival Chorus, Hugh Ross, conductor, and the Yale Glee Club, directed by Fenno Heath.

Detailed information regarding dates, prices and programs to be presented can be obtained from the Berkshire Festival Office, at Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

A list of hotel or guest accommodations in the Berkshires can be obtained from the Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass., which, through the cooperation of local chambers of commerce and similar organizations, will endeavor to secure reservations for applicants.

The Berkshire Festival concerts, in their uniquely beautiful setting, annually draw many music-lovers from Connecticut.

CHARLES MUNCH

There will be little rest for the world-famed Boston Symphony this year between seasons. After the Berkshire programs, Charles Munch and his musicians will embark on a tour of Europe that will include concerts in Ireland, Scotland, England, Sweden, Finland, Denmark, West Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland and France. Thus will New England's leading orchestra wind up its 75th season — probably the busiest in its long life.

bones of his intelligent face were molded perfectly. My sister Camilla, two years older than I and engaged to be married to a brilliant but distinctly batrachian Yale man, had, on first seeing Rod, said, "If he's really going to be a doctor, the girl that marries him is in for trouble. What a practice he's going to have among women! Brother!"

I think I got this pressing need for high opinion from my father, who was a rich man of intellect and education but one of no vocation. Our life was sumptuous and orderly, and we lived it, in the winter, in New York and, in the Lake, and opening night at Central City; Daddy was a ritualist—each year, for example, he had the same four seats at Carnegie Hall for the Boston Symphony—and whether we liked it or not, we participated in his ceremonies. It had always bored Camilla and me terribly to go to the Science Lodge. The place was a dismal aggregate of log cabins, some of which were laboratories and lecture rooms and others Spartan living quarters for the faculty and for the dozen or so students—solemn, silent, myopic youths, who, we decided, must be even more solemn in the winter, at college, since remain within its sphere.

As soon as lunch was over, the scientists and their apprentices bolted for their microscopes and samples of pyrites—all except Dr. Menzies and Rod, who came with us to the hitching post where we had left the horses. As we sauntered through the red dust under the amazing alpine sky, I was breathless, filled with trepidation that I was going to do something clumsy and cause this paragon, who had not once looked in my direction, to despise me. So emphatic had been his immediate effect on me that, as if I had already committed

Buzzelle's
ESTABLISHED 1880
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 18 1958

THE MOUNTAIN DAY

WHEN I woke up that morning, in the fallow light before the sunrise, and remembered that the night before I had got engaged to Rod Stephansson, I could feel my blue eyes growing bluer; I could feel them becoming the color of the harebells summer, in the mountains of Colorado. The Grayson fortune, three generations old, founded on such tangibles as cattle, land, and cargo vessels, was now a complex of financial abstractions, the manipulation of which my father had turned over to bankers and brokers, since coming to the Lodge to study high-altitude vegetation and the mineralogy of moraines was their notion of a holiday; the boys we knew bicycled through France or fooled around on boats off Martha's Vineyard. Everyone, staff and students and guests, sat at one long table in the mess hall and ate fried beefsteak, dehydrated potatoes, canned peas,

I think I got this pressing need for high opinion from my father, who was a rich man of intellect and education but one of no vocation. Our life was sumptuous and orderly, and we lived it, in the winter, in New York and, in the which were laboratories and lecture rooms and others Spartan living quarters for the faculty and for the dozen or so students—solemn, silent, myopic youths, who, we decided, must be even more solemn in the winter, at college, since less, filled with trepidation that I was going to do something clumsy and cause this paragon, who had not once looked in my direction, to despise me. So emphatic had been his immediate effect on me that, as if I had already committed

These Gentlemen Say:

FOR CONCERTS
OPERA and THEATRE
VISIT EUROPE
IN THE FALL

J. M. McGann, Jr. — B. F. Lockwood

IT'S LESS CROWDED, TOO!

Now is the Time to Make Reservations — See Us

DAVIS-JACOBS TRAVEL SERVICE

99 PRATT STREET Telephone: CH 6-7221

CRUISES . TOURS . RESORTS

FOR WOMEN WHO WANT THE FINEST

Harry Fleischer's
I. MILLER SALON

HARTFORD
Pratt at Trumbull St
WEST HARTFORD CENTER
973A Farmington Ave.

FASHION IN SHOES AND ACCESSORIES

Your Downtown Ford Dealer

GENGRAS MOTORS, Inc.

The Best Deal in Town

VICTOR BORGE

Victor Borge, making his fifth appearance in the Bushnell Memorial, comes bearing a new honor. He has recently been knighted by the government of his native Denmark; the honor, from King Frederik IX and presented by Ambassador Henrik DeKauffman in Washington, was conferred upon Borge because of "his many contributions to his native Denmark".

Now an American citizen and a resident of Southbury, Connecticut (where he has a huge farm specializing in fancy poultry) Sir Victor Borge is being credited in theatrical circles with "rewriting the history of the road", during the four months since he completed a string of 849 Broadway performances. In cities across the country, that endless land stretching away from Broadway that is called "the road", he has been drawing tens of thousands of men, women and children who haven't seen an in-person performance in years, if ever. Nor are the results unsatisfactory boxoffice-wise; it has been estimated that the share received by the amazing entertainer from ticket sales in the first two months of his touring this spring amounts to over $500,000!

In all the history of show business there has never been an entertainer quite like Victor Borge, never an entertainer combining his talent as a virtuoso of the piano with rib-tickling wit.

General Manager . Irving Squires
Press Representative Hugh Becket
Master Electrician . Ralph Anecelle
Master of Properties . Ray Yowell
Master Carpenter Vincent Callaghan

Bushnell Prompter

VICTOR BORGE

with his

"COMEDY IN MUSIC"

Settings and Lighting by* Mr. Borge
Piano, Steinway

PROGRAM

1. FRANKLY
2. WE
3. DON'T
4. KNOW
5. WHAT
6. MR. BORGE
7. WILL
8. DO
9. BUT
10. WE'RE
11. SURE
12. HE'LL
13. KEEP
14. US
15. POSTED
16. FROM
17. TIME
18. TO
19. TIME

P. S. There is also an intermission . . . but only Mr. Borge knows when!

MAGNIFICENT RECORDINGS
ON COLUMBIA RECORDS

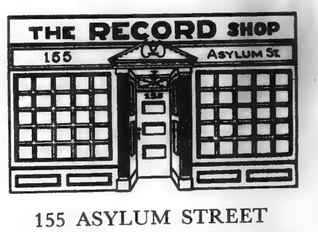
The fabulous
VICTOR BORGE

CL 554 Caught in the Act
CL 646 Comedy in Music
CI 2538 Brahms, Bizet, & Borge

ALL AVAILABLE AT YOUR ONE-STOP RECORD STORE



155 ASYLUM STREET
HARTFORD JAckson 2-6283

[292]

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 18 1955

STEINWAY
for Quality
Tone
Endurance

VICTOR BORGE
will be at the STEINWAY
★
BUSHNELL is equipped with
STEINWAY GRAND PIANOS
★
WATKINS BROTHERS
Exclusive Steinway Representatives
241 Asylum Street
HARTFORD
Hammond Organ Distributors

OTHER CITIES HELP PAY FOR CONCERTS IN HARTFORD

Reprinted from the Hartford Courant of Sunday, May 13, 1955

When a major symphony orchestra goes on tour, music-lovers of the communities visited are the direct beneficiaries of philanthropic giving in the orchestra's home city.

The production of symphony music is so expensive that no orchestra can hope to realize more than a part of its expenses from the sale of tickets for its concerts. The rest must come from recording royalties, broadcasting fees and privately or publicly contributed funds.

For example, some of the visiting orchestras presented in the Bushnell Symphony Series have operating costs more than twice as great as the income they receive from their sales of concert tickets. Some are fortunate enough to be receiving substantial royalties from their recordings, and income from broadcasting. But even with this additional revenue, it is necessary for these orchestras each season to seek heavy subsidies, and to draw upon income from endowments set up in earlier years through private philanthropy.

Philadelphia Story

The Philadelphia Orchestra is financed by public funds as well as private donations. Its 1954-55 budget, the latest published, shows a grant from the City of Philadelphia in the amount of $50,000. During the same season some 2900 Philadelphia individuals and business organizations contributed to the orchestra gifts totaling over $116,000. From an endowment fund contributed by Philadelphia citizens, the orchestra received during the season more than $73,000.

Without such community support, the cost of a ticket for a program by a major symphony orchestra would be sky high. Thus, when a Hartford music lover takes his seat in the Bushnell Memorial for a concert by Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra, his enjoyment of the concert is actually being subsidized to a considerable extent by the generosity of the citizens and the public treasury of Philadelphia.

In the same way, the citizens of New York, Boston, Cleveland and Minneapolis are making it possible for the symphony-goers of Hartford to enjoy the orchestras from those cities, without having to pay the full freight.

This is not a one-way deal, however. The major symphonies like to have a limited tour each season. The conductors and players enjoy appearing before appreciative audiences in other cities. Moreover, in many instances the managements of the orchestras guarantee their players a certain number of weeks of work each season. Inasmuch as the cost for the season is pretty well set anyway, the orchestra is thereby in a position to make some appearances in other cities after the home-city requirements have been met.

This is the situation which has enabled the Bushnell Memorial, season after season, for 27 years, to present to Hartford audiences, without any recourse to local subsidy the major symphony orchestras of the United States and Europe.

Bushnell Prompter

perfectly. My sister Camilla, two years older than I and engaged to be married to a brilliant but distinctly batrachian Yale man, had, on first seeing Rod, said, "If he's really going to be a doctor, the girl that marries him is in for trouble. What a practice he's going to have among women! Brother!"

I think I got this pressing need for high opinion from my father, who was a rich man of intellect and education but one of no vocation. Our life was sumptuous and orderly, and we lived it, in the winter, in New York and, in the

City; Daddy was a ritualist—each year, for example, he had the same four seats at Carnegie Hall for the Boston Symphony—and whether we liked it or not, we participated in his ceremonies. It had always bored Camilla and me terribly to go to the Science Lodge. The place was a dismal aggregate of log cabins, some of which were laboratories and lecture rooms and others Spartan living quarters for the faculty and for the dozen or so students—solemn, silent, myopic youths, who, we decided, must be even more solemn in the winter, at college, since

As soon as lunch was over, the scientists and their apprentices bolted for their microscopes and samples of pyrites—all except Dr. Menzies and Rod, who came with us to the hitching post where we had left the horses. As we sauntered through the red dust under the amazing alpine sky, I was breathless, filled with trepidation that I was going to do something clumsy and cause this paragon, who had not once looked in my direction, to despise me. So emphatic had been his immediate effect on me that, as if I had already committed

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York
NEW YORKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 18 1956

THE MOUNTAIN DAY

WHEN I woke up that morning, in the fallow light before the sunrise, and remembered that the night before I had got engaged to Rod Stephansson, I could feel my blue eyes growing bluer; I could feel them becoming the color of the harebells that were blooming now in August all through the pasture beneath my window, and I thought, Will Rod notice this change and how will he speak of it? For weeks, like a leaf turning constantly to the sun for its sustenance, so my whole existence had leaned toward Rod's recognition and approval of me, as if without them I would fade and wither. When I was alone and he was miles away from me, not thinking of me at all, probably, as he catalogued botanical specimens at the Science Lodge, I nevertheless caused his eyes to take in the way I brushed my hair or mounted my horse or paddled my little brother Davy across our lake and back in the canoe. And going farther, I would project us into the autumn, when our Western holiday would be over and he would come down from Harvard for a weekend in New York. I would, in my daydreams, receive him in a dozen different dresses and a dozen different countenances: now I was shy, now I was soignée, now unassailably cool and pure; sometimes I was talking in sparkling repartee on the telephone when he arrived, and sometimes I was listening to phonograph records; depending on my costume and my coiffure, the music was Honegger or Louis Armstrong or plainsong. Often, in the self-conceit of my love, I was so intent upon his image of me that I could not, for a moment, summon up an image of him. How was that possible! The mountain sun had turned him amber and had lightened his leonine hair; he was tall and lithe and sculptured and violet-eyed, and the bones of his intelligent face were molded perfectly. My sister Camilla, two years older than I and engaged to be married to a brilliant but distinctly batrachian Yale man, had, on first seeing Rod, said, "If he's really going to be a doctor, the girl that marries him is in for trouble. What a practice he's going to have among women! Brother!"

I think I got this pressing need for high opinion from my father, who was a rich man of intellect and education but one of no vocation. Our life was sumptuous and orderly, and we lived it, in the winter, in New York and, in the summer, in the mountains of Colorado. The Grayson fortune, three generations old, founded on such tangibles as cattle, land, and cargo vessels, was now a complex of financial abstractions, the manipulation of which my father had turned over to bankers and brokers, since money, as a science, did not interest him. He had zeals and specialties, but I think he spent his whole life worrying about what people thought of him; a man of leisure had become an anachronism. One time, when he came to visit me at college and I had been telling him about a close friend of mine who was going on to study law after she finished at Bryn Mawr, he said, "D'you know, Judy, if I hadn't been rich, I'd have been a bum." He was not ashamed of his millions—they were no fault of his—but he was ashamed that his life was not consecrated; he had no fixed orbit. And, in a different way, this unease of his had come down to me, his middle child.

But I wasn't thinking of Daddy that morning—it was only years later that I was able to arrive at this analysis—and when I thought of Camilla's reaction to Rod, I went back to the first time I had met him and reviewed all the stages of growth that had culminated the night before in his asking me to marry him. I lay straight and still and smiling, my eyes wide open, hearing the pristine song of the first meadow larks on the fence posts, and hearing the famished, self-pitying coyotes wailing up in the sage.

One day late in June, soon after our arrival in Colorado, Daddy and Mother and Camilla and I had ridden our horses over to the Science Lodge to have lunch with a friend of Daddy's—Dr. Menzies, a geophysicist from Columbia, who taught there in the summers. It was an annual expedition, like the trip to the glacier, and the regatta at Grand Lake, and opening night at Central City; Daddy was a ritualist—each year, for example, he had the same four seats at Carnegie Hall for the Boston Symphony—and whether we liked it or not, we participated in his ceremonies. It had always bored Camilla and me terribly to go to the Science Lodge. The place was a dismal aggregate of log cabins, some of which were laboratories and lecture rooms and others Spartan living quarters for the faculty and for the dozen or so students—solemn, silent, myopic youths, who, we decided, must be even more solemn in the winter, at college, since coming to the Lodge to study high-altitude vegetation and the mineralogy of moraines was their notion of a holiday; the boys we knew bicycled through France or fooled around on boats off Martha's Vineyard. Everyone, staff and students and guests, sat at one long table in the mess hall and ate fried beefsteak, dehydrated potatoes, canned peas, and canned Kadota figs, and drank sallow coffee with canned milk. Daddy and Dr. Menzies would fervently discuss some such thing as the wisdoms and the follies of foundations. Mother, who was a beauty and had no intellectual class consciousness, would try to talk about flower arrangement with the ecologists and the systematic botanists, who blushed and addressed their eyes to their food. And Camilla and I would flounder through the maneuvers of "Do you know So-and-So at Dartmouth?" or "Have you been up to Troublesome Falls yet?," and, for our pains, got monosyllabic replies, usually in the negative. Not one time, until this summer, had she and I found any of these young men worthy of comment; they were, indeed, so much of a kind and so stunningly dull that in our private language we had a generic term, "a Science Lodge type," to designate nonentities we got stuck with at parties.

And then, this year, sitting directly across the table from me was Rod Stephansson, so sudden, somehow, so surprising, that I averted my eyes, as if his radiance would blind me. He was as serious as the other boys, but he was not solemn, and he and Mother, in a conversation about Boston, which she knew from visits to our aunts and cousins there and he knew because he went to Harvard, so charmed each other that long before we had reached the Nabiscos and the viscous figs, she had invited him to our house for Sunday supper. He was sophisticated and funny and acute, but he was gentle, too, and mannerly. His smile, in which the responsive eyes played the leading role, made me giddy, but I wanted, nevertheless, to remain within its sphere.

As soon as lunch was over, the scientists and their apprentices bolted for their microscopes and samples of pyrites—all except Dr. Menzies and Rod, who came with us to the hitching post where we had left the horses. As we sauntered through the red dust under the amazing alpine sky, I was breathless, filled with trepidation that I was going to do something clumsy and cause this paragon, who had not once looked in my direction, to despise me. So emphatic had been his immediate effect on me that, as if I had already committed

"Don't move a muscle! I'll call the Parole Board."

INFORMATION OBSCURED

"Well, this certainly wasn't in the 'Come to Britain' advertisements!"

DAY coming to the L

disdain, shrugged my shoulders and said to myself, "Oh, to hell with him! He's nothing but a Science Lodge grind." But something quite else happened; when I had mounted Chiquita, my squatty little pinto cow pony, Rod took a blue bandanna handkerchief out of his pocket and, as if this were the most natural thing in the world, began to wipe the red dust off my boot and the edge of my jodhpurs, and when he was through—in my heady reveries later on I was to find it significant that he cleaned only one boot, so that my horse concealed him from the rest of the party—he looked up and gave me that inebriating smile and, in a secret voice, for my ears only, he said, "You'll be there on Sunday, won't you? You won't go off to Denver, or anything like that?" It never occurred to me to give him a flirtatious reply; I realized, with awe and with self-consciousness, that Rod had outgrown boyhood and the games of boyhood.

On the five-mile ride home, I was glad that Camilla and Daddy questioned Mother about him, because my voice would have come out as a croak or a squeak. Mother said he had told her that he was of Norwegian descent and came from Buffalo, and that he was going into his second year at Harvard Medical School. His family for generations had been landscape gardeners and horticulturists, and he had come out to the Science Lodge because, through his father, he had become interested in plant pathology ("He's very keen on viruses," said Mother), and Dr. Miles Houghton, eminent in the field, was on the staff this year. It was then that Camilla expressed her pity for the girl who married him, but Mother said, "I don't think he's in the least like that. His looks wouldn't mean a blessed thing if he weren't so awfully bright and nice. I think his character is very well put together."

IT was a storybook summertime romance, woven in the mountain sun and mountain moonlight, beginning that first Sunday when he came to supper and delighted everyone. All my senses were heightened, as if I had been inoculated with some powerful, sybaritic drug: the aspen leaves were more brilliant than they had ever been before, the upland snow was purer, the pinewoods were more redolent, and the gentle winds in them were more mellifluous; the berries I ate for breakfast came from the bushes of Eden. In love with Rod, I seemed to love my parents more than ever, and Camilla and Davy, and my grandmother, who summered in a house across the lake from us; I adored the horses and the dogs and the barn cats and the wary deer that sometimes came at dusk down to the salt

INFORMATION OBSCURED

"Cross my heart and hope to die."

• •

lick after the cows had been taken in.

Rod had never been West before, and because I had been coming here in the summer ever since my infancy, I was his cicerone, and took him to beaver dams and hidden waterfalls and natural castles of red rock, and to isolated, unmarked tombstones where God knew what murdered prospectors or starved babies were buried. We sifted the fool's gold of the cold streams through our fingers and we ate sweet piñon nuts; we rowed and rode and climbed and fished, and played doubles with Daddy and Camilla. No other young man—not even Camilla's Fritzie Lloyd, whom Daddy liked enormously—had ever evoked from Daddy so much esteem, and once he said, "He plays at everything so well and handsomely, besides having medicine and virtue."

Rod rose at dawn to study ergot and potato blight, but in midafternoon he walked over to our house, in long, easy strides. When he got to the foot of the broad steps that led up to the veranda, he was not out of breath or hot or exhausted. I, trembling inwardly and greeting him with a falsely cool "Hey, Rod," would think, If I tell him I have been reading "War and Peace," will he respect me?

For it was his respect, I suppose, that I wanted as much as I wanted his love. I wanted him to honor my judgments and my abilities as much as I honored his, but through some fortunate poise, inherited from my mother to counterbalance the doubt I had got from Daddy, I was not compelled to compete with him, as I often had to compete, to my grief, with boys whose unsureness of themselves made me arrogant. I must complement, not equal, Rod. Actually, I was not so uneasy with him as I sound; in his presence I was simply and naturally happy, and it was only when we were apart that I tried on different attitudes and opinions in search of the one he would like in me the best.

When August came and the holiday began to wane, I grew restive. In two weeks more, Rod would go back to Buffalo and I would go back to New York with my family, and soon after that we would be separated—we who had been inseparable since June—by a million light-years, he in Cambridge and I at Bryn Mawr. The night before, I had thought that if he did not speak in some way of the future, I would get sick. But I had set my sights so low that the most I had hoped for was an invitation to the Yale-Harvard think of a word

our hands at th anything unearthly than love at eighteen? It is like an abundant spring garden. My heart was the Orient, and the sun rose from it; I could have picked the stars from the sky; I could easily have flown.

THE evening had started out badly. Fritzie Lloyd had come on from St. Louis for a week's visit, and at dinner he and Daddy had had an argument about Truman's foreign policy that had unsettled everyone. My father was, except in one particular, the very mildest of men: politically, he was a mad dog, and someone who disagreed with him became, temporarily, his mortal enemy. As I have said, he was very fond of Fritzie and highly approved of him for Camilla, but that night, over the Nesselrode, when Fritzie suggested, at considerable length, that the British attitude toward Communist China was more realistic than ours, Daddy protested so violently that you would have thought he might at any moment go and get a gun and shoot to kill. Everyone, and Fritzie most of all, was frightened by his fuming, stuttering rage, and after dinner Mother, to get us out of the house and calm Daddy down with a game of cribbage, proposed that Camilla and Fritzie and Rod and I take the station wagon and go somewhere to dance.

The only place within miles was a squalid, dusty honky-tonk in Puma, patronized by subhuman ne'er-do-weels and old wattled trollops who glared hostilely at us when we went in; at the bar an ugly customer, very drunk, spat on the floor as we walked by, and with feral hatred said, "Goddam yearling dudes!" The reek of beer and green moonshine and nasty perfume, together with my grief that the summer was almost gone, harried me and made me hot and weak, and I was silent. Fritzie was morose and kept saying things like "I know which way the land lies with your old man, so why do I have to make him sore? Damn it, I like me pick the one going to make him take scunner to me?" And Camilla kept stroking the back of his hand and consoling him, telling him that of course he didn't have to go back to Missouri the next day, and that while she knew it had been an awful experience, she was awfully proud of his sticking to his guns, and he must stop fretting, because Daddy honestly was probably dying of remorse this minute and was the original hatchet-burier. Rod and I danced once—speechless, except at the very end of the jukebox record, when he said, his lips in my hair, "I wish when we went out it would be snowing." Snowing! He wanted the winter to come? I gasped and whispered back, "Oh, no! I love the summer," and he replied, "I know, but I love the snow. I love the Public Garden in the snow. The swan-boat pond, those trees . . ." And he drifted off into a musing reverie that excluded me. Soon after that, we went back home, in melancholy silence.

"Don't move a muscle! I'll call the Parole Board."

INFORMATION OBSCURED

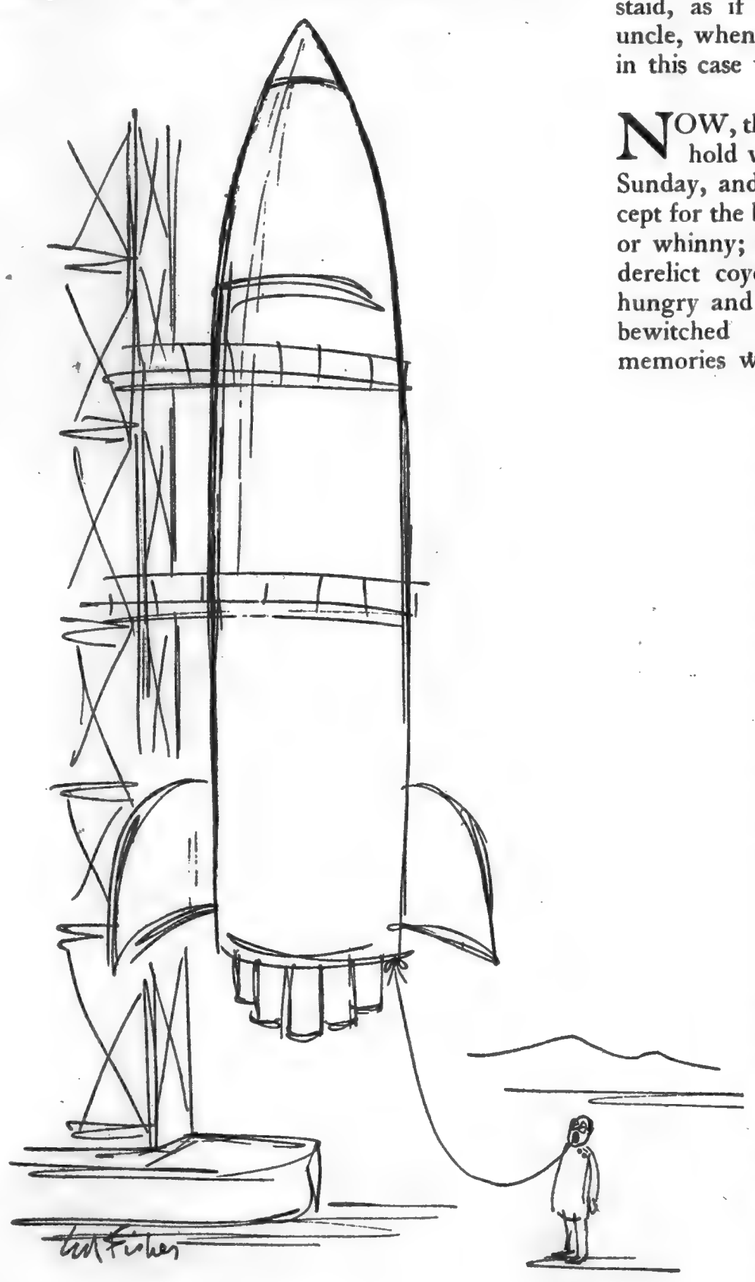
Mother and Daddy had gone to see Grandmother, and Camilla and Fritzie, cheered by Daddy's absence, went into the house to drink Jack Daniels, which they had just discovered, and which they talked about as if their drinks of it, on the rocks, were the insignia of a particularly lofty secret society. Rod wanted to go out on the lake, and as I was helping him put the red canoe into the water, my mood of sorrow left, and I was abruptly dreadfully excited and felt that all my nerves were pulsing.

At its widest, Daddy's lake was just under a mile, and it was so deep in places that whenever I took Davy out on it, I put him in a Mae West. It was a wonderful lake—limpid, blue, shaped like a heart. Daddy stocked it each year, and the rainbow trout that came from it were so beautiful they looked like idealized paintings of trout. Not far from the pier at Grandmother's house, there was a dense meadow of water lilies, and in the shallows near the shores tall cattails grew. But there were some horrid inhabitants of that lovely water, too—huge turtles and hellbenders, about which Davy sometimes had screaming nightmares. Rod and I paddled smoothly and languidly across to Grandmother's shore, and when we turned back, he said, "Let's sprint." The speed, our harmony, our skill, the spicy smell of the serviceberry bushes blooming along the bank, the stars, the lost, lorn, glamorous admonitions of far-off owls—these, and my love for Rod, required of me some articulation, for I could not bear the pressure and the tension of my experience. I might have screamed, I might have cried, but instead I began uncontrollably to laugh. It was my nervous system, not my mind at all, that initiated this uproarious giggling, which was immediately communicated to Rod. The lake had an echo, and we could hear our gagging, pealing "ha-ha"s coming back to us from all sides, but we managed, crippled as we were—aching, undone—to continue at the speed we had set and, still laughing, get the canoe to shore and up into the reeds and grass. We were spent. There had been no joke and I was a burst balloon. Now, in me, there was nothing but dejection, like a burden on my bones, and I lay down on the grass with my arms straight at my sides, as if I were lying in my casket.



And it was then, in the vast mountain hush, after our meaningless, visceral bout of mirth, that Rod asked me to marry him. Oh, the originality of my sensation! The uniqueness of this circumstance!

We heard Camilla and Fritzie talking on the veranda, and after a while we went up to join them, and to tell them that we were engaged. They seemed immeasurably old to me, for they had been through this delirious distemper so long ago, and they seemed kind and staid, as if they were our aunt and uncle, when, soothingly, they said that in this case we must have champagne.

NOW, the next morning, the household was sleeping late, for it was Sunday, and there wasn't a sound except for the birds and an occasional moo or whinny; the sun had risen, and the derelict coyotes had slunk away, still hungry and pessimistic. While I was bewitched with my treasures—my memories were as new and crisp and astonishing as Christmas presents—I grew restless and could not wait for everyone to get up. I wanted to talk to Camilla and Mother, I wanted to hug Davy, I wanted to rush across the lake in the outboard to embrace my acerb, Dresden-doll grandmother and tell her what had happened to me; she would quiz me and tease me and insult me for being so young, and in the end she would rummage through the bottle-green velvet reticule she always carried and give me something antique and precious—a tiny perfume flask or a set of German-silver buttons.

Rod was coming over at eleven, and he and Fritzie and Camilla and I were going up to the glacier. We would ride as far as the ruin of the Bonanza silver mine, and go the rest of the way on foot and have our lunch on the summit of McFarland's Peak, above the mammoth slope of ice. But that was eleven and it was only six! Is he awake, I thought. Is he trying to imagine what I'm doing? With his eyes following me, I got up and put on my pink quilted peignoir and went to the window to see what sort of day we would have for our excursion. It was going to be perfect; it was what my father called "a mountain day." The air was so clear and rarefied it seemed to be an element superior to anything terrestrial—an unnamable essence that had somehow made its way to our valley and our range from another hemisphere. The violent violet peaks stood out against a sky of cruel, infuriated blue, and the snows at timberline shone like sun-struck mirrors. There was no wind; the field of harebells was motionless; the dark-blue lake was calm, and the red canoe, bottom up in the reeds, gleamed in the pure light like a bright, immaculate wound.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

I dressed at last, changing a dozen times, trying first slacks, then Levis, then khaki frontier pants, then jodhpurs, next a red shirt, a blue pullover, a black turtleneck, a striped apache jersey; I did my hair in a ponytail, in a pompadour, in pigtails, and finally I brushed it out straight and let it hang loose to my shoulders.

As soon as I decently could, I went across to Grandmother's and had breakfast with her and told her about Rod. She was pleased; she said that Rod was an Adonis and that she saw no point in marrying if one couldn't marry a handsome man. She opened up that vast, obsolete bag of hers and gave me a gold pin in the shape of two clasped hands.

My grandmother's house was, in these wildwoods of Colorado, a remarkable incongruity, for while she loved the West—she and my grandfather, who died when I was six, had started coming out here when my father, their son, was a baby, suffering from asthma—she despised roughing it. She could not bear crudity or imperfection, and she constantly implored Mother and Daddy to get rid of our cowhide rugs and our flawed, bubbly Mexican glassware and our redwood furniture. Her own house, though its exterior was the same as ours—rambling and made of logs—was furnished much as her apartment in New York was; the Oriental rugs were second-best and some of the tapestry chair-seat covers were machine-made, but the total effect, nonetheless, was that of an oasis of civilization in a barbaric waste. Each year she brought her maids with her, and for the past two or three summers they had been two red-haired Irish girls, Mary and Eileen, who looked down their pretty noses at Mother's servants—local mountain girls who wore ankle socks and cardigans when they served dinner.

Grandmother was not a snob. It was simply that her nature demanded continuity. Her maids today were going to Mass in Peaceful Glen, twenty miles away, and were to be driven there by Bandy, our horse wrangler and general handyman. Mass was celebrated at the Glen only once a month, by an itinerant priest, who toured continually through the mountains and the plains to the sparse and widely separated settlements of Catholics. Like all such Sundays, it was a red-letter day for Mary and Eileen, and I could hear them in the kitchen, chattering as excitedly as girls going to a dance. Grandmother, a benign and understanding mistress, always gave them the day off after breakfast until it was time for them to prepare her tea, and she came to our house for lunch. After church, if the weather was good, the girls had a picnic beside the lake—an endearing, old-fashioned picnic, with a tablecloth and a wicker hamper. They were planning one for today, Mary said when she came in to clear away the breakfast things.

Grandmother told her that I was going to marry Rod. "That Viking lad," said Grandmother, and Mary, transfigured with happiness for anyone else's happiness, said, with her habitual lavish sentimentality, "It's as if it was my own wedding day. Oh, Miss Judy! May every saint and angel bless you!"

The rest of the morning somehow passed. Daddy had completely forgotten his wrath of the evening before and was talking baseball with Fritzie on the veranda while Mother and Camilla and I sat in Mother's bedroom and talked about engagements and marriage, and about Rod. Mother said, "What good girls I have, to pick out such extremely agreeable young men!" Finally, the last drop of the coffee in the pot on Mother's breakfast tray was

TAO IN THE PA...

(WHAT COMES OF READING CHUANG-TZ...

Distance brings proportion. From here, an inexpensive seat, the populated tiers seem a segment of the show:
a constructed stage beast, an allegorical rose,
or a Chinese military hat
cunningly chased with bodies.
Falling from his chariot, a drunk man is unhurt because his soul is intact. Not knowing his fall, he is unastonished, he is invulnerable.
He is the pure man. Pure,
too, is the undisturbed spectator.

It is not necessary to seek out
a wasteland, swamp, or thicket.
The old men who saw Hans Wagner scoop up balls in lobster hands,
the opposing pitcher's pertinent hesitations,
the sky, this meadow, Mantle's baked red neck,
the green slats, wet stone: appearances come to me as when an emperor commands a performance with a gesture of his eyes.

No king on his throne has the joy of the dead,
the skull told Chuang-tzu.
The thought of death is peppermint to you when games begin with patriotic song and a democratic sun beats broadly down.
The Inner Journey seems unjudgeably long when small boys purchase cups of ice and, distant as a paradise, experts, passionate and deft,
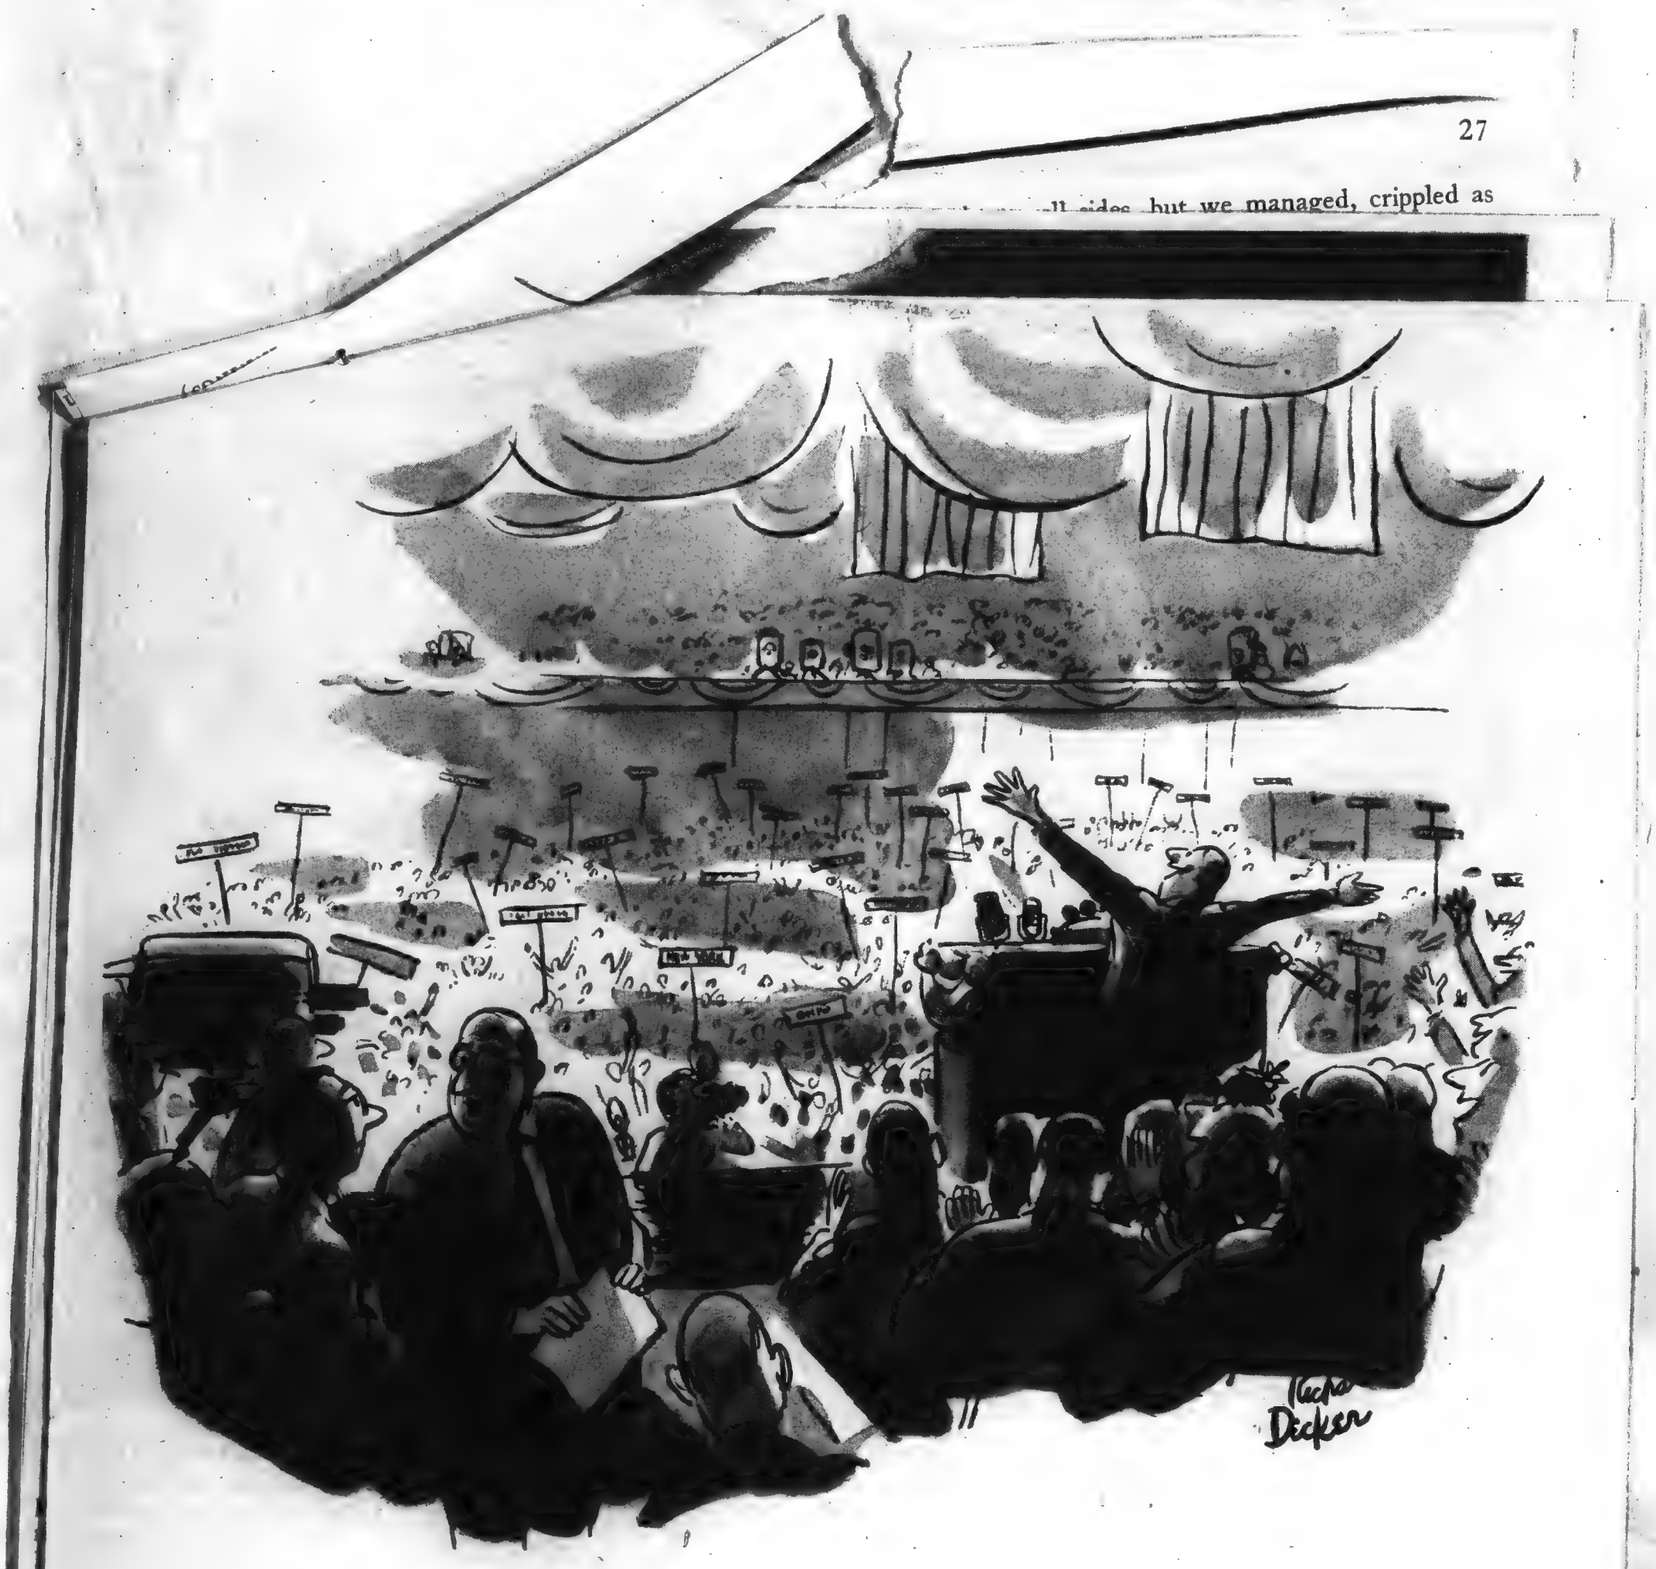
wait while Berra flies to left.

—JOHN UPDIKE

"Don't move a muscle! I'll call the Parole Board."

[292]

INFORMATION OBSCURED



"Do I need makeup to second a nomination?"

gone, and she got up and went to the window and exclaimed, "What a day, what a day! How I envy you pretty girls going off up to McFarland's with your beaux! Do you realize how important love is at this time of your lives?" She was ragging us, of course, as Grandmother always did, but she partly meant what she said, for there was the faintest note of the disappointment of maturity in her voice. "What a mushy woman you are!" said Camilla affectionately, and Mother said, "And what a cold, critical woman you are! Now run, the pair of you, and have the grandest skylark ever."

CAMILLA and Fritzie rode ahead and carried on an enthusiastic conversation. Fritzie was studying architecture at Yale, and Camilla was studying art at Vassar, and they were both extremely ardent and in the know; they were, besides, after nearly a year of being engaged, so comfortable with each other that their relationship was no longer an idée fixe. But Rod and I were shy and strained, and, I suppose, in a sense we were wretched. These early stages of love are an egg-treading performance, and one is stiff and scared; the day after betrothal is made up almost equally of hell and heaven. He told me at length and feelingly, as if he were talking about the death of beloved kinsmen, how blight had all but obliterated the chestnut trees in the Northeast; so earnestly did I seek to maintain our concord of the night before that I nearly moaned to hear his facts, and languished with the roots of those afflicted trees, and turned my face away from the disease spores disseminated by the wind, and with my whole heart hoped that the attempt to cross the American species of chestnut with the blight-resistant Asiatic would be successful. After this, a leaden silence fell. But gradually, as we ascended the faint trail through Indian paintbrush and columbines, and the air began to make us drunk, we were infected by the glory and the grace of the day and we relaxed a little. I had, indeed, been so rigidly controlled that I had got cramps in the calves of both legs. Finally, ready to cry out with pain, I told Rod, who at once became my doctor and my protector. We dismounted in a field of volunteer timothy, and he massaged my legs until the knots were gone; the gesture, in itself utilitarian, served to return us to our rapture of the night before, and we were able to meet each other's eyes.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

And now, much happier, we spurred our horses and came abreast of Camilla and Fritzie, and all the rest of the way to the mine the four of us had a general, factual conversation about New York restaurants, and Broadway musicals we had seen. To the unspoken relief of both Camilla and me, Rod and Fritzie obviously liked each other, and when they were hobbling the horses, we stood aside, praising them. Camilla said, "Rod really is a pet," and I said, "Fritzie grows on one. Last night when Daddy was being such a pain in the neck, I decided he was made of steel."

We had our lunch at the top of the world, sitting on saddle blankets spread out upon waxy yellow glacier lilies, which grew beside a snowdrift that some exotic bacteria had made the color of raspberry sherbet. We had cold fried chicken and tomato sandwiches and melon balls and lemony iced tea; it was unquestionably the best meal I had ever eaten in my life. I suddenly remembered Mary and Eileen and their picnic; they would be sitting among the wildflowers, eating dainty nasturtium sandwiches and telling each other spooky ghost stories in their delicious Dublin voices, and I thought, Everyone is happy today; this is the happiest day in the history of the world.

We dozed a little, all four of us, and drowsily watched an eagle banking and wheeling overhead as he scanned the earth for a jack rabbit for his lunch. We remained in this golden somnolence until a sharp wind riffled our hair and warned us that not long from now the sun would start going down. We gathered some of the lilies to decorate our bridles, and then we went slowly back to the horses, all of us quiet from our tranquil cat naps and our fulfillment and our unshakable faith in our future lives.

IN Colorado, almost every afternoon in the summertime the Devil briefly beats his wife; the skies never darken but there is a short, prodigal fall of crystal rain. When it came today, we made for shelter in a stand of spruce, and when it was over, in only a few minutes, and we emerged, we found a vivid rainbow arched over the eastern sky. The pot of gold must be in the middle of our lake, I thought, exactly where my paroxysmal laughter had begun last night.

"This is too much," said Fritzie. "This is overdoing things. It's a cheap Chamber of Commerce trick."

"I know," said Camilla. "This is the most embarrassing, showoff place in the world. It's like advertisements for summer resorts. Strictly corn."

By the time we came in sight of the clearing where Grandmother's house stood, the shadows were beginning to lengthen and the air was turning cold. Camilla, shivering, said, "Let's stop at Grandmother's for tea. If we play our cards right, she'll give us rum in it."

"I want Jack Daniels," said Fritzie. "I feel so good I want to get loaded."

"You can't get loaded in my well-bred grandmother's drawing room," said Camilla. "She loathes oafs. But she won't mind if you get comfy with booze."

I was hesitant. "Grandmother won't like us to be dressed this way for tea," I said, but Camilla overrode my finicking objection, and we followed her lead, going the rest of the way at a lope and enthusiastically agreeing that we were hungry and that we wanted the indoor amenities of a hearth fire and soft sofas. After we had dismounted, leaving the horses free to crop the grass, and were walking up the path to the house, I heard, from our house, across the broad expanse of water, the sound of the phonograph playing Daddy's favorite Mozart quintet; every stimulus that my senses received intensified the enraptured condition of my heart, which was palpitating now in anticipation of Grandmother's regal greeting to Rod.

Tousled and dusty, we tramped through the foyer, where stood a venerable grandfather clock and two ponderous Spanish chairs, and into the long, generous drawing room, where vases of columbines were everywhere. But there was no fire burning and the tea table had not been laid, and Grandmother, dressed in Sunday-afternoon taffeta, with a fichu at her throat, was pacing up and down, Grandfather's thin gold pocket watch in her hand. She turned to us with a look of consternation and appeal, and, forgetting, in her engrossing worry, to be a hostess, she said, "Did you come round the lake? Did you see Mary and Eileen? They were due back long ago!"

"No, we didn't come that way," said Camilla. "We've come down from the glacier. Don't you suppose they're just off looking for puffballs? They so love the nasty things."

Grandmother shook her head. "They're the most punctilious servants I've ever had. They wouldn't go roaming off without letting me know. I was taking a nap, but all the same they would have left a note."

"Maybe they went to sleep after their picnic," I said. "We did."

"Oh, I don't think they'd do a thing like that," said Grandmother. "Still . . ."

"Bandy brought them home all right?" I said, and when Grandmother nodded, Rod said, "Then they can't be far."

"We'll go and see if they went to

"Don't move a muscle! I'll call the Parole Board."

INFORMATION OBSCURED

sleep," said Camilla. "We'll find them, darling, never you fear. They've got to make us an enormous tea, because we're absolutely ravenous."

"We'll find them," echoed Rod reassuringly, and Fritzie said, "Don't worry, Mrs. Grayson. We'll be back with your girls in a minute."

"Good children," said Grandmother, and smiled at us, but then she looked fearfully out the window, where vermilion had begun to tinge the western sky. "Hurry, my dears, it'll soon be dark."

My grandmother's anxiety had not [illegible] infected us, partly because, being fearless ourselves, we were not afraid for anyone else, and partly because we were unwilling to relinquish our earlier carefree mood, and we started our walk around the lake in a spirit of sport, affectionately making fun of Grandmother for sending us out as a posse, as if the West were still wild and her maids had been scalped by Indians or were being held as hostages by road agents. We took the trail around the lake that was the longest way to our house, for Camilla and I knew that it was on this side, on a favorite plot of grass, that the girls always had their picnic; we had often seen them there. After they had come back from Mass, they would take off their perky, beflowered, beribboned hats and their white cotton gloves and their good shoes, but they would keep on their Sunday-best dresses for their light and ladylike collation. To Camilla and me, whenever we spied on them, they looked like an illustration in an old-fashioned romantic novel.

As we walked along, in single file, we discussed the many places they might be, safe and innocent, if we did not—as we were sure we would—find them snoozing in the dying day. Perhaps, all unknown to Grandmother, they had beaux, who had flattered and cajoled them into being late; perhaps they were bird watchers and could not tear themselves away from some fascinating rite of magpies; perhaps they had strolled over to the dude camp nearby and were watching an amateur rodeo; perhaps a dozen things. Punctilious as Grandmother said they were, they were bound to lapse at least once in a blue moon.

PRESENTLY, halfway around the lake, we came to that favorite plot of grass, where, sure enough, the Irish girls had spread out their picnic. Its corners neatly held down with rocks, the tablecloth with a pattern of tulips was neatly set for two with blue willowware plates and kitchen silver and jelly glasses; in the middle of the tablecloth there was a Dundee marmalade jar filled with Mariposa lilies. But the embossed-paper napkins had not been unfolded, the glasses had not been filled from the thermos, and the hamper had not been opened.

Perplexed and at last alarmed, we stood silent and unmoving for a minute, pointlessly scanning the immediate neighborhood, as if the maids were going to materialize before our eyes. It was Rod who spoke first.

"It does look queer," he said. "If they'd gone for a swim, they'd have come back by now. They'd have been starved after fasting for so long."

"Anyhow, they don't know how to swim," I said. "Neither one of them. Not a stroke."

"Then the lake's out, thank God," said Fritzie. "Or— They never use the boats, I suppose?"

Camilla and I exchanged a look of horror. Mary and Eileen were forbidden to use the canoe, but, out of their ignorance, they could not, would not, believe in the perils of the lake, and over and over again someone would catch them paddling, grotesquely maladroit, through the shallow water under the willow trees that lined the shore on this side.

"Oh, God!" cried Camilla, and she and I, with the boys at our heels, plunged down through the bushes that hid the water from us here, stumbling over the rocks and the willow suckers. When we got to the lake's edge, we saw the canoe immediately, away to our right, riding upside down in the mild wind over a deep spot in the lake, not far from shore.

"Where do you keep the outboard?" asked Rod. His voice, though it was urgent, was controlled.

"There's one at Grandmother's," I said. "That's nearest."

"Then come on!" he said.

AS Grandmother and Camilla and I stood by the dock watching the boys get into the outboard, it occurred to me suddenly that there was just possibly a chance that the poor, dear, clumsy girls had let the canoe go adrift after their guilty outing in it, and that—first debating for a while, dreading the scolding Daddy would give them for their carelessness—they had decided to go to our house to get help. Galvanized by this wild, ingenious hope, I ran off, saying nothing to the others, and this time I took the shorter path, on the other side of the lake. As I ran, I could hear the bee-buzz of the outboard and, faintly, from our house, the promise of peace of Bach's "Sheep May Safely Graze." Daddy seemed to be having a Roman holiday this afternoon, with all the music he fancied most. And as I ran, my mouth dry and my heart hurting, through the wavering, leafy patterns of sun and shade, my obsessed and egocentric mind began, in this crisis, to seek

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Rod's admiration, and I thought, What will he think of this practical, intelligent, well-thought-out act of mine? Dear God, let Mary and Eileen [illegible]! Let nothing have happened to them but Daddy's dressing down! Just then I tripped and twisted my ankle, and the pain was so sharp that it took my breath away, and, pausing for a moment in my surprise and shock, I was seized with a passion of self-loathing for wanting the girls to be alive chiefly because [illegible] would set me up [illegible] began to cry for the fair-[illegible] eyed Dublin girls, and then I [illegible] "Sheep May Safely Graze" still float[illegible] ed out serenely from our house, and a peaceful tower of smoke rose from our chimney. I prayed that in a minute I was going to see Mary and Eileen. But, instead, I saw Mother standing at our dock, and Daddy and Bandy starting out in our boat. The living-room windows of our house commanded a comprehensive view of the lake, as did Grandmother's, directly opposite, and Mother told me later that she had seen Rod and Fritzie in the outboard by chance as she was watering the terrarium she kept on the sill; she had gazed at them idly for some time before she sensed that something was wrong and called my father. He had gone immediately down to the shore and shouted at the boys, who shouted back what they were doing.

"Have they—" I began, out of breath.

"They've found them, yes," said Mother. Out on the lake, I could see Rod and Fritzie diving from the boat. "Come, Judy, we must go and break the news to your grandmother. They're going to bring the bod— They're going to come back to this shore."

"Where's Davy?" I said. "Davy mustn't see!"

"Davy's all right. Luella will keep him busy. Come now." And Mother and I started out briskly, our eyes on the ground, not looking again, lest we see the boys bring two pitiful burdens to the surface of the water.

When we got to Grandmother's, we found Camilla and Grandmother in the drawing room. Even before the boys had sighted the bodies, Camilla had gone back there, to comfort Grandmother and to take her inside and persuade her not to look at the lake. We found them both in front of the fire, which Camilla had lit, Grandmother huddled in a big chair, looking terribly old and enervated. None of us could think of a word to say; we kept warming our hands at the fire and listening to the loud ticking of the grandfather clock. An age went by before we finally heard both outboards coming to this shore.

WHEN the [illegible] men came into this silent room, their faces were stricken and sickened. My father went to his mother and put his arm around her shoulder, and she looked up at him supportingly and said, "How ever shall I tell their poor families? Ah, Samuel, we should have destroyed that canoe." My father bent down and whispered something in her ear, and she got up, weakly, and went with him into the next room. Daddy had taken her away to tell her, as gently as he could, what Fritzie told us now. Mary and Eileen could not have been in the water for more than a few hours, but in that time the hellbenders and the ravenous turtles had eaten their lovely faces and their work-swollen hands; no one, certainly no kinsman, must see them.

A heavy hush and torpor fell on all of us after we had heard this new piece of frightful intelligence. I wanted to busy myself—to turn on the lamps and dispel the murk of twilight, to straighten a stalk of yucca that was leaning gracelessly out of a vase, to prod the logs and make the sparks scintillate and snap. But my flesh was leaden, and I sat still. Once, I looked at my mother, sagging in her chair as inertly as the rest of us, and I thought, with a rush of sympathy, that living did not insulate one against shock. What must my gentle, humane grandmother be going through there in the library! How was she going to write to the girls' distant families of their death? And how, without going into the ghastly details, could she enjoin them not to open the coffins?

After a long time, Grandmother came back into the room and, mistress of her house again (though the bright unshed tears in her eyes and the quivering of her thin old hands showed that she was not yet mistress of herself), flicked the master light switch and went to draw the curtains, saying, as she did so, "By this time of day, I have had enough of the wonders of Colorado." Strengthened by her example, I got up now and attended to the listing yucca. There was a general stir in the room, and our voices were restored to us. Fritzie asked Camilla if she thought our horses would be all right, and she assured him that by this time they would have gone back to the barn and one of the men would have unsaddled them; Mother, going to the fireplace, asked Rod to help her return to its proper place one of the andirons that had shift-windows that [illegible] she pulled the curtains shut quickly, [illegible] shuddered and for a moment stood still, confronting the blank expanse of wine-red velours. As if she were alone, as if she were speaking to herself or to God, she murmured, "I won't come here again with innocents."

She turned around then and said to my mother, "Samuel and I have agreed that under the circumstances someone should personally explain to the girls' families what happened—Samuel will go to Ireland at once."

My mother said only, "He'll have no [illegible] sailing at this time of year," and my grandmother nodded, closing the subject of the sudden voyage.

My father came into the room carrying a tray of drinks, and Grandmother said, "It's cold; there's autumn in the air. Samuel and I decided that we all needed something to warm us on the inside."

It was the first time I had ever been given a real drink, and as Daddy handed me the glass, I thought, Is he being absent-minded or does this mean I'm accepted as grown up? I don't know which it was—the symbol of the whiskey, or my family's love for me and my love for them and my recognition of my security (I was thinking simultaneously of Mary's family and Eileen's, still ignorant of the crumbling of their solidity as they lived through an ordinary day in Dublin), or whether it was my grandmother's profound moral majesty which I saw for the first time, and admired, and wanted to achieve. Whatever it was, I found myself just then standing firmly on my own, and I was able to see everyone clearly—even myself. Earlier, in my blinding cocoon, when I had thought so constantly about Rod's respect for me, I had lost, in a sense, my respect for myself, but now, at last, I was able to think of him and not of his opinion of me. Bedraggled, my hair all wild, beggar's-lice on my sweater and my trousers, I did not care at all how I looked. I cared only, looking at the green pallor of his face, that he had suffered hideously. I wanted him to be as happy as he had been before we had started our search for the girls, and suddenly I thought, Love, real love, is just that: it is wanting the beloved to be happy. How simple!

—JEAN STAFFORD

•

Robert Mitchum's sister, Julie, has ditched singing to concentrate on a vocal career.—Hollywood Citizen-News.

She knows her own mind, anyway.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Rod's admiration, and I thought, What will he think of this practical, intelligent, well-thought-out act of mine? Dear God, let Mary and Eileen be there! Let nothing have happened to them but Daddy's dressing down! Just then I tripped and twisted my ankle, and the pain was so sharp that it took my breath away, and, pausing for a moment in my surprise and shock, I was seized with a passion of self-loathing for wanting the girls to be alive chiefly because their being so would set me up in Rod's eyes. I began to cry for the fair-haired, green-eyed Dublin girls, and then I faltered on.

"Sheep May Safely Graze" still floated out serenely from our house, and a peaceful tower of smoke rose from our chimney. I prayed that in a minute I was going to see Mary and Eileen. But, instead, I saw Mother standing at our dock, and Daddy and Bandy starting out in our boat. The living-room windows of our house commanded a comprehensive view of the lake, as did Grandmother's, directly opposite, and Mother told me later that she had seen Rod and Fritzie in the outboard by chance as she was watering the terrarium she kept on the sill; she had gazed at them idly for some time before she sensed that something was wrong and called my father. He had gone immediately down to the shore and shouted at the boys, who shouted back what they were doing.

"Have they—" I began, out of breath.

"They've found them, yes," said Mother. Out on the lake, I could see Rod and Fritzie diving from the boat. "Come, Judy, we must go and break the news to your grandmother. They're going to bring the bod— They're going to come back to this shore."

"Where's Davy?" I said. "Davy mustn't see!"

"Davy's all right. Luella will keep him busy. Come now." And Mother and I started out briskly, our eyes on the ground, not looking again, lest we see the boys bring two pitiful burdens to the surface of the water.

When we got to Grandmother's, we found Camilla and Grandmother in the drawing room. Even before the boys had sighted the bodies, Camilla had gone back there, to comfort Grandmother and to take her inside and persuade her not to look at the lake. We found them both in front of the fire, which Camilla had lit, Grandmother huddled in a big chair, looking terribly old and enervated. None of us could think of a word to say; we kept warming our hands at the fire and listening to the loud ticking of the grandfather clock. An age went by before we finally heard both outboards coming to this shore.

WHEN the three men came into this silent room, their faces were stricken and sickened. My father went to his mother and put his arm around her shoulder, and she looked up at him imploringly and said, "How ever shall I tell their poor families? Ah, Samuel, we should have destroyed that canoe." My father bent down and whispered something in her ear, and she got up, weakly, and went with him into the next room. Daddy had taken her away to tell her, as gently as he could, what Fritzie told us now. Mary and Eileen could not have been in the water for more than a few hours, but in that time the hellbenders and the ravenous turtles had eaten their lovely faces and their work-swollen hands; no one, certainly no kinsman, must see them.

A heavy hush and torpor fell on all of us after we had heard this new piece of frightful intelligence. I wanted to busy myself—to turn on the lamps and dispel the murk of twilight, to straighten a stalk of yucca that was leaning gracelessly out of a vase, to prod the logs and make the sparks scintillate and snap. But my flesh was leaden, and I sat still. Once, I looked at my mother, sagging in her chair as inertly as the rest of us, and I thought, with a rush of sympathy, that living did not insulate one against shock. What must my gentle, humane grandmother be going through there in the library! How was she going to write to the girls' distant families of their death? And how, without going into the ghastly details, could she enjoin them not to open the coffins?

After a long time, Grandmother came back into the room and, mistress of her house again (though the bright unshed tears in her eyes and the quivering of her thin old hands showed that she was not yet mistress of herself), flicked the master light switch and went to draw the curtains, saying, as she did so, "By this time of day, I have had enough of the wonders of Colorado." Strengthened by her example, I got up now and attended to the listing yucca. There was a general stir in the room, and our voices were restored to us. Fritzie asked Camilla if she thought our horses would be all right, and she assured him that by this time they would have gone back to the barn and one of the men would have unsaddled them; Mother, going to the fireplace, asked Rod to help her return to its proper place one of the andirons that had shift-windows that ga[illegible] she pulled the curtains shut quickly, s[illegible] shuddered and for a moment stood still, confronting the blank expanse of wine-red velours. As if she were alone, as if she were speaking to herself or to God, she murmured, "I won't come here again with innocents."

She turned around then and said to my mother, "Samuel and I have agreed that under the circumstances someone should personally explain to the girls' families what happened—Samuel will go to Ireland at once."

My mother said only, "He'll have no trouble booking at this time of year," and my grandmother nodded, closing the subject of the sudden voyage.

My father came into the room carrying a tray of drinks, and Grandmother said, "It's cold; there's autumn in the air. Samuel and I decided that we all needed something to warm us on the inside."

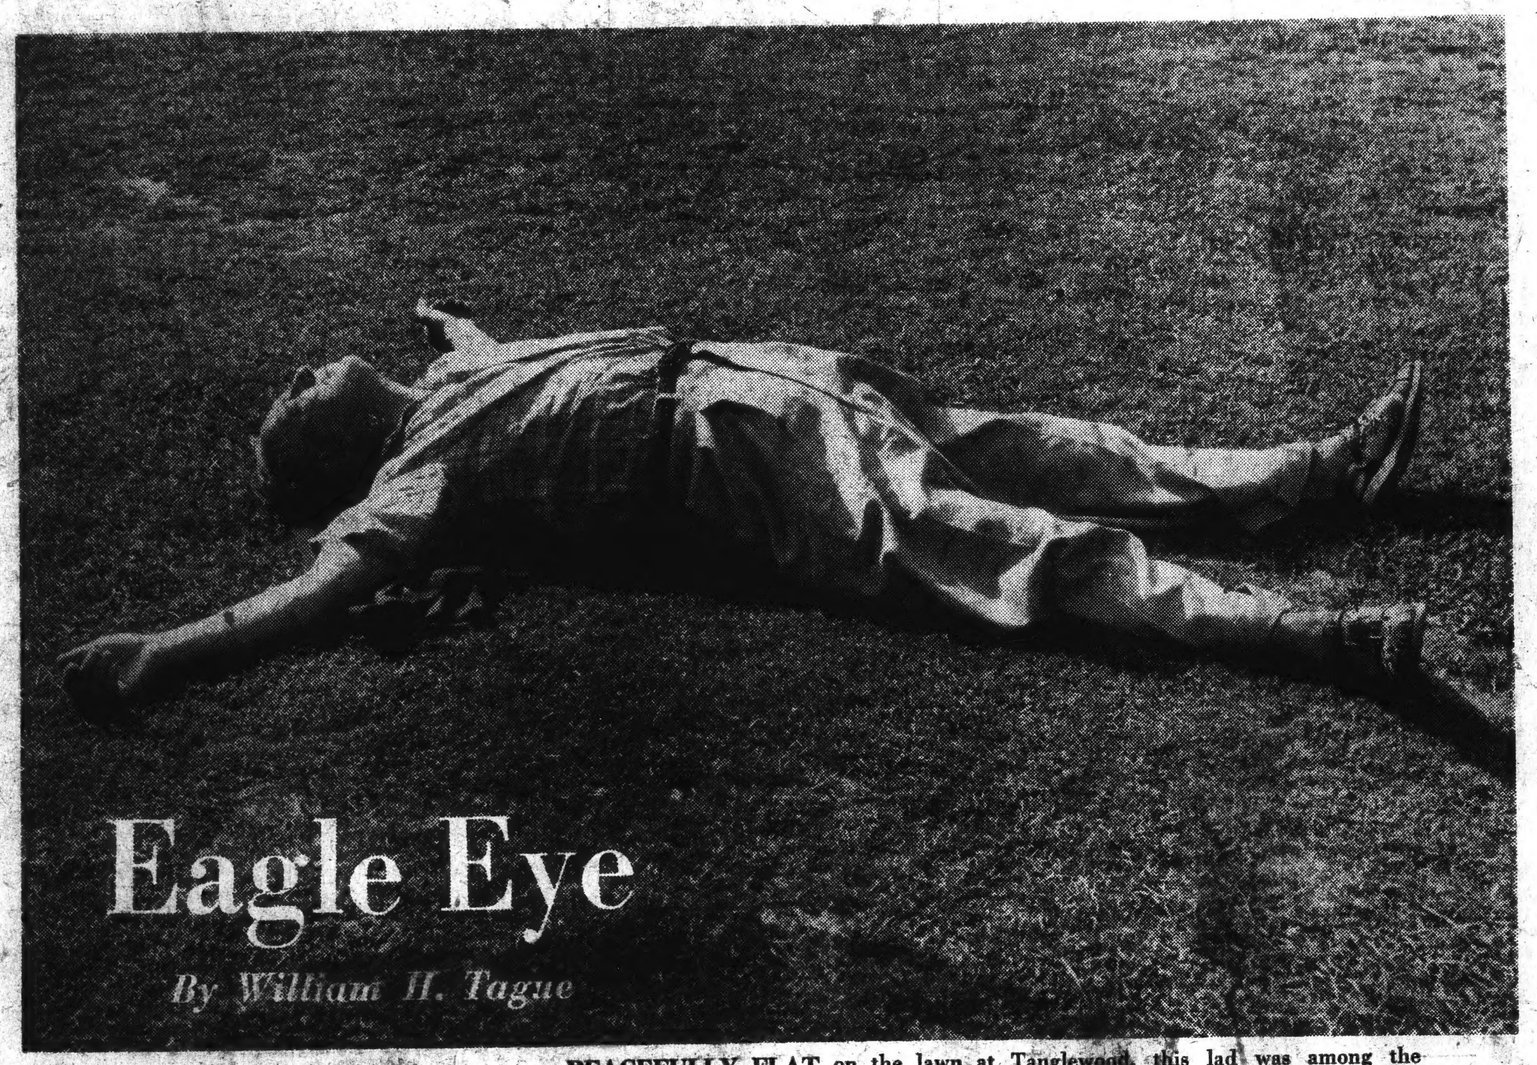
It was the first time I had ever been given a real drink, and as Daddy handed me the glass, I thought, Is he being absent-minded or does this mean I'm accepted as grown up? I don't know which it was—the symbol of the whiskey, or my family's love for me and my love for them and my recognition of my security (I was thinking simultaneously of Mary's family and Eileen's, still ignorant of the crumbling of their solidarity as they lived through an ordinary day in Dublin), or whether it was my grandmother's profound moral majesty, which I saw for the first time, and admired, and wanted to achieve. Whatever it was, I found myself just then standing firmly on my own, and I was able to see everyone clearly—even myself. Earlier, in my blinding cocoon, when I had thought so constantly about Rod's respect for me, I had lost, in a sense, my respect for myself, but now, at last, I was able to think of him and not of his opinion of me. Bedraggled, my hair all wild, beggar's-lice on my sweater and my trousers, I did not care at all how I looked. I cared only, looking at the green pallor of his face, that he had suffered hideously. I wanted him to be as happy as he had been before we had started our search for the girls, and suddenly I thought, Love, real love, is just that: it is wanting the beloved to be happy. How simple!

—JEAN STAFFORD

•

Robert Mitchum's sister, Julie, has ditched singing to concentrate on a vocal career.—Hollywood Citizen-News.

She knows her own mind, anyway.

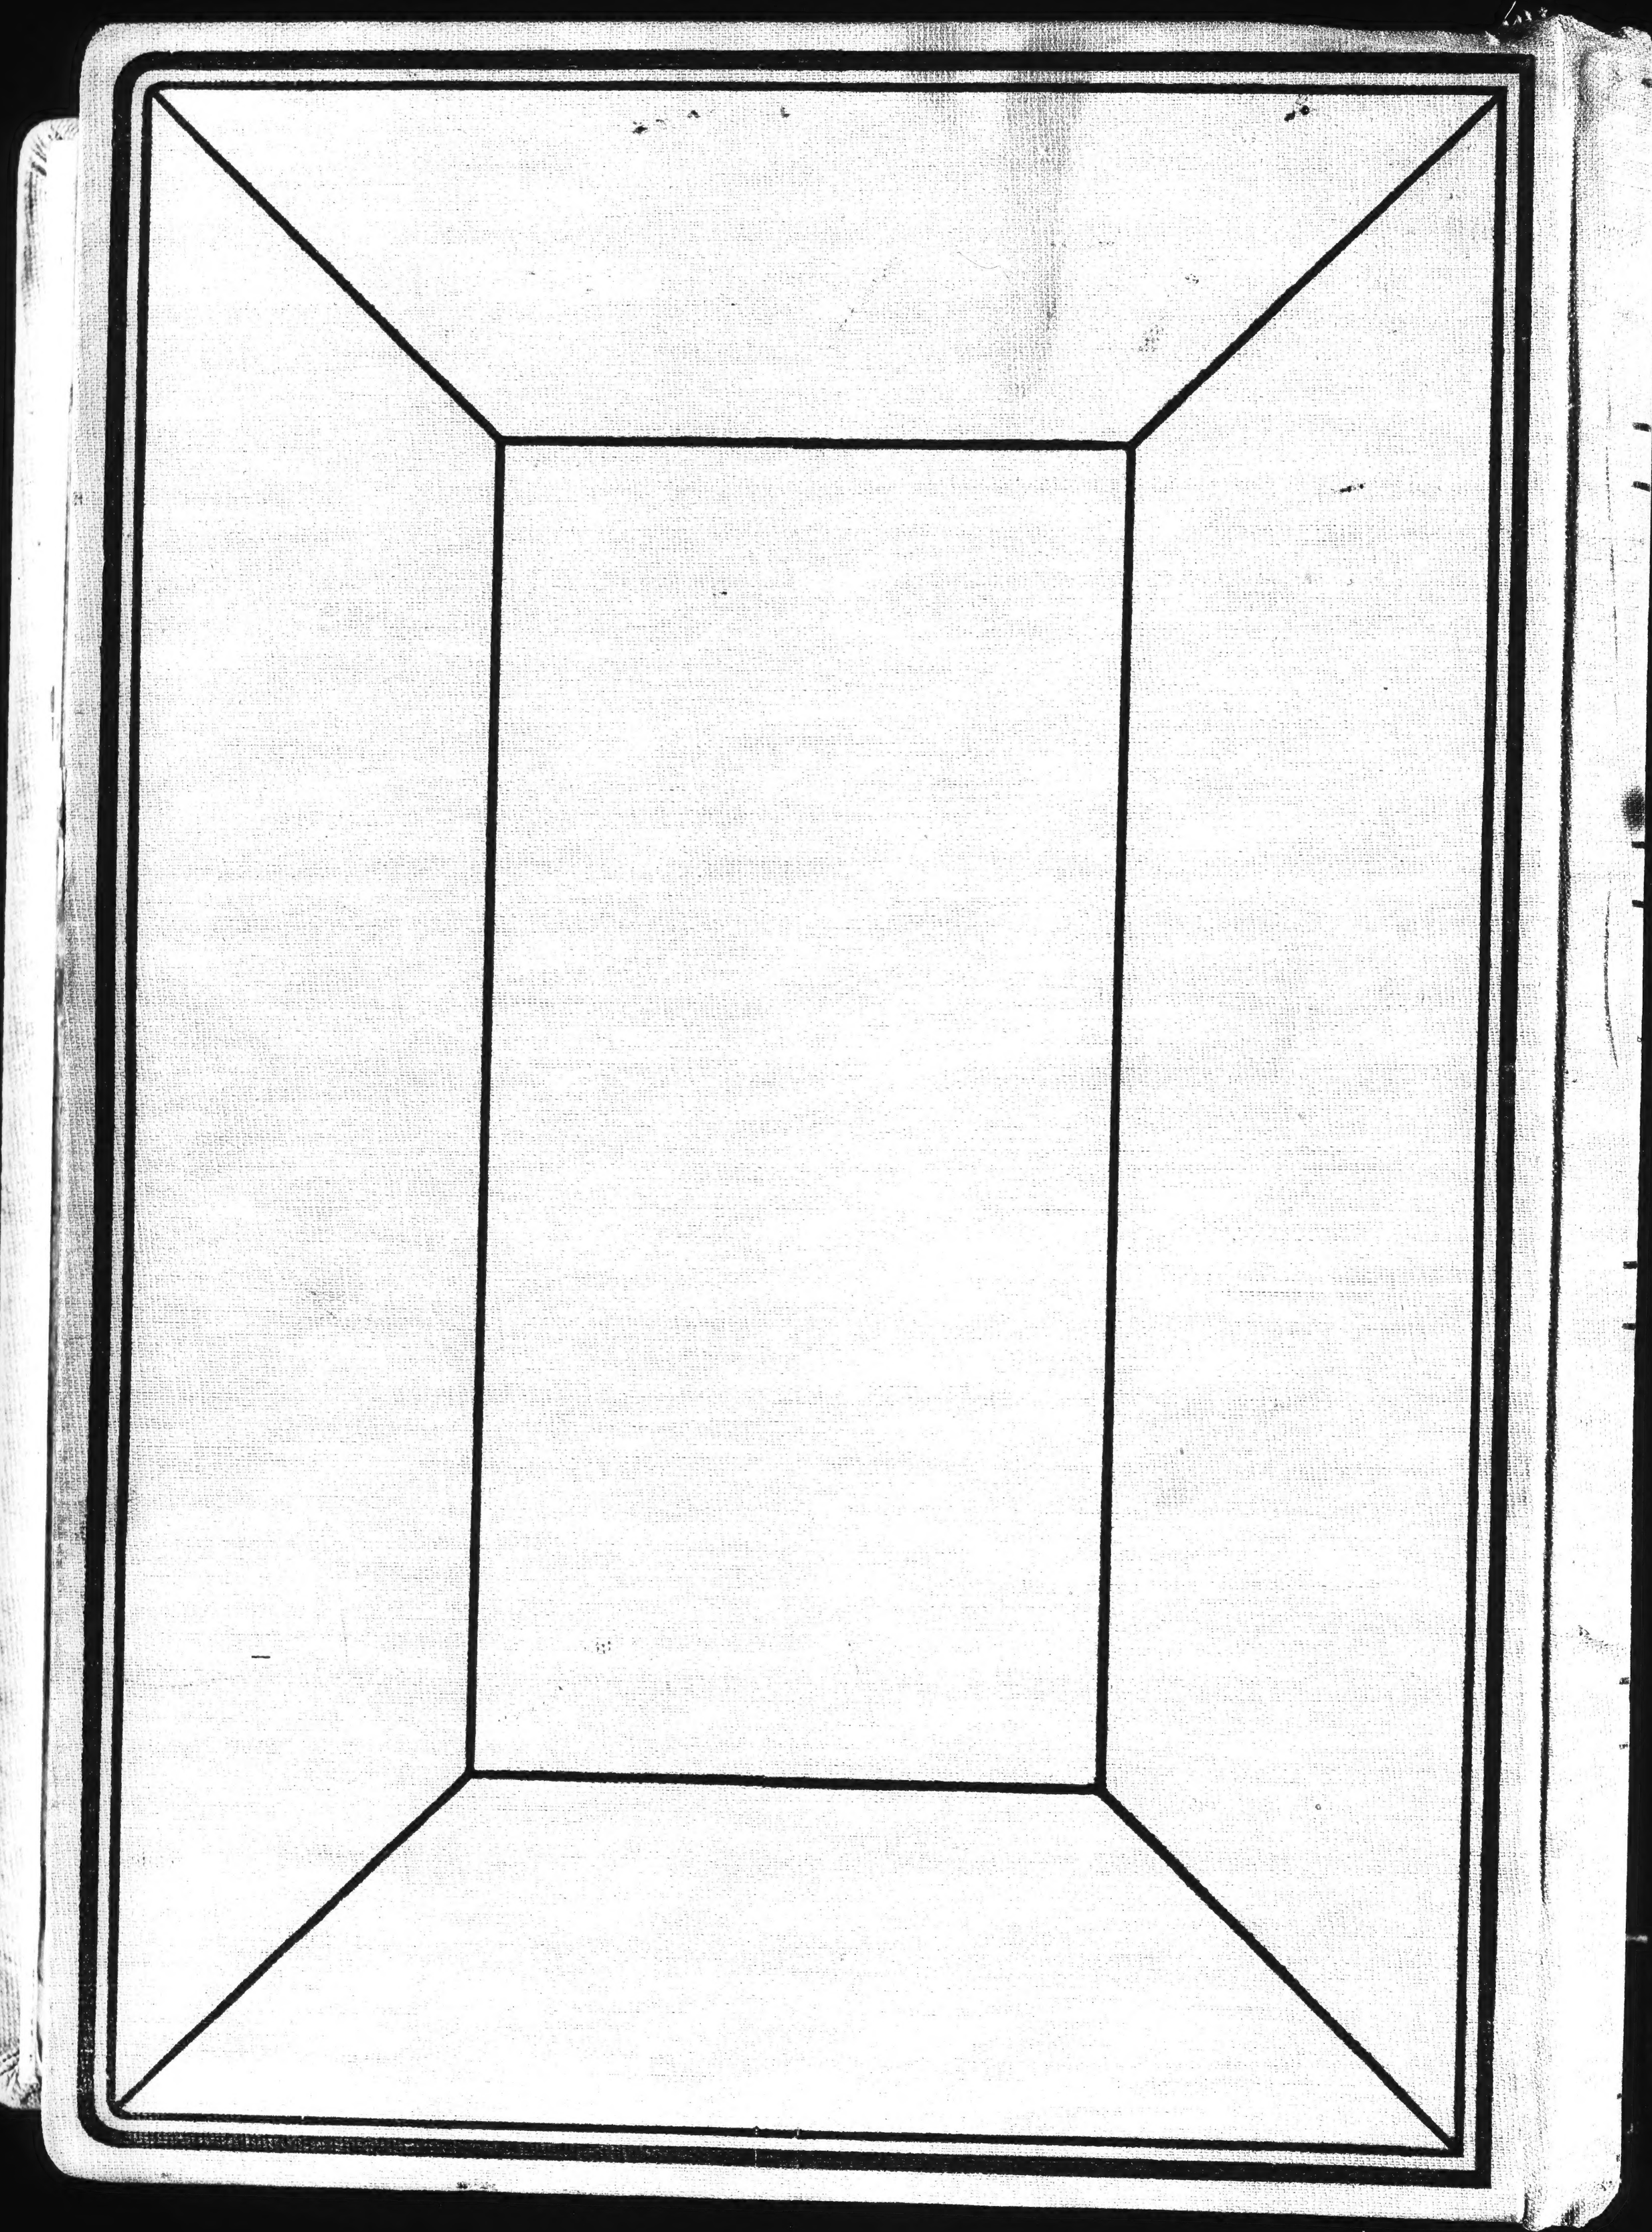


Eagle Eye

By William H. Tague

PEACEFULLY FLAT on the lawn at Tanglewood, this lad was among the hordes that broke records for attendance at the festival. The Berkshire vacation-travel industry as a whole had its best year ever. Business was 20 per cent higher.

Footnotes



END OF VOLUME

END OF REEL

PLEASE

REWIND